A telegram was received by Marshal Daum from the chief of police at Ana-they proving themselves innocent.

Haldorn's Defense.

By the Standard's Special Wire.
BUTTE, Aug. 2.—The McBride-Haldorn investigation was continued with some interruptions throughout the day. Attorney Haldorn had his defense still in hand.
Several new witnesses were cited but their testimony added nothing essential to the evidence already in. The testimony of O'Rourke, who was on the stand most of the afternoon, went to invalidate Her-man's testimony.

A Boston woman, who invented a shoe sewing machine, sold the patent for $150, 000.

The New Hotel.

By the Standard's Special Wire.
BUTTE, Aug. 2.—The Cottage hotel had a splendid opening to-night. The Hiber-nia band paraded the streets and drew the crowd to the fine hotel in West Galena street. The place was brilliantly illuminated, hundreds of flowers shown in the elegantly furnished and pleasant apartments. Joseph Brasalou, the proprietor, received his friends cordially and a fine supper was served. The new hotel is bound to be a great success.

Go to J. H. Lynch's and try his ice cold beer.

Not much Done.

By the Standard's Special Wire.

BUTTE, Aug. 1.—Beyond granting the motion for a new hearing in the divorce case of Trevelyan vs. Trevelyan very little business was done to-day in the district court. Two cases were transferred to the United States circuit court. The first was King vs. the Amy and Silversmith Consolidated Gold and Silver Mining company. The second was King vs. the City of Butte. In the case of Smith vs. the Blue Bird, a motion was made for a new trial. The arguments on the motion will be heard at 2 o'clock next Thursday afternoon.

The Dreaded Scourge.

BRUTALLY POUNDED

Another Crime Chargeable to Charles McGinnis and His Gang.

They Beat a Patron of Their Dive in a Most Cowardly Manner
—It May Prove Another Murder.

By the Standard's Special Wire.

BUTTE, Aug. 2.—Another brutal and cowardly assault chargeable to the many concert dives of the city, took place tonight at about 10 o'clock in the den kept by McGinnis Bros. in a basement on East Park street. Hugh O'Rourke entered the saloon and, as it is claimed, seated himself in a chair. He had been seated only a few minutes when Charles McGinnis ordered him to get up and leave. O'Rourke replied by telling McGinnis not to be in a hurry that he would go at once. He had no sooner said this than one of the disreputable females of the dive struck him over the head with a loaded cane which was instantly followed by Charles McGinnis striking O'Rourke with a revolver. A friend of O'Rourke attempted to interfere and was himself in-turn struck on the head with a chair.

By this time Neil McGinnis ran from behind the bar and took part in the fight, using a bottle with which he struck O'Rourke several times, always on the head. The bottle breaking he picked up a chair and renewed his attack on O'Rourke. By this time several more of the hangers on about the place had joined in the fight, all apparently anxious to help the two brothers murder O'Rourke.

After almost killing the man, and when he was no longer able to defend himself the would-be murderers dragged their victim out of a rear door and threw him into a vacant lot. Some of the man's friends went in search of an officer and found Policemen Donovan and Anderson, who arrested the two brothers and assisted O'Rourke to Dr. Robert's office where his wounds were dressed. The prisoner remained on bonds and sent for Joe Noble, a saloon keeper, to act as their security.
The officers accepted him and fixed the bonds at $100 for each prisoner.

While the bonds were being prepared, Chief Carroll, who had heard of the affair, appeared and gave peremptory orders to the officers to hold the two sluggers and not accept any bond until after he had acquainted himself with the nature and extent of O'Rourke's injuries. He then visited Dr. Robert's and in a few minutes returned and ordered the men locked up unless they could give a cash bond of $1500. This they were unable to do and were at once taken to the county jail.

A STANDARD reporter who was on the ground a few minutes after the fight returned with a story that O'Rourke's wounds were being dressed and a sickening sight met his eyes. No less than a dozen cans and gashes covered the man's head and forehead, some of them being fully two inches in length and extending to the bone. Shreds of flesh hung like rag from his wounds necessitating great care in stitching the cuts and making the operation slow and tedious.

O'Rourke is a powerful man in the very prime of life to which he no doubt owes his escape from death at the hands of the gangs. An ordinary man would certainly have lost his life from the effects of the blow.

THEY RUSHED THE LEMONS.

How the Northern Pacific Was Made to Get a Hustle On.

Special Correspondence of the Standard.

BUTTE, Aug. 2.—Two car loads of lemons, consigned to local merchants, left New York July 24, one consigned in care of the Northern Pacific and the other via the Great Northern and Montana Central.
As lemons were scarce each consignee was anxious to have his freight "whooped up." The two competing lines entered into the spirit of rivalry existing between the merchants and kept the wires hot with orders to "rush the lemons." Last night Major Dawson of the Montana Central, with a grin like a gash in a cheese, informed Colonel McLaugh of the Northern Pacific that the Great Northern would win the race, as the lemons arriving over that line would be delivered here this morning at 11 o'clock. The colonel said nothing but at once telegraphed the condition of affairs to headquarters and an order was issued that the Northern Pacific car of lemons onto an extra engine at Logan and rush it through to Butte as a special.

Having learned that a delay had occurred on the Montana Central and that the Great Northern car had not left Helena as a part of the passenger train, the extra engine was used for a couple of hours at Logan to do switching and then pulled out for Butte. When it did get started no time was lost, and it arrived here at 11:30 o'clock this morning. In half an hour afterward the shipper was receiving wagon loads of lemons in front of his store. The regular train, of which the car originally formed a part, did not arrive until 2 o'clock this afternoon.

It was 4 o'clock before the Montana Central had delivered its lemons, and now the major is inconsolable.

