Ranchmen Fitch's Ghastly Discovery in the Missouri's Waters.

IT MAY BE POOR NELLIE RYAN

Her Father Falls to Identify the Body But He Claims It As That of His Child Who Was Drowned.

Special Dispatch to the Standard.

GREAT FALLS, June 1.—H. H. Fitch, a ranchman living near the great falls of the Missouri, 12 miles below this city, arrived in town this morning and notified Coroner Ladd of the finding of the body of a woman in a slough formed by high water, just below the falls. Fitch said that, while gathering drift wood last evening, he discovered the body in the water, and although shocked at the discovery, blocked the outlet of the slough so that the body could not be carried down the stream. Deputy Sheriff Carrier and Undertaker Powers were dispatched for the remains and they returned to Great Falls this evening with the body. The corpse is swollen, badly discolored and decomposed, and the features are not distinguishable.

When discovered, the body was almost nude, dressed only in a corset and chemise, and the right foot encased in a stocking and shoe. The hair is quite long, black and heavy, but there are no marks visible to assist in identification. No doubt exists but that the body now at the undertaker's is the one referred to in Thursday's STANDARD as having passed over the dam, and the impression prevails that it is the corpse of poor Nellie Ryan, who, with her brother, was drowned in the Jefferson river, April 28. Mr. Ryan, the father of Miss Ryan, arrived from Boulder this afternoon, and while unable to recognize the corpse as that of his daughter, he will claim the dead as his own and return with it to his home where interment will occur. It is thought that a coroner's inquest will be held in the morning, when further developments may be made.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.

Considerable Business Transacted at the Last Meeting.

GREAT FALLS, June 1.—At a meeting of the chamber of commerce held last evening, a communication was received from Superintendent Dickinson of the electric light company, saying he would present a proposition of reduced rates at the next council meeting.

It was learned that an ordinance covering the proposed public market had been prepared and was now before the city council for adoption.

Hon. R. S. Ford was requested to use his personal influence to aid in securing a daily mail service to Augusta.

The finance committee on the entertainment of the members of the Montana Press association reported progress and the members of the committee were requested to meet for further action Saturday at the Ulm house.

The committee on constitution and by-laws submitted a draft for adoption. On motion the matter was referred back for revisions.

The question of the new bridge across the Belt was discussed at length and finally referred to the committee on county affairs, with instructions to bring the matter before the county commissioners.

W. M. Cookrell introduced the following resolution, which was adopted: Resolved, That all ranchmen and stockmen residing in Cascade county are hereby elected honorary members of the Chamber of Commerce of Great Falls and are earnestly requested to attend the regular meetings of this body when in the city and aid us in our work by their counsel and influence for the upbuilding of our city and for the general good of our country.

On invitation, C. F. Stork of Red Butte addressed the chamber on the requirements of the city, public market and the like. His remarks were well received.

HUSTLING NEWSBOYS.

Leonard Lloyd Takes First Prize, Willie Greer Second, Casey Winehold Third.

GREAT FALLS, June 1.—Last evening the STANDARD office was crowded with newsboys called together to witness the distribution of valuable prizes to the three little business men selling the highest number of STANDARDS in May. Circulator Dodson invited a committee, consisting of Judge Dyas, R. E. Stone, of the Goodrich Lumber company, and E. B. Judd, with the Great Falls Implement company, to take possession of the record of street sales, and to award the prizes to the boys entitled thereto. During the count, which lasted nearly two hours, the little fellows watched the proceedings, with great interest and at its conclusion heartily congratulated the successful contestants. The first prize, an elegant little gold watch, boy's size, was awarded to Leonard Lloyd, who had purchased and sold 814 STANDARDS. The second prize, a good strong serviceable suit of clothes, was given to Willie Greer, who had sold 652 STANDARDS, and the third prize, five big, bright silver dollars, was handed over to Casey Winehold, who had disposed of 530 papers during the month.

