DR. DOUGLAS IS DEAD

The Well-Known Physician Passes Away With No Sign of Agony.

AN HONORED G. A. R. VETERAN

He Was Also a Mason and a Member of the Knights of Pythias—A Wife and Three Daughters Mourn His Death.

Dr. George C. Douglas died yesterday morning in this city at his home on Main street. Death came to him in his sleep; from the repose of life he passed into the sleep eternal, so quietly, so peacefully that no one was aroused, and no sign left to indicate that he had suffered any passing pain.

He was indisposed during the previous afternoon, though in the morning he had been about his professional duties, in the afternoon he remained at home. Dr. Leiser prescribed for him, and he felt relief from the pain which he had felt in his stomach and, after a social call, Dr. Leiser went away. Dr. Douglas spent the evening with his family and at the hour of retiring went to his room instead of remaining, as usual, with his daughter, Emily, who has been ill for several days. Mrs. Douglas relieved him at the daughter's bedside.

When Mrs. Douglas went to call him, about 7 o'clock, the doctor lay as though sleeping, with his finger along his nose, a familiar position often assumed by the doctor when deep in thought. Being unable to arouse him, Mrs. Douglas summoned aid. Dr. Spelman and Dr. Leiser responded to the call, but when they arrived they agreed that he had been dead for several hours. Rigor mortis had fastened upon him.

Dr. Douglas came to Anaconda last November with his family from Deer Lodge, though he had himself made it his home for about one year previous to that time. During his short residence in Anaconda many warm friends had become attached to him, for he had no enemies. A courtly gentleman, strict in the ethics of his profession, devoted to his country with pure and intense patriotism, true to his God, his family and his friends, he had everywhere the respect of all who knew him. His years of army service had, perhaps, an influence upon his personal appearance, for in his favorite cloak of blue and the military slouch hat he wore, he was every inch a soldier. He maintained the dignity born of his authority, but he was as gentle as a child and as attentive as possible to the want of every patient, of high or low degree, that called upon his services. As county physician, he had many who told him their woes, real and imaginary, and all were given the kindest of care that he could bestow. Many and many are they who received at his hands throughout his long career gratuitous medical treatment, which was the purest of charity.

Dr. Douglas was a scholar not only in medicine, but also in the world of politics, science and literature. His literary ability was often recognized by Eastern magazines, and articles on medicine, finance and politics from his pen have been printed by the Forum, Arena and other journals of his profession.

At the meeting of the State Medical association last April Dr. Douglas read an able paper upon "Preventive Medicine," which was highly spoken of by all the physicians who were there assembled. He was elected a member of the judiciary committee of the association.

He was born in Rensselaer county, New York, Oct. 24, 1824, and was therefore 67 years of age. His early life was spent at Albany, where he attended school. He studied medicine in Vermont and at Ann Arbor, Michigan, and at the time of the breaking out of the civil war enlisted in the surgical corps.

He served for some time at Bellevue hospital, New York, as assistant surgeon, and was transferred to the front doing field duty with General McClellan through the Peninsular campaign. During that memorable retreat he performed such service, courageously resuming time after time a company of wounded men and remaining with them when capture was imminent, but at last bringing them safe within the union lines, that he received special mention in general orders, thus being commended by his commanding officer.

Later in the smallpox hospital he served with a bravery equal to that with which he had faced the bullets and the prison pens of the enemy. When the war was over he was mustered out at the grand review in Washington. Shortly after he reenlisted in the regular army and went to the frontier in Texas and afterward in California as surgeon. He was married in 1866, at Bedford, Pa., to Miss Laura Washbaugh, who is now bereaved by his death.

Dr. Douglas resigned from the regular army in 1876 and located in Salt Lake. While there he was elected department commander of the G. A. R. at a time when Utah and Montana were one department. He was warmly attached to the order and it grew rapidly under his command. In 1885 he removed to Deer Lodge, which was his home except for a brief time at Basin, ever since that year until coming to Anaconda.

The bereaved family consists of Mrs. Douglas and three daughters—Miss Douglas and Misses Virginia and Emily Douglas.

He was a member of the Masonic order, the Knights of Pythias and the G. A. R. The funeral arrangements have not been completed, but will probably be held on Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Greek Monks

The surviving occupants of these four remaining retreats are Basilian monks of the Orthodox Greek church, and are nearly all men that have lived in the world and grown weary of it. They do not have to go through any definite course of study or to serve a regular novitiate, as in the Catholic church, and most of them are only given the lesser habit. Each of these monasteries is independent of the others and governs itself. The head of each community is known as the Hegumenos (Superior), while the other monks are called Klogeri (good old men). The habit of the order consists of a black tunic reaching to the order, with a leather girdle and a high, stiff biretta called kamlambon. The monks are always bearded, in accordance with the Greek custom, and usually long-haired, and look rather like sailors or rustics

Don't Make Any Mistake For Example

There's more money lost in this country by mistaken investments than by any other cause. Wrecks of financial ventures cumber the mercantile ocean and strew the shores of the business sea. There's just one true compass to sell by, and just one anchor to trust to. The former is cash up, and the latter cash down. That's how we do our business and that is what our business lets us do.
