THE WEATHER.

The daily record of the thermometer in this city is reported by A. T. Playter, druggist, corner Main and First streets. The record for yesterday was: 7 a. m., 49 degrees above; 12 m., 64 degrees above; 4 p. m., 73 degrees above; 8 p. m., 60 degrees above.

ABOUT THE CITY.

The regular meeting of the Ancient Order of Hibernians took place last night at their hall. Mr. Arthur Fortier and Miss Celina Lemieux will be married at St. Paul's church this morning. C. S. Newman's meat market on Second street has been newly painted, and decorated with a very pretty business sign. Tripp's writing, drawing and art school on Second street has been newly painted and refurnished and now bears an attractive appearance. A party of gentlemen who were over on Lost creek trout fishing yesterday returned with a very pretty string of 19 nice specimens of the finny tribe. A party of gentlemen took a trip to Gregson springs yesterday, where a pleasant time was indulged in, the programme including a game of ball and a plunge. A general round-up of the vagrants was made last night and early this morning. Six had been jailed up to 2 o'clock this morning and the officers were still rustling. Yesterday was a beautiful day for driving, and nearly everybody in the city availed themselves of the opportunity. Many were out horseback riding, an exercise which is rapidly growing into favor. The game of quoits appears to become more popular each day, in the lower part of town, and parties can be seen about 6 o'clock in the evening in front of nearly every residence, pitching the lucky horseshoe. A new thing in the line of stiffs was noticed yesterday, consisting of two tomato cans which were held to the feet by strings attached to the cans and held in the hands of a small boy, who was apparently highly elated over the new discovery. The game of hand ball is being agitated and it is quite probable that a club will be organized shortly, as there are several hand ball experts in the city. The empty store next to Keppeler's jewelry store is mentioned as being a fine place in which to play. Dick Dickinson has returned from the Bitter Root valley, where he has been for several days. He thinks it one of the most beautiful countries he was ever in, and says that if a person would go there to live, take along plenty of "old 66" and imbibe about three glasses each day that death could never happen. It seems to be the general belief that the fire in the rear of the Chicago house Saturday night was the work of an incendiary. This is no doubt the case as the building has the appearance of having been saturated with coal oil, on the outside, touched off with a match and the fire extinguished before anything had been burned but the coal oil. The base ball enthusiasts bob up as serenely as ever, notwithstanding the club's defeat on Saturday. The score Saturday was, of course, something of a black eye, but the game was not so bad after all. The nine of this city had never played together before and several had not even had a ball in their hands this season. They batted very well, making ten clean hits, made the only earned run of the game and stole several bases, showing that with a little more practice and a few changes in the team Anaconda can make them all ruse. Smoke Prince Cuban Cigars. Peckover, sole agent for Anaconda. Keeffe sets the grandest free lunch in Anaconda. Go to Peckover's for the finest brands of cigars, imported and domestic. Funeral notices neatly printed at the "Standard" office. Keeffe don't mix his beer. Paints, oils and window glass at Playter's drug store, corner Main and First streets. Keeffe sells no beer but Milwaukee. For Sale. Furniture and fixtures of the Planters hotel, on Front street. Enquire on premises. J. Merrill & Co. are showing an elegant line of ladies' gold watches. They are pleased to show goods to visitors as well as purchasers. Finest brands of wines, liquors and cigars at Keeffe's. Grand Central hotel. Meals 25 cents; first-class table board $22 per month.

VENOM IN A BIRD'S BEAK.

A Curious Specimen of Natural History Found in New Guinea.

The Rev. R. M. Masterson, who has just returned from New Guinea, where he has been for the last seven years as missionary from that city, in a recent conversation with a Philadelphia Times correspondent told of a most remarkable bird he had seen in that country. The bird, which is called by the natives the rpir n'doob, meaning the bird of death, produces by its bite a madness ending in death. They are very rare, and are fast disappearing as the country becomes more civilized.

Mr. Masterson had no opportunity of personally observing the effects of its bite, but was credibly informed that the victim is almost instantly seized with violent pains in the member bitten, which pains soon spread over the entire body, but are especially excruciating in the bowels. Loss of sight follows and rush of blood to the head. The limbs quiver convulsively, and a white, offensive froth breaks out of the mouth. A sort of frenzy takes possession of the sufferer, in which he shrieks and howls, occasionally laughing uproariously, and capering to his own chanting or singing, until his strength is exhausted and he sinks to the ground, never regaining consciousness until he is in every limb, with his teeth firmly locked as in tetanus.

Mr. Masterson describes the rpir as small and about the size of the common pigeon, with a slenderer, longer built, and of a peculiar gray plumage, lacking entirely the glossy appearance of feathers. Its tail is extraordinarily long and runs to a sharp point, ending in a blood-red tip. No other color is to be seen when it is not in flight, but the extended wings show a yellow beneath, sometimes varied with an intense lusterless black. Its bill is very powerful, though thin and long, and is perfectly straight, except at the end, where it curves sharply with an abrupt dip. The feet are coral black and resemble somewhat those of the African parrot, but have very short nails, curving almost into fish-hooks.

