'CHAN GANG' IS GIVING VALUABLE LABOR TO CITY

Jail Prisoners Put in 380 Hours of Work on Streets in Ten Days, According to Chairman Tingley's Report.

The value to the city of prisoner labor on streets is the subject of a report prepared by Alderman Clyde Tingley, chairman of the street committee. The report covers a ten-day period, ending May 12. In this time jail prisoners put in 380 hours at work on streets. This amount of labor would have cost the city $66.50 at the regular scale. All it actually cost the city was meals for the prisoners. Chief Galusha, of the police department, and Street Chairman Tingley are parties to an entente cordiale that has to do with the "chain gang" system. Each has a motive. Chairman Tingley, of course, wants to get as much work on the streets as he can and stay within the city's limited means for this work. While Chief Galusha, too, wants good streets he also wishes to make jail sentences as unattractive as possible to the idle but not rich. When the news drifts east and west along the Santa Fe line that a jail sentence in Albuquerque means work, the number of weary ones coming here is likely to drop off. But then Chief Galusha should worry.

Worked Sixty-five Blocks. Chief Galusha has made J. L. Guber street foreman, a special guard to see that jail prisoners do the limit that Judge McClellan assesses. Since Guber has been given police authority, the number of escapes from the street gang has been few. Alderman Tingley's report shows other work done on the streets in the ten-day period. Twenty-six blocks were graded by the machines. This work was distributed as follows: Nine on South Edith, six on New York, four on North Second, seven on North Third. Blocks graded. Three on East Hazeline, one on East Silver. Blocks graded by machine: Eleven on Tijeras, two on North Ninth, four on North Tenth, nine on South Third, two on Hazeline, seven on North Third. Two hundred and seven loads of gravel were hauled and spread on streets for patching and building. This was an average of 29.7 loads a day. This work was done in addition to the regular street work, such as sprinkling, cleaning dumps and other jobs calling for men and wagons.

SPECIAL WAITS WHILE PRESIDENT VISITS Y. M. C. A.

E. P. Ripley Pleased With Albuquerque's New Association Building; on Way to Summer Headquarters.

A special train stood in front of the Alvarado hotel late night while E. P. Ripley, president of the Santa Fe railway, went through the new Y. M. C. A. building. At the time the special was to have left Mr. Ripley was not there. Mr. Ripley was then visiting the Y. M. C. A. building. The delay was only several minutes, however. The Y. M. C. A. was lighted from the first floor to the top in anticipation of a visit by Mr. Ripley. Capt. W. C. Reel, general counsel in New Mexico for the Santa Fe railway, took Mr. Ripley to the building. The president was taken through the building, which so far has been opened only for inspection and not for association purposes. He was pleased with it. The special, bringing Mr. Ripley and other railway officials from Silver City, arrived here at 8:20 o'clock and remained here about fifty minutes. The train was made up of five official cars. In the party, besides Mr. and Mrs. Ripley, were Vice President W. B. Storey, of Chicago, General Manager Fred C. Fox, of Amarillo, and General Superintendent C. H. Bristol, of La Junta. Superintendent E. L. Myers, of Las Vegas, joined the party here. The train went to Domingo last night, remaining there for the remainder of the night. Mr. Ripley is on his way to Chicago, making his annual trip from his winter headquarters at Pasadena, Calif., to summer headquarters at Chicago.

LIGHTNING ERRATIC IN STARTING FIRES ON NATIONAL FORESTS. The district forester at this point has just compiled some very curious figures showing the erratic behavior of lightning in starting forest fires. Yearly records going back as far as 1908 show that out of every 100 fires in the national forests of Arizona and New Mexico, forty originate from lightning. This general percentage of lightning fires is well known to foresters, says District Forester Redding, but it is surprising how widely the percentage varies with different localities. In northern and central Arizona, for instance, the proportion of lightning fires runs up to 70 per cent, while in the Manzano forest near Albuquerque only 1 per cent of the fires are started by lightning. There is no readily apparent rhyme or reason in its behavior. In general, those forests bearing big timber and lots of grass seem to suffer worst, but a notable exception occurs in southern Arizona, where the proportion runs from 40 to 50 per cent in spite of the timber averaging smaller and the grass somewhat sparser than elsewhere.

Forest officers state that the accumulation of figures of this kind is gradually adding very materially to the efficiency of their fire prevention system. It enables them to state the fire hazard on each forest in accurate figures instead of in words, and to calculate the risks mathematically. Just as an insurance company does. This in turn makes possible a really intelligent and economical distribution of men and funds for fire prevention.
