

HARMONIZING PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S PROBLEM UP TO CONGRESS TO CALL A CONFERENCE IN WASHINGTON

Other Things Beside Statehood Believed to Call Governor and United States Attorney to the Capital.

M'HARG THOUGHT TO BE WAITING A CONFERENCE

Possible That the Major's Official Duties May Become Even More Arduous in the Immediate Future.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 10.—(Special Dispatch to the Morning Journal.)—The Governor of New Mexico and Major Lewisellyn have been gone but two days. It is being quietly said about the capital that it is not entirely in order to be stated that the chief executive of the territory and the indefatigable representative of the attorney general are on their way to Washington. It is said that there are other things to harmonize than the difference of opinion as to the propriety of the admission of New Mexico to the union, and that Governor Curry and Major Lewisellyn will take up other matters than the advocacy of statehood, while it is intimated that Major Lewisellyn's official duties may become even more arduous than in the strenuous past, when it has been found necessary to send out special assistants to the attorney general of the United States in aid of him in tending to the business of his office in this territory.

It is believed that Assistant Attorney General Ormsby McHarg is awaiting the arrival in Washington of Governor Curry and Major Lewisellyn, and that on their arrival a conference may be held as to the policy to be pursued in New Mexico with reference to the continuation of the investigations which have been on for some months past and which resulted last week in the punishment of two men for attempted jury fixing in connection with indictments brought by the grand jury on evidence secured and presented to the grand jury by the special representatives of the government.

The circumstances surrounding the punishment of the two men for jury fixing seems to justify the statement of Mr. McHarg made not long ago in open court, when he said that the case would be coming to the New Mexico and the recent punishment of the jury fixers would also seem to confirm the idea that Mr. McHarg knew what he was talking about when on the 14th of last month he stated in court that the proceedings of the grand jury are secret, however much an attempt has been made to find them out, and that the grand jury is not to be tampered with, however much an attempt has been made to find them out.

The investigations of the special assistants to the attorney general have now reached a stage where very definite results are being obtained, and it is not considered improbable that Governor Curry may be asked for an opinion as to the propriety of a continuation of the investigations, so that future action may be entirely harmonious. It is not unlikely also that Major Lewisellyn will be called upon to express his views as to the assistance which has been given his department, and possibly an inquiry may be made as to whether he considers his official duties arduous even in the assistance which has been afforded him from headquarters. It has not been uncommon in other districts for the United States attorney to be in charge of such work as is now being done by the special assistants to the attorney general in New Mexico.

Grand Jury to Hold Over

It is now believed that the grand jury will take a recess tomorrow morning until the 15th instant, when it will convene for the further transaction of business which cannot be finished now.

The failure of Mr. McHarg to return to Santa Fe is not causing such general rejoicing in certain quarters about the capital as it did a week ago, when it was currently rumored that Mr. McHarg had been summarily recalled to Washington and that he was to be told to stay at home, to go to Alaska—or somewhere else. It now seems that Mr. McHarg's trip to Washington was hardly in the nature of a summary recall, and that there has been no interruption of his part of his work here. The current rumor that there is to be a conference on matters in which the assistants to the attorney general are concerned, while Governor Curry is in Washington, has caused very general interest here in the outcome of that conference.

RUMOR ANNA GOULD HAS AGAIN WEDDED TITLE

Prince de Sagan Succumbs Count Bond According to Unverified Report.

Paris, Nov. 10.—There is every reason to believe that the report that Mme. Anna Gould, who recently was divorced from Count Bond de Castellane, has been married to Prince de Sagan is untrue. A representative of the Associated Press went today to St. Germain, where the chateau Du Maine, Mme. Gould's country house, is situated. He was told that she was ill and could see no one.

Mme. Gould has been entertaining at the chateau for the past few weeks, and last Friday she gave a luncheon and a large party. The Prince de Sagan has been a constant visitor at the chateau, usually calling there about every ten days.

