

TURF GOSSIP.

From the spirit of the Times. There has been a story current to the effect that the Dwyer Brothers had signed Isaac Murphy to ride in the "red and blue" jacket of Brooklyn next season. The rumor has no foundation, as we were informed upon what we consider excellent authority. While the Dwyers have a very high opinion of Murphy as a horseman, and may yet secure his services, there has been no contract signed. Murphy will not ride as frequently as he has, for the simple reason that he has arrived at that age when it is not so easy a matter to get a lot of flesh as in the case of a younger man. Besides, he is understood to be in comfortable circumstances, and is not compelled to go through such exhausting ordeals.

Mr. Matt Allen, the trainer of Senator Hearst's stable, departed last week for a visit to Nashville, where he contemplates remaining for some time. The stable at "oney island" is doing admirably, and is in charge of Jim Thompson, the second trainer, who was so long with Rowe, and who will look after the horses in Allen's absence.

Mr. Haggin's stable has retired into winter quarters. The stable would have run at Linden had the meeting not been abandoned. That having been done, there was nothing left the stable but to retire. It has had a very good season, Salvador having taken all the nice plums in the way of 3-year-old stakes, except the Omaha, and Fresno has won the lion's share of the all-aged events. Fresno was a failure and so were the 2-year-olds.

Mr. E. Haines, of Owen Sound, Canada, has recently imported the following thoroughbreds from England: Broodmare by Confederate, dam Halloween; in foal to Lennox Love, he by Scottish Chief; broodmare by Sterling, dam Pistole; by The Nabob; in foal to Ocean Wave; brown filly by Sir Bevis, dam Georgia, by Confederate; 2d dam Halloween; bay filly by Cyprus, dam Zenobia; by Sterling; 3d dam and bay colts by Bob Dayrell, dam Staff of Life, by Brown Bread; 2d dam Lady Highthorn.

Mr. Pierre Lorillard has purchased in England, of Tom Cannon, the bay horse Saker Prince, foal 1889, by Albert Victor, dam Hermita; 2d dam Affection, by Lifeboat; 3d dam Rose d'Amore, by Wild Dayrell. He was quite a fair race-horse. As a two-year-old he started eight times and won twice—the Fair Oaks Plate and Royal Plate. At three he started in three races, without winning, but he started six times, winning once. At five he started eleven times, winning twice—the royal plate at Sandown, and divided the Lancashire plate with Kingston. At six years old he started eight times, and won twice—the Lewes handicap and the Cambridgeshire, with 105 lbs. At seven years old he started three times and won once—the Portland stakes, one mile, at Doncaster. Albert Victor, his sire, ran second to Favonius in the derby of 1871, and was a brother to George Frederick, by Marsyas, dam Princess of Wales, by Stockwell.

The Overland Park association, of Denver, Col., announces its dates for the spring meeting of 1890, which will be on May 30 to June 7. S. McMillan has recently received a letter from Copeland, in which he says that he has put tips on the fast colt Governor Stanford, and that he has driven him with them on quarters in 32 1/2 seconds. He also says that the forty-year-old M. Fawcett, by Electioneer, dam by A. W. Richmond, 2d dam by Bald Chief, is equally fast.

A little group of men in the Hoffman house barroom were discussing the threatened advance in the price of champagne, says the New York Sun, when one of them, an ex-San Franciscan, who spent a good many years on the Pacific coast, said:

"When Senator Sharon's daughter Flora was married to Sir Thomas Heskette ten years ago the scenes in their country house at Belmont, where the wedding took place, would have made the eyes of the people who think an increase of 50 cents a bottle will affect the sale of champagne pop out of their heads. To say that champagne flowed like water would be as weak as it would be conventional. There was a tidal wave of it. Some of the young men had dozens of bottles carried into an empty room, and there they played ninepins with them until the floor was so covered with broken glass and sloppy with champagne that they couldn't stay there any longer.

"And then there is Billy Boyd, who made nobody has ever found out how much money in his fraudulent Chinese certificate business. Some of his doings surprised even the champagne blase circles of the Pacific coast. For several months during his giddy career, when he had more money than he could use in any other way, he tried a daily champagne bath. It wasn't an economical sponge bath from a quart of liquid in a wash bowl, either. His was a full tub, half-full of the sparkling stuff, and the festive Billy, who thought nothing was too good for him, jumped in and kicked about in it as if it had been so much croton."

An Observing Professional. "It's no wonder that robbers go out to rob," observed a tramp the other day to a New York Sun man, as he (the tramp) sat on a salt barrel in front of a grocery on West street. "Any man with an ounce of brains can make a sure thing of it."

"Why it's this way: While I never stole a cent's worth in all my life, I've been tempted a thousand times. Let me give you the lay of the average farm house. There is always 50 cents on the kitchen clock shelf to buy notions of the kind. If the farmer is working his silver watch-hangs on a nail just to the right of the shelf. In the bedroom off the sitting room you'll find all the jewelry. It's always kept in the left-hand corner of the bottom bureau-drawer."

"How do you know?" "You never mind. The deeds and other papers are in a tin under the bed. If there's any sum of money above $10 in the house it's in a baking-powder can on the top shelf of the pantry. No farmer goes to bed with over $1 or $2 in his pocket. He lays his pants on a chair at the foot of the bed and they can always be reached from the window. The key to the barn hangs on a nail over the kitchen sink, and the lantern always hangs in the cellar-way."

"You are a close observer, my friend." "Well, perhaps, but no more than the rest of the boys. I can go through the average farm house at midnight and never touch a chair nor squeak a door, and I'll find things just where I have told you they were kept."
