

LATE NEWS FROM BUTTE

Thanksgiving Incidents Before Judge Newkirk in Police Court.

The Miners' Union Adopts Resolutions on the Death of the Victims of the St. Lawrence Fire--Other Notes and Gossip.

Special Correspondence of the Standard. BUTTE, Nov. 29.--Thanksgiving day passed off quietly in Butte. A few remarks by getting very drunk. Thanksgiving services in the churches were well attended. The crowd at the opera house in the evening was enormous.

An incident which illustrates the goodness of Judge Newkirk's heart came under the notice of the STANDARD reporter on Wednesday evening. Several of the three hundred men who paid $2.00 a piece to the mauling McCandless to procure them a job were known and were given money. The big-hearted justice was passing a gang of poorly dressed and weary looking men before him. He stopped and asked: "Boys, what's wrong?" "Well, vagrancy and were given ten days to leave the town. They created a great deal of amusement by their alacrity in shambling out of the court room.

Recognizing that though divided by race, nationality and belief, we are still members of the one great family of humanity, tied by the bonds of common brotherhood, and therefore, while no kinship may exist between us save that which binds all people and all nations in the relationship we desire to raise our voices individually and collectively in behalf of the memory of those brave and noble men who gave their lives for others at that awful calamity which befell our community on that memorable day, Nov. 23.

With the veneration and respect for the memory of true heroes and benefactors which swells from the hearts of all men regardless of race, nationality, we desire to pay our tribute to the memory of men who, although in humble walks of life, dared all with no motive save the noble impulses of brave and noble natures. Unlike the heroes made famous in history and the legends of stirring nations, and unlike those heroes whose mission was to destroy life and wreck families, they were actuated by nobler impulses and more generous motives. They dared death and bravely met it nobly in the vain hope that by doing so others might be saved from a horrible fate. With their eyes fixed on the reward, they obeyed the dictates of brave and generous hearts and they might have been rich in money, sorrow and heartache they entered the gloomy caverns far below them, fully aware that to do so was to court death and meet it in its most horrible form. That they failed should not detract from the halo of glory which encircles their death. They were all true heroes, and as such their praises should be sung, not as a memory of a calamity, but as a stimulus to a virtue.

To enable us who have shared with them in the dangers which at all times surround those of our calling, to pay our last respects and honors to their memory, we respectfully request the superintendents of all mines in and about Butte to close down for one day, in the event of rain, the day and meet it in its most horrible form. That they failed should not detract from the halo of glory which encircles their death. They were all true heroes, and as such their praises should be sung, not as a memory of a calamity, but as a stimulus to a virtue.

The Butte Miners' Union have adopted the following resolution, which will be submitted to the mining superintendents and foremen of the mines in and about Butte:

THE JURY DISAGREED.

Special Correspondence of the Standard.

BUTTE, Nov. 29.--Chas. Daniels, the young man arrested Wednesday evening on a charge of having defrauded a number of workmen out of $2.00 a piece by agreeing to furnish them with employment, was before Judge Newkirk today. Chas. O'Donnell and Wm. Grice appeared for Daniels and as the workmen who had been victimized were without money and therefore unable to pay a lawyer Mr. Ed. S. Booth generously agreed to prosecute the case. Mr. Booth had an important engagement in Butte but cancelled it in order that he might defend the men's interests. Mr. O'Donnell on behalf of Daniels demanded a jury. A venire was issued accordingly and made returnable forthwith and in a very short time six men were sworn in as jurors. Mr. J. A. Lewis, general agent for the "National Employment Bureau" had not made or attempted to make any arrangements with his railroad for transportation of men to Bear River, Utah, or any other place.

John Wilson said the prisoner, Chas. Daniels, promised him a job of work at Bear River if he would describe the man to the "National Employment Bureau" of which Daniels was clerk. Daniels told witness that the train to carry the men to Utah would leave on Thursday morning at 8 o'clock. The witness had heard Daniels say that he knew that McCandless, who was proprietor of the "Bureau," was deceiving the men from whom he was taking money on the promise of securing them employment. The witness had also heard Daniels admit that he knew when he (Daniels) was taking the men's money that the agreement made with McCandless was a fraud and that he was deceiving the men who were seeking employment. The witness knew that there was work to be obtained at Bear River, but he found that Daniels and the men were conducting the "National Employment Bureau" had no authority to employ men for the Bear River work, and had no money to carry out the application fee of $2. The witness produced a receipt which he had received from Daniels upon paying the application fee of $2. Daniels and the men were conducting the "National Employment Bureau" had no authority to employ men for the Bear River work, and had no money to carry out the application fee of $2. The witness produced a receipt which he had received from Daniels upon paying the application fee of $2.