ITALIAN MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS DEAD

Rome, Nov. 10.—Enrico E. Giannini, the Italian minister of public works, died here today from cancer. He was born in 1851. The Pope inquired daily regarding the condition of the elder during his illness, and yesterday the holy father sent the dying man his benediction. The inquiry was the first made by the Pope from the papacy toward a minister of the king.

TO PRESERVE THE NATION'S RESOURCES

Alarm Sounded by Pinchot Causes Request for a Conference of Western Men to Suggest Safety Plans.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 10.—President Roosevelt is arranging for a conference of delegates from the various states to meet here in Washington to formulate some cohesive program for the conservation of the public resources. Governors of the various states will be requested to send delegates to the congress which will assemble in February after the holiday recess of the federal congress and in ample time to present some proposals to the congress on the subject of legislation on this important subject.

Mr. Roosevelt has been brought forcibly to the conclusion by the reports of the chief of the various scientific bureaus, that the waste and wanton destruction of the natural resources of the country have gone so far that unless they are speedily checked, irreparable damage will result. During the summer this has been the subject of painstaking investigation by every branch of the government. The chief of the forest service, recently Chief Forester Gifford Pinchot, an expert in forestry, sounded an alarm and told the country the timber supply would be destroyed within the next twenty years unless there was immediate reform in the methods of treating the growing timber lands. The public land forests in the west have shown the fact that valuable coal and iron lands have passed into private ownership, while for years it has been the declared policy of the government not to permit the conditions in the coal fields of Pennsylvania and West Virginia to be repeated in the west, where these coal lands will belong in a great measure to the public.

Through congressional action, vast areas of semi-arid lands have been retained through irrigation and large sums of the people's money have been expended in these projects to the great benefit of the localities where such lands are situated; in other instances, by a scheme of assessments devised by the government, similar results have been accomplished and thousands of acres added to the productivity of the western soil.

These, however, are but instances of the greater tasks yet before the government in the general movement to conserve the public resources. For the purpose of taking up the matter with some severity, the president has asked representatives of the different states to meet him in Washington to consider all the questions relating to irrigation, reclamation, public lands and their administration, mineral resources, inland waterways, forest reserves and water supplies. It will be an important gathering and the first comprehensive consideration of a matter that is of vital consequence to the nation.

Judge Henry M. Goldfogle, Representative in Congress from the Ninth New York district, holds from the water level along the East river, and in fact, every man, woman and child from Market St. to the Bowery hills are in his troubles to Representative Goldfogle.

The judge is thoroughly known throughout his district, and a Tammany member for his old-fashioned, but in the Jewish faith, yet so strong, has gained upon the large Irish-American contingent in his belief that no chastening is deemed complete unless the judge is present at not present in Washington. Pitt street, Brown street and Madison street have a plentiful sprinkling of little boys bearing signs, names as Patrick Henry, George Washington, Dennis H. Goldfogle, O'Brien, and the like. All this means, of course, a steady drain on the judge's purse. When his salary was raised from $1,000 to $1,200 at the last session of congress, the judge said to me: "Well, maybe I can afford to stay in congress one or two more terms. I shall deposit that extra $200 as a charitable fund. Between you and me, he added, the reason I am a confirmed bachelor is because the people down my way can say with truth, 'There's a thingy about every block in the judge's district, and, sure, why should he be needin' any family of his own?'"

NORTHERN PACIFIC CUTS PASSENGER SERVICE

More Made Necessary by Inability to Move Enormous Freight Traffic

Helena, Mont., Nov. 10.—The Montana board of railroad commissioners issued an order today permitting the Northern Pacific railroad to withdraw its passenger trains from service for 30 days in order to relieve the congestion of freight traffic. The railroad representative stated that this position is a charitable concession for the movement of freight and that all yards are crowded to the limit.

Scrimo Fire at Dallas.

MILLION DOLLAR FIRE SWEEPS CHILEAN PORT

Santiago, Chile, Nov. 10.—This port has been visited by a fire, the biggest since 1852, which has destroyed some amounting to over $1,000,000. It broke out yesterday and seven and a half blocks were burned over before it was under control. The property destroyed was mostly dwellings of the poor and no less than two thousand people are homeless today. The fire was about one mile distant from the commercial quarter of the city.

