

THE BALL PLAYERS' TRUST.

The Organization Amusing Permissible... The base ball trust, originated by the league brotherhood, is pretty sure to give trouble next season. So far it has not spread to the association, chiefly for the reason that there is no players' brotherhood in the organization, but if the scheme is a go in the league it is sure to be adopted.

The new organization is to be called the United Business Association, and is to be made up of Brooklyn, Buffalo, Chicago, New York, Boston, Pittsburgh, Cleveland and Philadelphia. The Indianapolis team is to be transferred to Brooklyn where, it is said, the association is unpopular, and the Washington club is to Buffalo. Deacon White and Jack Rowe are to be the high moguls there.

In each city local capitalists are to operate the teams owned and financed by the brotherhood, giving a bond of $25,000 for the performance of their part of the work. Albert L. Johnson is the Cleveland capitalist, and his active participation in the deal as a missionary caused him to be mistaken for its national head. It has no national head at this time out of the officers of the brotherhood. The association's officials are to be elected this fall.

The players are guaranteed their salaries at the 1899 rate for 1899 and a share of the profits. All expenses and receipts are to be pooled for the general benefit, and gate receipts divided equally between the clubs.

The first $10,000 profits is to go into prizes to be distributed among the clubs as playing prizes, $5,000 to first, $2,500 to second, $1,500 to third and $1,000 to fourth. Of the first $80,000 after this $10,000 goes to the capitalists, $10,000 to those of each club. The next $80,000 goes to the players and all the profits are pooled half and half. Each player shares equally with the others.

Each club is to be governed by a board made up of eight men, four capitalists and four players, and the active body by a senate of sixteen, each club having two representatives, one a player and the other a capitalist. Each club is stocked for $20,000, half of which can be held by the players. The $20,000 is in 200 shares of $100 each. No known gamblers are allowed to hold stock. Of course the classification and the rules go with the present management, but the 1899 classification figures are taken as the basis for 1899.

The association is to make and sell its own ball. Nearly all the work of rearing the fabric as it stands to-day has been done at Cleveland this summer. A. L. Johnson has done a fair share of the work and Captain Faatz of the Cleveland has been in with it. So has John Ward and Tim Keefe. Johnson's room, near the Hollenden hotel on Bond street, was the rendezvous. Attorney L. A. Russell, Johnson's lawyer, drew up most of the papers. When finished they were sent to each league club and signed by the players. Every group but those in Washington have signed the agreement. Anson, Burns and Williamson have not signed the Chicago agreement.

Among the players who are already on the association's books as stockholders are Keefe and Ward of New York; Brothers and Clarkson of Boston; Zimmer and Faatz of Cleveland; White and Myers, Buffalo; Dunlap and Hanlon, Pittsburg. By this time the Washington players may have signed the agreement. Cleveland has the first to complete its list. All the 15 men are on the agreement and their plan is to engage Tom Loftus to manage them. Competent men will be engaged for umpires.

In a recent interview President Nick Young of the National league, was asked: "Do you believe there will be a fight between the players and the league?" was asked.

"Frankly, I do not. I do not believe the men will enter into any combination likely to result in an open war. They should it would not affect the stability of the league. There will be a league next season whether these men go or not. There are hundreds of undeveloped players throughout the country who would form the clubs, and make the pennant race just as interesting as it is at present."

"But would you not say that the old favorites, no matter what association they were in?"

"The public would undoubtedly go to see the best ball of the year, and the cautious and diplomatic answer of Mr. Young. 'The ones who pay for amusement would have the right to say which they would patronize. It would, on the whole, resolve itself into a fight for existence, and with cheaper players, a reduced admission price would present itself. Let me tell you, although there seems to be a parallel case; for in that only a few of the men left, but if the published accounts of this plan are true it involves all. In that case there would be no other resort left the league but to fight them. The league would have in such a fight brains behind it, plenty of money and what is more essential than all, years of experience. But as I said before, I don't believe there will be a rupture. The league committee, consisting of Messrs. Day, Spalding and Roach, will hold a conference with a committee from the brotherhood some time before the annual meeting of the league in November. I believe all differences will be satisfactorily adjusted."

Footpads at Work.