BILLY CONNORS TURNS UP.

He Was Not So Badly Pounded Up as at First Supposed.

Special Correspondence of the Standard.

BUTTE, Aug. 2.—It has turned out that the assault made on William Connors yesterday evening by John Welch was not such a serious matter after all. Connors turned up all right this morning with only a small cut across the forehead, where Welch had caressed him with a chair. He admitted that he was in a measure to blame for the trouble and refused to appear against Welch. Accordingly the charge of assault with intent to kill preferred against Welch was withdrawn and one of simple assault and battery substituted. To this Welch pleaded guilty and the court withheld sentence for a few days to await the results of Connors' injuries.

In the meantime the defendant is out on bonds while the owner of the broken chairs mourns their almost complete demolition.

THE FATES AGAINST HIM.

Chas. Warren Says He Was Arrested on a Cooked Dispatch.

BUTTE, Aug. 2.—The fates are playing a lively game with Charles Warren, the suspected crook. A few days ago he was arrested on suspicion of having stolen a cornet from Jackson's music store. He pleaded not guilty and gave bonds for his appearance to-day. Yesterday afternoon he was re-arrested on a dispatch from Missoula and placed in jail to await the arrival of an officer from that city. This morning he was tried before Judge Newkirk on the charge of larceny and the evidence against him not being very conclusive, the court took the matter of rendering a decision under advisement. Pending judgment Warren was returned to jail, but was soon thereafter released by Sheriff Lloyd, who claimed that he had no authority to hold him any longer, not having heard anything further from Missoula, although the authorities were notified yesterday of Warren's arrest.

As soon as released Warren reappeared on the street and began to joke the city.
He also says that if the sheriff had not released him to-day he would have at once made application for a writ of habeas corpus.

Whatever Warren may be he shows evident familiarity with criminal tactics pursued by officers to secure their game.
His theory however in regard to the dispatch was all wrong. A STANDARD reporters saw the dispatch and can testify to its bona fide character. The message was signed by Sheriff Houston. Under-Sheriff Gallagher, who showed the reporter this dispatch, said that Warren was released on another message from the same city. This directed Warren's release unless these were found on him diamonds and jewelry belonging to Foster. As Warren had nothing of the kind about him, he was immediately released.
Although there has been no crooked work on the part of the local officials, the arrest and speedy release still remain a mystery. Some of the officers here conjecture that the whole business is the work of those private detectives, which apostles of law and order Montana has a lion's share. The matter will be sifted by the sheriff and the arrest justified if possible.

DRIVING OUT THE QUACKS.

How a Long Haired Faker Fared in Butte.

Special Correspondence of the Standard.

BUTTE, Aug. 2.—For about a week past a very glibly, drawn by a dashing span of bays, over which an elderly man with long hair draws the reins, has been parading the streets of the city. At night the outfit is made to appear like a veritable cloud of fire by means of a number of torches attached to outriggers. In addition to the driver two other men occupy seats in the wagon and at intervals make vocal and instrumental music of a quality more or less doubtful. The driver is also the proprietor of the concern and calls himself Dr. A. Lepper, and claims to be the discover of a wonderful remedy which cures everything, from a strawberry mark on the left ear of the servant girl to a case of fits in the household cat.

To advertise this great medicine is why the "doctor" allows his hair to grow and drives about the country in a circus wagon. With his aggregation he has frequently held forth at street corners and extolled the curative powers of his "Mountain Tea."

Yesterday some of the physicians of the city decided to apply the state medical law to the "doctor" and he was arrested for practicing medicine without a license from the board of medical examiners. He was taken before Judge Eddy and after pleading not guilty gave bonds for his appearance to-day. When arraigned this morning he pleaded in defense that he was not practicing medicine in the accepted meaning of the term in that he did not prescribe for patients, but merely advertised a proprietary medicine. The defense, however, proved insufficient, the law being so worded as to make everybody amenable to its provisions who gives away or sells any medicine and recommends it.

The "doctor" agreeing to pay all costs and leave the state the prosecution consented to a dismissal of the case and the long-haired gentleman promptly settled and prepared to move.

It will be seen that the law is so worded as to be most effective and that the state corner vendors of quack medicines, making it utterly impossible for them to do business within its borders. Druggists are also amenable to its provisions should they sell and recommend any patent medicine which they may have in stock.
As this part of the law is not generally understood or even known to exist, it is safe to say that hundreds of persons in Montana have at some time or other been guilty of violating its mandates.

A CRUEL HUSBAND.

How Edward Trevelyan Got a Divorce
From His Wife.

BUTTE, Aug. 2.—About two weeks ago Edward Trevelyan of this city entered complaint against his wife, asking for a divorce. The reason given was desertion without cause. The case was called at the district court on last Wednesday morning. The wife did not appear and the default was ordered entered on the records. At the same time the application for divorce was referred to Attorney Wines.

This afternoon Attorney Haldorn appeared in the district court for Mrs.
Trevelyan and asked for a new hearing.
Mrs. Trevelyan says that she was taken all July 3, and has until a very few days, been too ill to give attention to the summons or to secure a legal advice. To add to her difficulties, on the 26th her young babe fell ill. She sent for her husband and he came to see the sick child. So he knew the way she was situated. On July 28 the little sufferer died and was buried on the 29th. Her husband attended the funeral and yet went up to the court room the next morning and took advantage of her failure to appear.

On hearing her statement the court recalled and vacated the order of July 30 and dismissed the reference. The 9th of August was then appointed for a new hearing of the case. Mrs. Trevelyan states that she had very good reasons for leaving Trevelyan. His cruelty, she says, has been intolerable. Since their separation she has contributed a dollar to the support of herself or the child.