The little fellows were jubilant and happy and listened to a few words of kindly advice from Judge Dyas, who assured them all that industry, perseverance and energy were absolutely necessary to the boy or the man and that the spirit formed in the contest of this character, should guide them to a successful and bright future. There were 28 boys in the race and the number of papers sold on the streets during the month aggregated 2,814. This evening Circulator Dodson will take the whole batch of happy boys to a restaurant and treat them to a little banquet of delicacies arranged for the special benefit of the boys.

They'll Have to Go.

GREAT FALLS, June 1.—Sheriff Hamilton has formally notified residents of Shantytown on both sides of the river to vacate the property by 10 o'clock to-morrow morning. There is considerable objection to the order, which is official and issued by the court, and those refusing to comply with the mandate will be evicted by the officials. The townsie company claims title to all the water front on both sides of the river and has for the past year been trying to put the shacks and squatters from the ground.

GREAT FALLS GOSSIP.

GREAT FALLS, June 1.—Arrangements are already being made for a grand celebration on the Fourth.

Thomas W. Murphy, a bright young lawyer of Benton, has been made chairman of the populist executive committee of Chouteau county.

The school trustees will select a corps of teachers for the ensuing year at their meeting Saturday evening. Most of the old teachers will be retained.

Police Justice Hawkins gathered in $394.85 from those who violated city ordinances during the month of May.

A new German newspaper, the Montana Herald, made its appearance yesterday and the Herald is a 12 page weekly and presents a neat, clean and attractive appearance.

Prof. Con Meich, leader of theatrical orchestras, will leave Sunday for Missoula to conduct the production of the comic opera, "Rimes of Normandy," to be given by home talent of Missoula on the evenings of June 7 and 8. Mr. Meich will return the following week to locate permanently at Great Falls.

E. J. Cussick of Chicago is in the city straightening out the affairs of one of the prominent mercantile houses that are reported in a tangled condition.

Clerk of the Court Cockrell reports the following suits as having been filed in district court: Phelps vs. The Antelope Basin Sheep company, $5,683.33; the Severance Mercantile company vs. the Antelope Basin Sheep company, $721.51; L. G. Phelps vs. New York Sheep company, $1,230.60; Severance Mercantile company vs. New York Sheep company, $5,935.24.

The Views Are in Big Demand.

GREAT FALLS, June 1.—The demand for World's Fair Views, Glimpses of America and Stage Celebrities is increasing daily and the supply of each is rapidly running down to the low water mark. A new and enlarged order was sent in last week and those having coupons can be supplied with either or all of the charming works after Monday next.

MOTHER EARTH'S GIRTH.

The Most Accurate Measurements Ever Taken About to Be Made.

From the Washington Post.

The computers of the coast and geodetic survey will take up within a few months a huge mathematical problem from which they are expected to determine more accurately than has ever been done before the distance around the world. The results will be of great importance to scientist of all countries, and will be awaited with interest by those who would like to know whether this terrestrial ball on which we live is really larger or smaller than it is supposed to be. The measurements of the surveyors, from which this information is to be compiled, are now almost completed.

The task is one of great magnitude and will require from two to three years of solid mathematical grinding, such as would turn the majority of students pale. Many men have worked over this ground before and it has long been supposed that the person who circumvented the globe covered a distance of about 24,000 miles or that, if he could drop from the icy pinnacle of the north pole to a similar location in the southern hemisphere, he would descend through one-third this amount of space. The scientists have long ceased, however, to be satisfied with an expression of miles and furlongs for these distances and are striving to obtain a correct measurement in feet. Andrew Brail, executive officer of the coast and geodetic survey, recently said that he believed the distance would eventually be computed so that the error in the diameter would not exceed 50 feet.

The most recent authorities differ much with each other. The two whose conclusions are accepted as law and gospel, Friedrich W. Bessel, a distinguished German astronomer, and Col. A. R. Clarke, an English engineer, are at a variance with each other about the diameter to the extent of one mile, and during the last 30 years, since the results of Colonel Clarke were promulgated, the surveys of different countries have been divided against themselves on this question. According to Astronomer Bessel's computations, which were given to the world in 1841, the distance from pole to pole is 41,707,308 feet, while the longer diameter from one side of the equator to the other is 41,846,194 feet. Colonel Clarke's corresponding figures, announced in 1866 from measurements taken in India, which are accepted by Americans generally, are 41,700,790 feet and 41,852,404 feet.