From the St. Louis Republic. No one who has not visited the country recently and talked with the people can realize the state of terror they are in over the depredations of footpads on the highways. They give no outward evidence of their uneasiness, and talk but little except when addressed on the subject, yet there is hardly a citizen now who ventures on the road after dark without being armed and ready to shoot at the snap of a finger. It is, in fact, dangerous to walk along the roads after dark, for fear of being taken for footpads, and those who do so must be very circumspect in their actions if they regard personal safety. This is not to be wondered at when it is considered that the frequent robberies reported are not more than half of what have occurred in the county. Since January 1 it is safe to say there have been 75 cases of highway robberies and burglaries in the county, and strange to say, only one of the depredations has so far been caught, and that was last week, when the citizens of Fern Ridge captured the negro Griffin, who robbed near Linze on the Clayton road. While the officers are as vigilant as it is possible for them to be, they are too few in number to cover the extensive territory in which the footpads operate, and, besides, their efforts are not seconded by the citizens as they should be. In a number of cases no report at all has been made to the officers and they have only heard of them by common report.

Some New Society Dances.

"La Reve, the cadet gait, the imperial gavotte and military schottische quadrille will be favorite dances next winter," says an instructor in the tepalchoco art. "They are all round dances. La Reve, or the Dream, as it is called in English, will be danced to schottische music, the cadet gait to waltz music, the imperial gavotte to four-four time, and the military schottische, which is intricate and of new and novel figures, will be danced to the schottische music."

"Decidedly. They will be introduced in many of the select dancing parties. They are all very handsome figures. They are here not to be for military schottische in existence for some time?"

"Something that has been called by that name, but only about one person in 50 knows how to execute the steps correctly."

"What will be the dances of the upper tenor this winter?"

"The dances, of course, take precedence. It will always have its place among the society dances. Then there will be the military schottische, glide and the diagonal waltz, the Saratoga lancers, the prairie queen and the waltz quadrille. These will be the leading dances this winter."

SCUFFLE AT THE TEMPLE DOOR.

Benjamin Herzog Breaks an Umbrella on the Head of the Sexton's Son. From the New York Sun.

On Jewish holidays the directors of the Temple Emanuel-EI do not allow strangers to enter, as every new owner is expected to be there, and the unsold pews are always leased weeks ahead for the occasion by visitors from all over the country.

Emanuel Kakeles, the son of the sexton, was standing at one of the front gates yesterday morning, keeping a sharp eye on all who entered. After the services had begun he stepped forward with a cane and his brother, of 204 East Eighty-sixth street, attempted to pass Kakeles at his gate.

"Kakeles wouldn't have it, and said that only members could enter."

"My mother's a member," cried Benjamin Herzog, "and you can't keep me out. I've got to see her on particular business."

"Kakeles pushed him back. Finally he grasped Benjamin's collar to hustle him out upon the sidewalk. Benjamin raised his umbrella and brought it down with a thwack on Kakeles' head. Another blow across the sexton's face came down with force enough to break the stick of the umbrella."

"Kakeles let go and Herzog thought it best to clear out. He ran up Fifth avenue just as several excited members of the congregation were about to nab him. Policeman Fenney arrested him after a chase of a few blocks."

At the Yorkville court Herzog, who said he was an auctioneer, declared that he had struck Kakeles in self defense, while Kakeles had him by the collar. Herzog was held in $300 bail for assault.

City Journalists.

From the Laramie Boomerang. We have noticed for some time past, with feelings akin to righteous resentment, that the self-styled humorous papers of the country have attempted to amuse their readers by publishing alleged extracts from alleged country newspapers.

The country newspaper is not always the perfection of the journalistic art, but the city paper also has its peculiar features, and we trust we may be pardoned for making the following extracts from some of our city exchanges:

"Close the saloons." "Smash the gang. It would look better flat."

"Just this city always be ruled by hoodlums?" "The vile, venal and vicious Thieves' Apologist is rushing to the defense of the public robbers."

"If the voters were to take a half dozen convicts out of the penitentiary and substitute them for the members of the city council the taxpayers would have a better chance to get value received for what they pay out."

