Topics of General Interest in the Four New States and Elsewhere.

Upwards of 3,000 tons of hay have been shipped to points in Nevada during the past 30 days from Livermore, Cal., an average of 15 cars daily are still arriving. The shipments are so heavy in many cases that two locomotives are required to haul the trains.

Virginia Chronicle: The full complement of 40 stamps in the Nevada mill are in motion again this afternoon, the repairs to the flume that supplies the motive power for the surface Pelton wheel and the electric dynamo having been completed.

Several weeks ago the Gibson Light Guards sent out a challenge to the several infantry companies composing the Montana National Guards for a competitive drill for $500. First prize $300 and second prize $200. No reply has yet been received from any of the companies, says the Great Falls Leader.

Carson, Nev., Appeal, 7th: Messrs. Foster and Merrill of Eureka county, with 14,000 head of sheep into Nye county to graze, and the assessor pounced on to them. They were afterwards assessed in Eureka county. The supreme court has just decided that the Nye county assessor exceeded his authority. Judgment for the appellants and order of district court reversed.

Cour d'Alene Times: Fine specimen of trout are being taken from the lake by the novel method of cutting a hole in the ice and inserting a hook baited with beef-steak. The novelty is added to by the demand for "just one mess" of trout. This is a bona fide illustration of the fact that other than the rich can enjoy life, for 'tis not always the fairest split bamboo that catches the most fish.

Citizens of Johnson and Sheridan counties, Wyo., have organized and incorporated the Massacre Hill Monument association. Shares of stock will be issued for $1 each and the money will be applied to building a monument on the site of the Phil Kearney massacre. The preamble says: "On December 21, 1865, almost a quarter of a century ago, there occurred within the territorial limits of what is now Johnson and Sheridan counties, one of the most cruel and heart-rending Indian massacres that the present century records, wherein Brevet, Lieut. Col. Fetterman, 18th regiment United States infantry, and 87 brave and loyal companions, including several private citizens, laid down their lives in that terrible strife and smelted their soil we have inherited by their life blood freely and nobly spilled in the performance of duty and whereby we now occupy this fair land."

An Ogden special to the Salt Lake Tribune says: It was learned yesterday evening that Colonel Howard and Professor Newell of the Ogden Military academy had made what may prove a valuable discovery of gold in the mountains that lie east of Ogden and between the cities. One of the gentlemen, it is reported, has discovered a theory that this precious metal could be found there, but not until yesterday afternoon, when taking a Sunday walk, were his expectations realized. A reporter went out to the academy, two and a half miles from the center of the city, and saw both gentlemen. Professor Newell and Colonel Howard equally uncommunicative. Mrs. Howard, however, the wife of the colonel, was so enthusiastic that she could not repress the information that the rumor was correct and that specimens had been brought back to the institution. All that could be gotten out of Colonel Howard was that he had not told anything to any one. Neither he nor Professor Newell would say ought as to where they had been, nor the character of the find.

Virginia City (Nev.) Chronicle: A Mill Creek miner thus winds up the story of a fight between a thousand wolves that besieged his cabin one night recently in the mountains of that region, incited to frenzy by the notes of the aforesaid miner's fiddle: "I killed any they fit and they ate each other, till the hand began to thin out. Every time I gave an extra rasp on the E string they howled louder and pitched in afresh. They kept it up for three hours when there wasn't more than forty or fifty left, and they so blamed fiddle that they could hardly waddle. But I fiddled and they fit for second wind. When one threw up the sponson, the others helped him in a twinkling. By and by there wasn't more than a dozen left. But I fiddled and they fit and feasted. When they got down to three each one laid hold of another's tail and chewed for glory. The ring kept getting smaller, but I fiddled and they chewed until there was only a bunch of hair left and that blowed away down the hill. Then he went out to look at things. The snow was all red with blood and tramped down 10 feet deep. Heads and bones were strung all the way down the canyon and there was fur enough in sight to stuff a circus tent. It was the dandiest dog fight I ever saw."

Governor Toole has issued the following proclamation in regard to Arbor day: Pugnacious to law in keeping with the best interests of the state I, Joseph K. Toole, governor of the state of Montana, do hereby set apart the third Tuesday of April (being the fifteenth day of April, 1890) as a day for the planting of trees, beautifying homes, cemeteries, highways, public grounds and landscapes. The observance of this day, aside from becoming a custom beautiful in itself, will rapidly and materially enhance the value of all property so improved. I therefore earnestly request that all the people of Montana observe this day in the manner indicated above, and I especially recommend that the attention of pupils in all our schools be directed to the importance of the cultivation of trees, and that wherever practicable they participate in planting trees, shrubs and vines in the school house grounds. To those who desire to avail themselves of the more substantial rewards of exemption from taxation attention is called to the following sections of an act approved September 13, 1887: "Section 3. Any person who is a resident of this territory (state) who has now planted, or who shall hereafter plant, and suitably cultivate for two years one or more acres of land in fruit trees, he shall for the eight years thereafter receive annually a reduction or exemption from his assessment of one hundred dollars for each acre so planted, provided, that the trees so planted shall not stand more than 35 feet apart, and are so kept in a growing condition. Section 6. That when any resident of this territory has or may hereafter plant and cultivate for two years a line of forest trees or fruit trees, not less than 16 feet apart and not more than eight feet from any water ditch within his land, said land shall be exempt from taxation to the amount of one dollar annually thereafter on the assessed valuation of such land for each growing tree thereon for a period of five years." In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the state to be affixed. Done at Helena, the capital of the state, this 8th day of March, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and ninety.

By his governor: JOSEPH K. TOOLE. L. ROTWIT, secretary of state.

He Had Found a Home.

From the New York Evening Sun. He was a young dog, with honest brown eyes and long, silky hair, and he sat on the wet pavement in Twenty-third street looking up at the passers-by out of the fog and rain of Saturday like a lonely child who wonders why everybody has forgotten him. He had had a home, but he was lost, and he was hungry—all this was very plain in his wistful face.

Two young women came tripping along the way talking eagerly, and one of them glanced down just in time to catch the look in the pleading brown eyes.

She stopped short and held out her hand. "What a pretty young dog!" she cried. "Come her, you dear little fellow. Come here."

He looked wistful but he did not stir. He had been on the street long enough to learn something of people. So she went to him, and laying her hand on his head, said in pitiful tones: "Good fellow, good doggie, I won't hurt you. I'll throw myself flat at her feet in an abandon of gratitude, with sharp little cries of delight that were absolutely human. He kissed her hands and her gown and laid his head against her feet, and then rising he followed the two with his sharp little nose thrust against the hand of his new mistress. His entire outer dog radiated joy and confidence he trotted along close to the young girl. A more complete transition from utter loneliness to complete happiness could not be imagined.

The three passed up Broadway to Twenty—street. There they turned, to stop after a few moments walk, at the steps of one of the dwelling houses. Without an instant's hesitation and quite as if he had always lived there, the little fellow sprang up the steps ahead of the girls and waited with utter confidence for the door to be opened. He had found a home at last.

The two came slowly up the steps. On the topmost one the new-found mistress patted in dismay.

"Why, I can't take him in," she cried, "and he actually expects it. What shall I do?"

He sat still, with his happy eyes fixed on her face.

She put her hand on his head again. "Good doggie; poor fellow," she said.

There was a moment's hesitation while her companion opened the door. Then she took her hand from the little fellow's head and passed rapidly through the doorway.

"The idea of my being so foolish about a dog!" she said, as she shut the door hard in the bright face and expectant eyes.
