

PRESERVING THE LAST OF AMERICA'S GREAT ELK HERD

Thrilling Scenes in Capture of Antlered Band.

CALIFORNIA COWBOYS ROPE WILD BEASTS LIKE STEERS

Bakersfield, Cal., Oct. 28.—Scenes that will never again be witnessed in the Western Hemisphere are now being enacted on the great mesa along the coast range where the only surviving elk outside of parks in the great bands of the antlered herd that once roamed the western plains by thousands are being temporarily taken into captivity to be again liberated within a day or two in an immense enclosure in the Sequoia National park, near the Yosemite valley, some one hundred miles to the north of the present round-up.

Jim Wasy lassoed four, Anione Felis scored again with three, Leo Castro cut the coil over three bucks and Harry Alfaro, Will Strubbed and Ed Turner were successful twice. As quickly as the riatas were over the horns other riders caught the elk from the rear. The animals were thrown to their ground and tied. While this contest lasted three ponies died from exhaustion and excitement. At nightfall five stock cars containing thirty-two elk left Kern for Executive. They will be landed on Monday and moved overland a distance of thirty miles to the government reservation. Of this number, eight were calves, ten cows and twelve more bucks. Dr. Marion of the interior department, will have charge of the unloading, and Harry Stewart of the Nevada land office, made arrangements for the transfer of the animals from the station to the park. During Sunday a large barbecue was held for the comfort of those who took part in the chase.

The round-up will be continued until the entire herd has been captured. Spectators are coming to Bakersfield from all over the state to witness the chase. ABRAHAM SIMON.

THREE LINES FOR THIRTY CENTS

WITH TEN CHANCES FOR FIRST-CLASS BOOKKEEPER FOR ALBUQUERQUE BUSINESS HOUSE.

When a business house needs a book-keeper the need is usually imperative and it is usually necessary to find one quickly. That is probably the reason why many of our employees of this kind always come to the Morning Journal. They generally bring results at once.

Thursday night an Albuquerque business house sent a want ad to the Morning Journal, to run two issues, asking for a book-keeper and someone rather combined. It is a hard combination to find. The ad consisted of three lines, and cost the advertiser thirty cents for the two issues.

Ten replies for thirty cents, is at the rate of 3 cents per reply. If the business house got the book-keeper it wanted out of the ten, was pretty cheap at thirty cents; don't you think so? Of course the business house got the book-keeper, for the ad stopped.

This is just one of a number of cases during the past week in which Morning Journal want ads have done things for people. We believe the want ads can find anything to be found in Albuquerque and New Mexico. We believe the want ads will sell most anything to be sold. We've seen it tried so often, and we've seen it fall so seldom, that we believe in the want ad too, they have just as much reason for it as we have. They get the results.

TUCSON, ARIZONA. W. E. NEAL, Albuquerque, New Mexico. My Dear Sir: Your letter, with notice, has just reached me. I was aware from my policy, that L would be entitled to a "dividend" at this time, but I had no knowledge upon which to base an opinion as to the amount of the dividend. I certainly did not expect that it would be anywhere near the amount you mention ($24.15 cash). This is nearly one-eighth of my annual premium, $204.50. I am more than pleased with this showing. I inclose herewith check for $204.50. The present dividend, and subsequent ones—unless otherwise instructed—will be left to purchase additional insurance. You know we have to protect the wife and babies, even if we have to go without a vacation ourself. I hope to have the pleasure of meeting you here soon. Very sincerely, W. V. WHITMORE.

When the last of their kind had disappeared from mountains, plains, and valleys throughout the west and when it was presumed that so far as California was concerned there were no elk in existence, it was discovered that there were a few survivors ranging loose on the great ranges of the cattle kings, Miller and Lux. In the neighborhood of Button Willow, 25 miles southwest of Bakersfield. Occasionally the vaqueros spied an antlered head among the long grass in some lonely canyon, and at times an elk would be driven in with a band of cattle into one of the great enclosed fields. And here on this great cattle farm the remnants of all that was left of the elk kind in California increased from year to year until now there are between 250 and 500 full grown elk in the hands that roam over the cattle ranges across the mesa lands and in the foothills of the Coast range. They have lost most of their timidity for man and it is not uncommon for them to break into enclosed fields and play havoc with the Egyptian corn and other crops. For some years past the management of the Miller and Lux ranches has been anxious to have the government remove the elk to the National park and the plan now being adopted to move the elk to the Sequoia National Park in the interior department at Washington. Possibly within the next two months the last wild elk will be safely within the enclosure of the park and become in fact the ward of the government.

It was daylight on the morning of October 14th, when the first reconnaissance was made in the lands adjacent to Button Willow. The body of elk had moved away from their usual feeding grounds and the big bucks only were discovered in the high tules adjacent to the slough. These were quickly surrounded. When the bucks discovered that they were discovered, they made strenuous efforts to escape, but they found themselves unable to escape the trained cattlemen who pursued. Manuel Rodriguez, the chief vaquero for the Kern county land grant company, was first to effect a capture. Urging his horse in fast pursuit after the flying buck and with riatas in hand, at a distance of fifty feet, the coil unwaveringly shot from a trained hand and the antlered buck over the head of the antlered buck and the largest was halted, and then other riatas were thrown until his elkship was safely held, just as the wild steer became helpless under the skilled manipulation of the vaquero. Antonio Felis accomplished the preliminary work on the next three and La Salle Quinn put the coil over the fifth. The animals fought savagely while being tied and Horrocks was bucked in the shoulder and suffered a dislocation of that member and was hurried to Bakersfield for medical attention. The subdued elk were taken to the corrals at Lokern, where crates were on hand to receive them and then they were put into a stock car.

The vaqueros secured a good rest and broke camp at daybreak on Sunday, October 14th, for the second day's chase. Each rider was on his favorite best pony and each was prepared to do the hardest riding. Jests were bantered back and forth in Spanish and English as the vaqueros dashed off. With gaudy bandanas flashing from broiled necks, with wide sombrero bucking up and down and with spurs glinting the band made a splendid picture when the sun appeared from behind the hills.

Out from the tall grasses along the coast range first came four immense bucks and within a few minutes afterward, an antlered herd of a hundred walked over the divide and made for the low hills at the west and south. The sight was an inspiring one. The herd took quick note that its liberty was involved for each individual elk was racing for safety toward the higher land. The fifty vaqueros were given an order to form two divergent lines and in this manner they quickly took up the chase. Before nine o'clock twenty-three of the elk had been taken into captivity and the chase was over.

Another died from injuries. When the riders closed in the powerful bulls became infuriated and charged the desperate vaqueros. Here again great skill was displayed by the cowmen.
