The Latest News From Great Falls and the Surrounding Regions—Work to Be Resumed On the Moulton at Once.

GREAT FALLS, Jan. 18.—Advice from Barker state that considerable development work will be done on the Moulton mine. After a long illness, Superintendent Miller has received instructions from the directors at Racine, Wis., to at once make arrangements to put a force of men at work drifting on the vein at the 100 foot level towards the Tiger ground.

The idea is to have the mine so arranged that ore can be taken out on an extensive scale whenever the price of silver and lead will warrant working the property extensively. The vein in the Moulton is said to be immense, being from eight to 15 feet wide and averaging more than 50 per cent. in lead and 20 ounces in silver. The ore is mostly sand carbonates and can be easily retined.

Work on the building that is to contain Neihart's new electric light plant is progressing rapidly. E. S. Remington, an experienced electrician from Chicago, has been on the ground several days looking over the plans and machinery of the company and ascertaining whatever may be needed.

The infant son of Mr. and Mrs. T. F. Jackman died yesterday. The funeral was held this afternoon from the residence, Sixth avenue and Seventh street north.

It is reported that the war department has decided to station white troops at Fort Assiniboine again and two companies will arrive there about the 20th.

A benefit will be given at the opera house next Tuesday evening in behalf of the sufferers by the recent explosion in Butte. Fiske Barnett will have charge of the same and promises to give a first class entertainment.

The skating contest and carnival at Williams' ice rink drew a large crowd last night. The skating was of the finest order, the rink having been recently flooded and frozen. The City band added to the pleasure of the evening by discoursing sweet music. Adults vied with children in having a good time. Men who had not seen a skate in 20 years renewed the pastime of youthful days, and risked life and limb in order to let the bystanders know that if a man is past the giddy age he can skate a line or two. Mother and daughter skated side by side while the old man sat on the fence and watched them with envious eyes, at the same time wondering what the spectators would say if he took a whirl on the glassy surface. Those who were to take part in the carnival were dressed in costumes and masked.

The principal event of the evening was the five-mile race for a handsome gold medal. Ropes were stretched to hold the skite-seers back and judges selected. In a minute the crowd yelled, "The're off," and away went a half dozen crack skaters like the wind. One by one they dropped out. When the tenth lap was reached Norman Wallace and Frank Brown were the only contestants. As the horsemen say, they were going neck and neck. Within 50 feet of the finish both fell and Wallace crawled under the wire on his hands and knees and was declared the winner.

There was a number of cries of foul from Brown's friends and in order to settle disputes the race will be skated again. The time was 21 minutes, or within 15 minutes of the record. The carnival followed and to the tune of lively music the skaters passed the balance of the evening in a very enjoyable manner.

Companies B and D of the 2nd Infantry from Fort Keogh passed through here this afternoon on a special train en route for Fort Assiniboine. Their quarters at Keogh were burned recently and they have been temporarily transferred to Assiniboine. Captain Crittenden was in command.

Mayor Gelsthorpe has received a message from Mayor Dugan replying to this city's message of condolence and an inquiry as to whether assistance were needed from here. Butte's mayor thanked Mayor Gelsthorpe for the offer of assistance but said the citizens of Butte would endeavor to raise sufficient funds.

CONCERNING GAME. Interesting Communication From A Veteran Guide and Hunter. It is with much interest that every true sportsman reads everything that presents itself relating to the protection of game, as all feel that some law must be passed that will give it better protection than at present, or else our game will soon become a thing of the past. There are various ideas as to what this law should be. I believe, as far as I can learn, and I have given the subject considerable study that the state of Maine has come the nearest to solving this question of any state in the union.

They not only give the game better protection but have increased it to such an extent that there is an abundance, so much so that all who wish can go to their domain and hunt and do so to such an extent that it is a source of revenue to the state of between three and four millions of dollars per annum. This law limits the number any one is allowed to kill, and protects the females at all time; this is the only law that will preserve our game.

I read an article in the STANDARD of Jan. 11, written by Dan Griffin, of Lima, Mont., in which he sets forth the argument that the only way to protect our game is to capture it and ship it to some wealthy man's private park. We can then go and sit on the fence and feast our eyes on it, if we can get permission.