WAS GRANTING NEGRO FRANCHISE AN ERROR?

Ironmaster Asks Time to Study Perplexing Question Hurlled at Him by Former Premier of Great Britain.

(By Robert Frederick.)
London, Nov. 9.—Andrew Carnegie is preparing a reply on the question which Lord Rosebery asked him the other day about the opening of the winter session of the "Philosophical Institution," and to which he was unable to give an immediate reply.

Mr. Carnegie had spoken on the necessary limitations in India and the United States and when he had finished Lord Rosebery said in part: "Right at the period of luncheon which you mentioned in India and the United States, have been established with advantage to the negro race?"

"I take it that when they were admitted to the privilege of citizenship 50 per cent were illiterate. I take it that even on your own showing, which may be perhaps, considered optimistic, there are still some 47 per cent illiterate."

"Well, does it not seem to you that you add to the franchise in the generous impulse of the moment, men who were not wholly competent to exercise that high prerogative? There is a danger, I think, when you are dealing with vast masses of voters, of under-rating the individual importance, may I will say, the solemnity of the vote."

"We do some things under high and generous impulse that we afterwards regret, and I am inclined to think that the school in America which does regret that the concession of the suffrage was made."

"You see in the United States an economic nation, some eighty millions of people, inhabiting an almost boundless territory, receiving into its midst yearly every race and nation under the sun. It is the greatest of the various races of the world are being melted together."

"What is to become of them? Will the monogamy of the past be the production of the perfect man of the future, or will the result be a perfectly new type, unknown hitherto to anthropology, that will be the product of widely different races?"

"We look forward to the development of the experiment with almost breathless interest."

Another great art collection has come into the market and its treasures are available for American buyers, who are now recognized as the most important factor in the art market.

The pictures referred to belonged to Lord Ashburton, the young baron who last year married Frances Donnelly, a New York chorus girl. He has sold his incomparable gallery of old masters to a syndicate of art dealers for $7,500,000.

The Ashburton collection was formed nearly 100 years ago by the first baron, and is famous for its masterpieces of the Italian, Spanish and French schools. Among the most famous pictures are "The Wolf Hunt," by Rubens; the "Holy Family," by Raphael; "The Boy with the Basket of Fruit," by Rembrandt; and the "Four Saints," by Van Dyke, an early but brilliant Caravaggio. There are also many fine pictures by Cypri, Steen, Paul Potter, and Van Ostade, Halsman and Rubens.

The recent notification of the Anglo-Russian treaty not only relieved the kind of considerable anxiety in regard to her Indian empire, but it will also in all probability result in the reduction of the strength of the British army in India.

The question of a material reduction for the sake of economy will very shortly be brought up in the cabinet, and it will not pass without strong objection.

It is well known that Lord Kitchener considers that in the new circumstances in India the British garrison should be increased in order that certain districts may be garrisoned without interfering with the sciences of distribution as desired for war. Any proposal from the home authorities for a reduction in the garrison, therefore, would produce a sharp difference of opinion.

At the present moment great difficulty is being experienced in finding the means for the home authorities to pay for an adequate strength. India is also to be asked to pay $15,000,000 additional towards the cost of the British garrison.

It is regarded as in every way likely that the discussion of military measures in India will once more become acute if the government proposes for a reduction in the garrison with a demand for increased payments.

With the prices of all kinds of provisions having risen far above those of last year, the bakeries are rejoicing because bread is to be bought cheaper than ever.

The reason is that a great war has broken out in the bakery trade, not because the bakers are anxious to please the poor, but because the big bakeries want to force the independent bakers out of business, and then, of course, prices will go up.

The position is so serious that the small retailers from whom the majority of Londoners purchase their bread consider that the government should interfere. It is urged that even if the government should not control the price of bread so as to secure a fair profit to the retailer, it should at least issue a standard for the quality of the quarter and half-quarter loaf. At present the law only provides that bread must be sold by weight. There is no fixed standard for the quarters and half-quarters loaf, though they are popularly supposed to represent four pounds and two pounds, respectively.