The preparation for this mammoth undertaking of the mathematical men of the survey requires the accurate measurement of the longest possible distance on the earth's surface. This is what is technically called an arc, because it comprises a portion of the earth's circumference. The surveyors will soon have an arc 3,000 miles in length, extending from the Atlantic to the Pacific ocean, which has been determined with infallible precision by the use of the most accurate instruments and the employment of the most skilled men. This line is along the thirtieth parallel, and will be completed, with the system of triangulation through what is called the continental divide, the present season.

The principle for determining the circumference of the earth in this case is easy of comprehension. The surveyors are able to determine the difference in the longitude of the two extremities of this long line which begins in New Jersey, near the southern part of Cape May, and ends in the lower part of Mendocino county, California. Knowing that the whole circumference of the earth comprises 360 degrees of a circle and reckoning the fractional part of this circle, which is covered by the arc, the whole distance is readily computed. The difficulty comes in reducing the observations taken from the series of triangles extending across the continent to a sea level, for many of the lines from which the distance must be measured are located on the mountain tops, and in some cases above the clouds, especially in the mountainous region of the West, through which the parallel passes. The measurement of the earth's circumference is to be accomplished incidentally to the other work for which the triangulation is designed, and therefore the final results will not be obtained for a considerable time.

AGAIN THE COXEYITES.

Hendrix's Army Will Defend the Government Against Destruction.

From the Washington Post.

Captain Frederick B. Hendrix, leader of the anti-Coxey army, arrived in Washington yesterday with an advance guard of six men and is quartered at Beveridge's boarding-house, No. 223, Third street, northwest. The captain was just the least bit disconcerted to find things as quiet as they are here, but will make the best of it, and will today offer his army, 35 strong, to the government for the reduction of Coxeyism.

"How will you get at the general government?" the brave captain was asked by a Post reporter last night.

"Well, I am not just sure, but I think I will see Major Moore. I may try to see President Cleveland, and if he feels inclined to thank us for our good feeling toward the government, why we will feel highly honored."

Captain Hendrix left his army in the Bowery, New York, and came through in a palace car. The army was organized at Bridgeport, Conn., about two weeks ago by old soldiers who desired to show their loyalty to the United States. They declared, on organizing that, as they had shouldered arms once for the defense of their country, they could do it again if necessary. Captain Hendrix says he does not mean to infer by bringing an anti-Coxey movement here that he wants to fight; that for every Coxeyite there should be an anti, and that blood should flow. He says he simply wants to show his loyalty, and that if the anti-movement had been more prompt there would not now be so many labor armies marching to Washington.

Hendrix's army only walked about 30 miles, and then took a New York train, arriving in that city on Thursday night with blankets and haversacks slung to their backs. Captain Hendrix was a member of the Ninth regiment of Connecticut during the war, and his right-hand man in the anti-movement is Capt. Broome, who to speak is T. J. Powell, late of the First Massachusetts cavalry. Mr. Powell cannot draw pictures or preach on the reformation, but he can blow a bugle to perfection, which is better.

Captain Hendrix says he can bring 1,000 fighting men to Washington if they should be needed, and he proposes to stay here a week or so to see if the government needs them. The captain is paying the expenses of his little army himself, but declined last night to say just how much he was out. Yesterday he called on Chief Clerk Sylvester, Captain Austin and Inspector Hollinger, and says he had a royal time.

On the route somebody read a poem to the captain, one line which said something about "may he succeed in putting the pensions through." The gallant Coxeyite captain is very proud of this poem, but declares that his pension sentiment is all wrong; that his men want neither pensions nor pay.

Captain Hendrix is a tall, well-built man of 59 years, with an expressive face and a cold, gray eye. He does not look a bit like the "old soldier" in an ill-mannered old soldier as could be found in a day's journey.