I would like to ask Mr. Griffin by what right Mr. Eaton purchased a car load of elk, when the law says they are to be protected for a number of years, both in Montana and Idaho. A car load of elk shipped out of the state are just the same as dead, for it matters not whether they are killed or shipped abroad, they are forever dead to the state. The game is the property of the state, and if anyone wants to purchase any of it to stock a private park, let him go to the governor, and if he wishes to dispose of any, let him appoint some one to see that he takes no more than the number, the price of such sale to go to a game fund and to enforce the law.

Mr. Griffin claims as a clincher for his argument that he has the authority, "I've smelt," has been interviewed, and he is of the opinion that the game needs better protection from the unscrupulous hunters. I would like to ask Mr. Griffin who the unscrupulous individual is? The sportsman who is content to kill a few head of game per annum, or one who claims to have killed more buffalo than any other man, and after they were all killed started in to exterminate the other game by catching it and shipping it out of the state, and then quit the business because some one else cut prices and he could no longer make it profitable to sell our game.

It is indeed a lamentable fact that the Indians kill large numbers of game animals at seasons when they ought to be protected, and there ought to be a stop put to it. They should be held amenable to the law the same as other people. But unless we make laws to prohibit the Indians from slaughtering and the unscrupulous pale faces from capturing, sealing and shipping it out of the state in car loads, and in bands of 150, we cannot long expect to retain our game.

I believe in the state having a park and stocking it with any and all kinds of game, but there is no need of it at present, as 75 per cent. of our state is a natural park, and with proper laws and observance of the same, our game will live and multiply for hundreds of years; and we would not have to go to remote New Hampshire, or to gaze through the railings of an enclosure at a bunch of elk that had become so tame in captivity that they would have to give them a kick to find out if they were alive.

There is no sport in shooting that which has been captured and does not fear man. The game is not protected by the state merely to be looked at, but so that its numbers may not be diminished, and all who are willing to observe the laws can repair to the hills at such seasons as the law provides and engage in the pursuit of the game, the harder and more difficult it is to get the more satisfaction it is to him it is who brings it to bag.

It might give Mr. Griffin the same pleasure and satisfaction to go out to the coral, select an elk, shoot it, and herald the tidings that he had killed an elk, as it would the sportsman who has looked forward all summer to a trip to the mountains, where he is in hopes that he will be fortunate enough to kill an elk. At last the time comes, and after all necessary preparations, he is off, the first morning after reaching the hunting grounds he is out with the first streak of dawn. The air is cold and frosty, an ideal morning as far as nature is concerned. The morning and the entire day is spent in looking for the noble game, but, although there is plenty of signs, he fails to get a shot. The next day and the next are spent in like manner, until the time to return home is near at hand, he feels that one more effort must be made. As he stands on some ridge and takes a survey of the country he is called to life by a whistle so clear and sweet that it sends the blood coursing through his veins, he needs no one to tell him the author of that whistle, although he has never heard it before, he knows at once it is an elk. His eyes are open, his foot is placed with the greatest care least the snapping of a twig alarm the game. At last he is in sight of the quarry, the rifle is raised, a careful sight along the barrel and at the report there is a crashing of brush, the elk has disappeared. He rushes to the spot and finds splashes of blood, he follows for perhaps 200 yards and there finds the old monarch. Ah! What satisfaction as he gazes on those sleek sides and views the magnificent antlers. He feels that he has got something to be proud of. He returns home with a feeling of pride and satisfaction that the killing of all the domesticated elk in the country could not give.

Sportsmen, let us protect our game, let us pass such laws as will be for the best interests of all. Let us prohibit the capture and sale of live game, let us become a source of profit to a few to the detriment of all others. We have an abundant supply of large game yet, and by giving the females proper protection, and limiting the number of males to be killed, the supply may be continued, and we will not be compelled to pay from $75 to $100 car fare to get to some distant spot and feast our eyes on what was once ours. W. H. WRIGHT, Missoula, Mont., Jan. 18.

EVERY RACE.

The Favorites Took All in Sight at Frisco Yesterday.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 18.—This was a good day for the favorites and they won every race. Mutiner, a 6 to 1 shot, crowded Idaho Chief in the second and with a jockey up would have won.