At a recent meeting of the Tariff Reform League, Lord Ridley spoke very interestingly on the danger of socialism.

"We want to fight socialism," he said, "by the opening of the factory and the views of the socialist. But if I read things right, the working classes of England are not concerned so much with the theoretical and economic doctrines of the socialist as with the various improvements in their position which they desire, many of which improvements are far removed from socialism, but which are advocated heartily and unanimously by socialist leaders."

The working class of England are not socialists, and I for one refuse to regard this socialist movement as a class war unless the older political parties of the country fall in with the conception of the situation. The British working man does not want to divide up everybody's property, including his own. He does not want to destroy family life or to deny the authority of the church.

He does not care particularly for the nationalization of railways, and all the means of production, provided he is assured of a reasonable standard of living. He does not want the product of British working men sold too readily to fight against purely socialist doctrines.

English working men are disatisfied with things as they are, and the strength of the socialist writer lies in the fact that socialism is the product of economic conditions which should be the business of the unionist party to alter.

King Edward has taken an unusual step in granting a distinction to Miss Nan Herbert, a prominent theosophist, who is closely associated with Mrs. Katherine Tingley, the "Pippie Lotta Mother," in her scheme to establish a theosophical school in England. The official London Gazette publishes the right of Miss Herbert to call herself henceforth "the Honourable Mrs. Nan Herbert."

Miss Herbert's mother was a sister of the late Earl Cowper and Baron Lucas, and would, if she survived her brother, have succeeded to the barony. The latter title did not become extinct. Thus Mrs. Herbert would have been Baroness Lucas in her own right, and her daughter would therefore bear the prefix "Lady."

The case now announced that the king has declared that Miss Herbert shall "have, hold and enjoy the same title, rank, place, pre-eminence and precedence as her mother had succeeded to the title of Baroness Lucas."

Some sensation was caused last summer by the announcement that Miss Herbert had given her father's seat in the New Forest, "Old House," to Mrs. Tingley as a school for training children as theosophists.

PIE EATERS SCARE THE PEOPLE OF LAS VEGAS

CURIOUS SERIES OF RESULTLESS ROBBERIES

McClannahan Chased Harmless Intruder Who Was Engaged in Devouring a Pumpkin Pie.

(Special Dispatch to the Morning Journal.)

Las Vegas, N. M., Nov. 10.—Las Vegas is having a series of burglar scares. About every night homes are entered and the inmates badly scared, but the robbers thus far do not appear to have stolen anything. Last night two homes were entered early in the evening at the residence of C. McClannahan two young ladies were alone in the home until about 9 o'clock when the gentleman returned. He happened to see the door open, he thought he heard a noise in the kitchen, investigating he saw a man engaged in devouring a pumpkin pie.

The intruder ran with McClannahan himself. The latter apparently did not know his own premises as well as the thief, as he ran full tilt into a pie-throwing line and almost succeeded in hitting himself. The appropriate nature of this tale would, of course, require that the thief get hung up on the clothes line, but the actors in the incident unfortunately failed to consider the opportunities for creating an artistic story.

A few moments after the McClannahan incident, a man entered the home of Mrs. Michaels, a few blocks away. Mrs. Michaels, who had retired, heard the door open, but as her husband, who is manager of the West End Union office, was out about that time, she thought nothing of it until happening to open her eyes she was horrified to observe a strange man with his hands on the bed.

Mrs. Michaels is a little body, but the size of her screams aroused the neighborhood and sent the intruder away at top speed. The lady has been quite seriously ill as a result of the scary experience.

Wells Fargo Backs Down.

The united action of the Las Vegas business men and citizens in declaring a boycott on the Wells-Fargo company until it should accept clearing certificates in payment for express charges has had the desired effect. Superintendent McKenzie, who gave the order not to accept the certificates, explains that he did not understand the situation at the time the order was issued.

Las Vegas is still doing its business on clearing house certificates, but the action in improving on the local banks have received considerable amounts of silver.
