He has been on his summer vacation... Where the country gives pleasure galore... But with feelings of calm exultation...

The Story of Muhammad Din.

The polo ball was an old one, scarred, chipped and dented. It stood on the mantle-piece among the pipe-stems which Imam Din, Khatmatgar, was cleaning for me.

"Does the Heaven-born want this ball?" said Imam Din deferentially. The Heaven-born set no particular store by it; but of what use was a polo ball to a Khatmatgar?

"By your honor's favor, I have a little son. He has a secret this ball and desires to play with it. I do not want it for myself."

No one would for an instant accuse portly old Imam Din of wanting to play with polo balls. He carried out the battered thing into the verandah; and there followed a hurricane of joyful squeals, a patter of small feet, and the thud-thud-thud of the ball rolling along the ground.

Next day, coming back from office half an hour earlier than usual, I was aware of a small figure in the dining-room—a tiny, plump figure in a ridiculously inadequate shirt which came, perhaps, half way down the tubby stomach.

He had no business in my room, of course; but so deeply absorbed in his discoveries that he never noticed me in the doorway. I stepped into the room and startled him nearly into a fit.

From that day dated my acquaintance with Muhammad Din. Never again did he come into my dining-room, but on the neutral ground of the compound, and we greeted each other with much state, though our conversation was a hasty inquiry.

Next day there was no Muhammad Din at the head of the carriage drive, and no "Talaam Tahib" to welcome my return. I had grown accustomed to the greetings, and his omission troubled me.