This singular bird is to be found only on the rarer Guineas, which are often only immense stagnant ponds or marshes. The eggs are laid in the slimy, moist earth close to the water's edge, and are most beautifully variegated, being of a rich crimson, with blue, gold, and white, but are very small and perfectly round. The male of the rpir n'doob has no note, but the hen, which is considerably larger of the two, gives a peculiar, long-drawn cry, which is piercing, melancholy sound, and which is repeated at short intervals.

The rpir being very awkward and capable of only short flights of two or three yards can be caught without difficulty, but is so severely and charged with the deadly poison. This poison seems given merely as a means of defense, for, as nearly as the gentleman could tell from his limited opportunities of observing it, the bird is herbivorous, feeding on the tender young shoots of the reeds and flags.

AN INVENTIVE GENIUS.

The Useful Inventions of the Esteemed Citizen, Stub Smith of Arizona.

The inventive talent of the Hon. Stub Smith of Hanging Horse, Arizona Territory, is again brought prominently before the public in the columns of the Garden of Eden Buzz Saw, a weekly newspaper printed and published in the city of Hanging Horse. The name of the Hon. Stub Smith may not be familiar to many of our readers, but in Arizona he has achieved a more than local reputation by his genius for mechanical invention. He is a man of great force of character also, as indeed his title of "Honorable" itself shows he never in point of fact, having done anything to give him a legitimate claim to it; but he early insisted on it as being but a fitting tribute to his abilities, and it is now universally accorded him. At first, it is true, there were ill-advised persons who laughed at this title and refused to recognize it, but the prejudice in Hanging Horse against being buried in that distant region, far removed from friends and early associations, was so great that all opposition soon ceased.

Stub Smith (we may safely omit the title at this distance) began his inventive career with his "Centennial Corrugated Bow-knife Handle." This was very successful—that is, he liked it himself, and as his inventions are all for his own private use, and not for sale, this was sufficient. The corrugated handle gave him a much firmer hold on the knife, and he demonstrated its superiority over the old style several times. But the sphere of usefulness of the bowie is limited at the best, and Mr. Smith turned his attention to firearms, as presenting a broader field for his activities. It is here that the Hon. Stub Smith has achieved fame.

But Stub Smith's latest and greatest invention has just been perfected. Mr. Smith has long noted with regret the amount of time wasted in drawing the weapon from the belt, and he has remedied it. He attaches the revolver to his belt at his side with a rivet, so that it turns freely in a perpendicular plane. It is exactly balanced, and the slightest touch causes the whole side to swing up or down. Ordinarily the barrel points at a spot in the floor about 10 feet in advance of Mr. Smith. A string runs from the weapon under the honorable gentleman's clothing and down his sleeve, and is attached to his little finger, the slightest movement of which causes the weapon to swing to a position so that the barrel is exactly horizontal and points straight ahead. As it touches this position the whole side and arms are automatically discharged in rapid succession. The Hon. Stub Smith has named his new creation "The Pan-American Waterloo." He wears one of them on either side, and Coroner Horse-shoe Robinson is buying Houses and mining stock through a St. Louis broker.

We might observe that we Americans lead the world in mechanical invention, and that Yankee ingenuity is bound to show itself under all circumstances, but it would seem to be superfluous. We shall, however, thank our valued contemporary, the Garden of Eden Buzz Saw, from which many of the facts concerning the Hon. Stub Smith were obtained, and express the hope that its able editor will cause in his present friendly relations with this most distinguished citizen.

After Sadowa.

From the Edinburgh Review. In dealing with Austria the Prussian government showed a wise moderation. It annexed no territory and the pecuniary indemnity claimed was not unreasonable, being limited to 20,000,000 thalers from Austria and about 8,000,000 thalers from Saxony for the cost of the war. The end was attained when Prussia became the supreme arbiter of Germany, and the emperor and king of Austro-Hungary ceased to form part of the Germanic body. From that moment and even before the peace was signed, M. de Bismarck employed his address to turn the empire he had attacked and almost overthrown, into an alley. He foresaw that his real antagonists were not on the Danube, but on the Rhine and Vistula. No man ever acted more completely on the old Greek maxim, "Treat your enemies as if they were one day to be your friends, and your friends as if they were to become your enemies."

But the problem was more difficult in dealing with the minor German states, which had all, with the exception of Mecklenburg-Schwarin, adhered to Austria and to the bund. Hanover, Hesse, Nassau and Frankfurt were marked out for immediate annexation; they had been for a century objects of Prussian ambition and the conduct of King Hanover, who repaired straight to Vienna and refused to enter into any negotiations derogatory to his crown, was absolutely fatal to his position as a sovereign prince. These provinces in reality were the price and prizes of the war. The southern kingdoms of Bavaria and Wurtemberg, and the grand duchy of Baden escaped the terrible grasp of Prussia, and retained their sovereignty under the flimsy fiction of the North German league, which drew a line at the River Main across the country. But the secret military conventions with Prussia, which they were compelled to accept, placed their armies and consequently themselves entirely under the control of the court at Berlin.—Edinburgh Review.
