MUSIC IN THE SCHOOLS

Mrs. Flavin Says the Teachers Should Encourage Singing.

SPECIAL TEACHER NEEDED

Superintendent Hendricks Talks Entertainingly on Didactics—The Institute Is Exceedingly Interesting and Profitable to All Present.

The second day of the teachers' institute proved to be a very satisfactory one. The Institute bids fair to be the most profitable and most ably conducted in the history of institutes in Montana. At the opening exercises Mrs. Flavin spoke on "Music in the Public Schools."

"I wonder if there is any one in this room who will question the importance of music in the public schools. It is astonishing to find a city the size of Butte, with its prosperity and progressiveness, and no special teacher of music in the public schools. Something is wrong. It must be a false idea of economy, for it certainly is not the fault of the teachers. I know they would gladly welcome a special teacher. However, the regular branches are doing the best they can with the music under the circumstances. So much is expected of the regular teachers nowadays. They must know something about music, art, physical culture, etc., and they need the help and counsel of specialists. Many, many people of wide musical experience give as their opinion that if the schools cannot afford to place the work in charge of special teachers, leave it out entirely. But think of a schoolroom entirely devoid of singing—it would be like a garden all grass and no flowers. Every day we are living examples right here in Butte of the benefits to children of a mature life from instruction in music in the public schools.

"It is to be deplored that so few teachers realize the responsibility that rests with them in training children's voices. There are scores of voices ruined in the public schools every year, and such wrong habits formed that sometimes they can never be overcome. How often we hear these worn-out expressions, 'Let the voice out, sing right out.' Remember, teachers, that you want music, and not noise; that a person's ability to sing well is not measured by the quantity but by the quality of the voice. The vocal chords are like pieces of elastic—they can be stretched and stretched, but you are going to stretch them once too often some day, and then the singing voice goes with them, never to be the same. And probably the children's parents wonder why it is they can no longer sing as before. Then they go to hunting up excuses, and they say, he, or she, must have lost their voice when they had the measles or whooping cough, and they never really do know the true reason.

"Now, a word in regard to the songs you select for the children. Be careful about the words. Give the children songs that have some thought which they can remember, which they can understand and will interest them. To tell them stories about the songs is of little interest and concentrate their thoughts. Teachers, always bear time with your hands when the children are singing. This should be done even in the primary grades. Make your classes sing about something. About how many songs should be given in a year? This depends very much upon the children. If they take up the songs very readily, do not give more than one until they are tired of it they cannot sing. Let it rest awhile and try another. About 18 songs in the first six months of school is a good number. Know the songs thoroughly and enter into the spirit of them. Here, as is said by a leading German author, 'repetition is the mother of excellence' but it must be repetition with a constant effort to improve. Miss Clark moved to the new school building and entered into the spirit of the musical nations of the earth until music is taught systematically and universally in our public schools. We scarcely realize how far behind Germany, France, England, and many other countries we are in this respect.

Superintendent Hendricks spoke on "Didactics" as follows: "We may not always realize it, or may not care to acknowledge it, but the child is a creature of habit, and habits from all classes of society are invariably sent to the public schools to learn to read, write and compute as the means of acquiring knowledge. The so-called development lesson, catch studies, etc., are helpful as incidentals, but are harmful when mistaken as essentials. The advocate of nature studies who turns the schools out to ramble in the hills and valleys forgets that the purpose of the school is mostly to get away from the nature that leads to idleness and aimlessness. The system of instruction that depends solely upon excitement and novelty and entertainment is neither practical, helpful nor sensible."

Miss Clara Corbin, in "Physical Culture," took up the wand drill and dumb bell exercises, in accordance with the outline of physical culture in use in the public schools of this city.

Miss Ruth Gould had charge of the several classes in drawing, working on a model and objects based on the sphere and cylinder.

President Sanders of the state normal discussed the development of numbers, application of fractions and percentages, and in reading, the various methods of teaching readings to pupils, and devices for maintaining the interest of the class, and the benefits of good oral reading.

Professor Foote of the Butte Business college outlined his discussion on standard clauses and modifiers in language, and the value of maps, map-drawing and moulding to fix locality in the children's minds and maintain interest in the study of geography.

Miss Gould will speak this morning at 9 o'clock in the high school auditorium on "Art in the Public School." The ladies of the city are cordially invited to attend.

HIS ABSENCE EXPLAINED

The Associated Press Report Sent Out From Butte Did Him Serious Injustice—Apparently It Was an Intentional Act of the Sender.

An example of the untruthful, unreliable and apparently malicious reports furnished the associated press from Butte is the following relative to the Boston & Montana real-estate:

"Butte, Mont., April 7.—The legal battle over the real-estate of the Boston & Montana company is liable to come to a sensational head to-morrow. The receiver was appointed in December, but motions and legal stays have kept him from getting possession.

"Judge Ciancy has made an order that the sheriff put the receiver in possession. The sheriff, who is in sympathy with the Boston & Montana, has disappeared, and his under-sheriff will not act without further legal advice. He has been directed to obey the court's orders or show cause why he should not be punished for contempt. The mines and smelters of the company are closed down, and hundreds of men are out of work. Deputy sheriffs are posted about the different properties, and no one is allowed in the grounds."

The fact is, and was well known to the man on the Mine and the Columbia and as far as Vancouver, yesterday he was again in Spokane and telephoned to his office in Butte that the object of his trip had not been attained, and that he was about to proceed to Seattle and would go from there to San Francisco. He was uncertain when he would return to Butte.