"An employe of this paper was arrested on suspicion by an ignorant and officious policeman last night. Such are the insults that the force constantly subjects reputable citizens to. The police must go."

"We wonder why the mayor chugs and stunts in with gamblers and thugs and hold himself as a constant menace to law and order?"

"Young Mr. Pitchfork, who operates the esteemed Razzle-Dazzle, is striving valiantly to attract attention. We would suggest that in order to be successful he ought to go over Niagara Falls in a barrel."

A Romance from Ragusa.

Vienna dispatch to the London Telegraph. A trial involving circumstances of an exceptionally romantic character will come before the tribunal of Ragusa next month. About twenty years ago a peasant of the neighborhood of Ragusa, being no longer able to support his wife, emigrated to the United States, leaving his better half in charge of the village priest.

From the first luck smiled on him, and he was able to send the priest 50 florins a month for his wife. He visited Paris, Vienna, Trieste and finally Ragusa. On landing at the harbor a beggar woman accosted him and asked for alms. They recognized each other simultaneously. The beggar woman was his wife, who had believed to have been dead several years! The priest has been arrested and will be tried in September, when in all probability the second marriage will be annulled.

Elixir.

From Judge. There was a very ancient maid, Whose charms had faded and decayed, Declared she wouldn't be afraid, To try, for luck, that modern elixir!

The which she promptly did, and oh! Unless you knew you wouldn't know That anything could change her so, And give her such a youthful glow, Elixir!

It made her young, it made her sweet; It brought a lover to her feet, Who, unsuspecting of a cheat, Pronounced her most uncommon neat, Elixir!

And they were wed—alas, the day! For stimulation wore away; And when her charms refused to stay, So mad it made her lord, they say, Elixir!

A Bull at Base Ball.

The Black Sea Angry. LONDON, Oct. 2.—A hurricane is raging in the Black sea. A large number of Turkish vessels are wrecked, and great loss of life is reported.

A snorting, howling bull dashed headlong into the diamond, while two of Bristol's amateur ball nine, the Wood streets and the Bath streets, were waging conflict in a vacant lot on the outskirts of that town last Monday. Down the lane that rejoices in the euphonious title of Pig alley the animal came cawing at an awful rate of speed, and, with one triumphant rush of his restless fly brush, leaped over a five bar fence right into the midst of the startled athletes.

With a sniff and a roar the irate beast made a bold plunge for Al Lawson, the unhappy umpire, who had just made a decision at first base that displeased his bullship.

Then, as the bull beheld his prey aiming at a distant tree trunk, he turned his attention to the pugnacious shortstop, Arthur Fine, pausing for a few moments to pay his compliments to the covering first baseman, Arthur Wright, who had, in a momentary fit of devotion, turned his horn at Second Baseman George Shark, whose spindle shanks had got tangled up in a double bow-knot in their endeavor to scale the high fence in limited express time.

The Bath street boys, who had been enjoying their innings, had likewise made a lasty exit from the scene of conflict. Pitcher Tom McNeill mounted a tall haystack, slim Johnny Wright crawled behind a fence rail, and the Highland made tracks for the railroad station.

Blue-shirted, red-capped, white-faced lads were fleeing in all directions with the wings of the wind which gayly dressed maidens that had hugged the fence in lieu of a grand stand fled shrieking into a near bottling establishment.

Seen in progress an hour, Benjamin Herzog and his brother, of 204 East Eighty-sixth street, attempted to pass Kakeles at his gate. "Kakeles wouldn't have it, and said that only members could enter."

"My mother's a member," cried Benjamin Herzog, "and you can't keep me out. I've got to see her on particular business."

"Kakeles pushed him back. Finally he grasped Benjamin's collar to hustle him out upon the sidewalk. Benjamin raised his umbrella and brought it down with a thwack on Kakeles' head. Another blow across the sexton's face came down with force enough to break the stick of the umbrella."

"Kakeles let go and Herzog thought it best to clear out. He ran up Fifth avenue just as several excited members of the congregation were about to nab him. Policeman Fenney arrested him after a chase of a few blocks."

At the Yorkville court Herzog, who said he was an auctioneer, declared that he had struck Kakeles in self defense, while Kakeles had him by the collar. Herzog was held in $300 bail for assault.