Mr. F. Pincus, who is the authorized agent of the contractors at Bear River, advised that there was no one in Butte, except himself, authorized to employ men for that contract. This closed the case for the prosecution and the jury returned a verdict. It was signed by Chas. Daniels as clerk.

Mr. Booth, for the prosecution, ably pleaded that justice be done to poor men who had been defrauded by a man who represented himself as a contractor at Bear River. The court ruled that there was plenty of evidence against the prisoner to allow the case to go to the jury. The case for the defense was then taken up.

Charles Daniels, the prisoner, said he was a cow puncher who came here from Miles City on the 30th of last October. At that time he was in the habit of obtaining subscribers for a book. About two weeks ago he saw J. P. McCandless sign at the "National Employment Bureau" and he applied for work and got it from McCandless. His agreement was that he was to get a commission on all positions which he found vacant and when he could find parties to fill the positions. He had a week ago McCandless employed him on a salary. His duties were merely clerical. He had no interest in the business except to earn his salary by doing so. McCandless told him that he was a contractor at Bear River. He settled with McCandless every night by turning over all money which he had collected during each day. One night when he came into the office the latter held up a large card upon which was written "Wanted, several hundred men to work at Bear River." McCandless said to witness: "I've got a good scheme to make money. That man who just went out is Fisher, agent of the contractors at Bear River. He wants me to get him all the men I can. Now you hustle and get a gang. We'll make a lot of money out of it if we can get the men." McCandless then gave the witness instructions as to what he was to do with the men when employed by them. The men were to be employed at a certain rate of wages; they were to be promised free transportation to Bear River; they were to be charged $2 a piece for the transportation. The prisoner said he followed out these instructions. The prisoner admitted that he had knowledge that McCandless was in the habit of lying about his business to his customers.

Here a long and bitter war of words was waged between Messrs. Booth and O'Donnell in which Mr. O'Donnell lost his temper and got the word of it.

P. D. Sprague, owner of the house where McCandless conducted the "Employment Bureau," swore that McCandless claimed to be sole owner of the institution and that he claimed Daniels was only his clerk.

M. Crossen swore that he knew Daniels was only a clerk in the employ of McCandless. He had seen Daniels hand over the receipts of the office to McCandless.

Marshal McArthur testified that the prisoner had admitted to him that his employer, McCandless, was in the habit of falsifying and deceiving parties with whom he dealt.

This closed the evidence in the case and Mr. Booth briefly addressed the jury asking that a verdict be returned against the prisoner. After a long argument for the defense by O'Donnell the jury retired.

The jury in the case against Daniels failed to agree on a verdict, standing three for conviction and three for acquittal. Attorney O'Donnell, for the defense, says he will to-morrow apply for a writ of habeas corpus for the release of the prisoner.

The Montana Lumber and Produce company have just received a large consignment of "Common Sense," "Arctic" and "Manitoba" bob sleds. Also a full line of delivery sleighs and cutters, in all grades, which they are selling at bottom prices.

TOWN TALK IN MISSOULA

The Fire Laddies Give a Successful Ball Thanksgiving Eve.

The Fire Laddies Participated in By Many Prominent Residents of the County--Real Estate Transfer--Other Notes and Gossip.

Special Correspondence of the Standard. MISSOULA, Nov. 29.--The social event of the season occurred Thanksgiving eve at the Knights of Pythias hall. The fire laddies gave their first annual ball and the spacious hall was crowded to its utmost capacity. Lunch was served at midnight and Chancy and Stevens outside their well established record of hospitality on this occasion. About 200 of Missoula's handsome young ladies and gallant gentlemen danced to the music of a full orchestra until the small hours, when all parted, regretting that the annual ball could not occur more frequently. Mr. Cox and his associates deserve much credit for the perfect manner in which they conducted the successful entertainment was conducted.

W. S. Settle, the popular manager of one of the leading mercantile firms here, has just returned from an extensive tour in the east. He visited most of the wholesale houses, and from the general appearance of his holiday stock, he must have gathered some of the larger cities of the west. He is in his opinion "a forgoing conclusion."

John Solomon, one of Missoula's successful business men, and a leading member of the Jewish synagogue, caused great surprise, and for a time, much indignation, at the annual fair on Wednesday, by sending a pig for Thanksgiving dinner. Swine meat from time immemorial has never been popular at a Jewish table, but Mr. Solomon's familiarity as "King Solomon," appreciates a good joke.

The elite of the county was present in Missoula at noon in Thanksgiving day to attend the annual fair and in response to the call of John R. Higgins, who was mounted on a black charger, in marked contrast with the white snow that now covers the fields of the great valley. A full pack of hounds pursued sly Reynard, and the gentlemen present were given good opportunities to display their gallantry as a hunting party. They braved all dangers to enjoy the most glorious of all out-door pleasures.

The following real estate transfers were recorded at the county clerk's office during the past three days:
