Plot Discovered. CORNER, Jan. 28.—The plot against the life of the King of Greece is discovered. It was to murder him on his journey.

Blaine's Policy Reversed. NEW YORK, Jan. 27.—The Herald's Washington special says Blaine's belligerent South American policy has been reversed by President Arthur. Prescott has been instructed not to make dictatorial demands on Chili, which Blaine had ordered.

The Work of a Dancing Bear. LAFAYETTE, Ind., Jan. 27.—The community is excited by learning that a dancing bear, which has been in charge of two Italians, escaped from its keepers just outside of the city, and was killed by a family which attacked. The Italians are missing, and from the discovery of bits of their clothing in the vicinity it is feared both were killed.

Failures. NEW YORK, Jan. 27.—R. G. Dunn & Co.'s mercantile agency reports failures throughout the country during the week as follows: Eastern and Western States, 48; Southern, 7; Middle, 2; Pacific Coast and Territories, 10; New York City, 9. Failures in the South are still excessive. In New York City no stoppage of any importance occurred.

The Interior Secretaryship.

NEW YORK, Jan. 27.—The Graphic's Washington correspondent says: Some friends of the President state that he will make important appointments next week, chief of which will be two to the Cabinet, and that Booth is talked of for the Secretaryship of the Interior. Booth's friends claim that he is stronger on the Pacific Coast than Sargent. These friends do not say what the President thinks of a proposition, and so far as known the consideration of the matter is confined chiefly to persons who do not have the making of cabinet officers. Sargent's friends do not seem to be disturbed about the report. They say that Miller has reason to be assured that he will be appointed. Logan is said to have expressed confidence that Sargent would not be disappointed. Logan indorsed Chaffee, but believes he stands no chance.

About Mrs. Scoville.

CHICAGO, Jan. 27.—Mrs. Scoville who has kept herself aloof from the reporters since the news of the conclusion of the Guiteau trial was asked last night if there was any truth in the report that her husband was about to apply for a divorce on the ground of insanity. She expressed great surprise and indignantly repudiated the suggestion as ridiculous and untrue. She showed this disposition.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26, 2 p. m.

Mrs. Francis North, Chicago. Have written fully. Nothing new remain quietly at home. Imperative. Signed, Geo. Scoville. He put "imperative" in because he feared she would start east on receiving news from her brother J. W. Guiteau that the verdict was guilty and could not be otherwise under the Judge's charges. She didn't think the verdict settled anything, but it was providential for it probably saved Charles from a mob. The next time this case is tried the result will be different.

The Victories of Boreas.

BOSTON, Jan. 27.—A heavy gale today from the west, northwest did considerable damage in portions of Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont. It was very severe at Pottsville, Mass. The Congregational Church steeple was blown down and another steeple badly damaged and much loss occasioned by the tearing up of trees, fences, and demolition of chimneys, signs, etc. Three persons were injured. Mrs. Godfrey, probably fatally. At Adams and Cheshire $1,000 worth of property was destroyed. At North Adams a one-story brick building 800 feet long belonging to the Seyboric works containing some valuable machinery was blown down entirely from its foundation, the bricks scattering in all directions. The walls of a two-story brick building belonging to the same company are so damaged that 200 feet in length will have to be rebuilt and new roofs laid on the whole works. The loss is said to reach $100,000. The steam engine house at the Cheshire and ice houses attached to the property of the Housatonic Ice Company blew down with damage to the mill and covered the highway bridge. Bartwell's ferry is completely demolished. At Newberryport about 10 feet of the tin roof with the timbers attached, blew off the Grand Army Hall and crashed in the top of a dwelling house.

At Nashua, N. H., a four-story shoe factory building was raised two feet out of perpendicular and caused two hundred workmen in it to stampede. Julian Clark jumped from the second-story window, and is thought to be fatally injured. Others were bruised. At Rochester, N. H., the large exhibition building of the Rochester Fair Association was overturned. It was filled with carriages, which were all more or less injured. At Lewiston, Maine, chimneys were blown down, plate glass windows blown in, horse cars overturned and church steeples started. At Rockland, Maine, the roof of the gas house and many chimneys were destroyed. At Gardiner, Me., the ice house of the old Orchard Ice Co. was destroyed.

Comment of the Chinese Bill.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27.—The Daily News contains the following editorial paragraph concerning the bill which was reported yesterday from the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations: The bill which was reported yesterday from the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations is the bill which Senator Miller, of California, has introduced for the purpose of prohibiting Chinese emigration, and is what might be termed, "Thorough." It prohibits so severely that the tendency will be, if it is adopted, to neglect its enforcement. There may be men on the Pacific coast who can out-kenney Kenney on the Chinese question. It is to be hoped the Republican Senator from California is not one of them.

Judge Porter Congratulated.

MILWAUKEE, Jan. 27.—Some admirers of Judge Porter sent him the following, upon hearing of the verdict in the Guiteau case: "Verdict of guilty will go thundering down the ages."

Political Gossip.

NEW YORK, Jan. 28.—A Washington special states that Judge Blatchford is now most prominently spoken of as Chief Justice Hunt's successor; that Crowley does not want the Secretaryship of the Treasury, and that Judge Folger will remain in his present position.

Searching for De Long.

ST. PETERSBURG, Jan. 28.—The latest from Irkutsk says Engineer Melville has proceeded to the mouth of the river Lena to resume search for Lieut. Commander De Long with the greatest energy aided by the natives. Provisions are plentiful; so the search can be prolonged. The Captain of the steamer Lena accompanies Engineer Melville.

Explosion and Fire.

WATERVILLE, Maine, Jan. 28.—The boiler in the mill of the Kennebec Farming Co., Fairfield, exploded this morning with terrific force. The son of ex-Warden Rice was killed. Jno. Avery, foreman, J. Lemar, fireman and Isaac Farkey, engineer, were buried in the ruins. Geo. McKeown and John Smith were badly wounded. Several others were slightly injured. The under work of the mill is on fire and still burning.

Attempt at Murder and Suicide.

PETERSBURG, Jan. 28.—A young man named Lee Hunting, living near West Middlesex, met two lady friends, and, without provocation, fired twice, wounding both. They managed to reach their home. Four of their gentlemen friends found Lee. He made a desperate resistance, but finding capture inevitable, blew the top of his head off. All the families are eminently respectable. The motive of the crime is shrouded in mystery.

Those Bloody Mormons.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28.—Secretary Kirkwood, referring to the rumors that the Mormons are inciting Indians in the West, said he had very little faith in the story. While it was undoubtedly true that the Mormons might seek the friendship of Indians in the event of trouble with the United States, it could not be possible the Mormons would attempt to defy the United States Government, as an effort of that sort would have a very different result from that which attended the early campaigns in Salt Lake.

Diaphanous.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28.—J. E. Hayden who claimed once to have saved the life of President Hayes from an assassin spent a good deal of time around Guiteau's cell, and gave him points about Corkhill and Porter which questions Guiteau used in the court, notably about Corkhill's washbill, etc. He also put a newspaper in the jury room so that the verdict of the jury might be vitiated on the ground that they had read newspapers. Spite against Corkhill for fancied wrongs was his motive and he alone condemned the verdict.

Scoville Asking for a New Trial.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28.—In the criminal court this morning Scoville and Reed, counsel for Guiteau, appeared. The former inquired of the Court in respect to the form of his bill of exceptions, whether he would be compelled to accept specifically or whether general exception would suffice. Judge Cox stated that under the practice of the Court, he would have to accept specifically. Scoville then stated that he had intended to file a motion for a new trial, but would like to have until Monday, and Scoville stated that in that case he would file his motion this afternoon in the Clerk's office. The District Attorney asked the Court to assign Tuesday next for argument, but upon the representation from Scoville that he could scarcely be able to enter upon the argument then, the Court declined to fix the time.

How a Little Girl Suggested the Invention of the Telescope.

Some of the most important discoveries have been made accidentally; and it has happened to more than one inventor, who has long been searching after some new combination or material for carrying out some pet idea, to hit upon the right thing at last by mere chance. A lucky instance of this kind was the discovery of the principle of the telescope.

Nearly three hundred years ago, there was living in the town of Middleburg, on the island of Walcheren, in the Netherlands, a poor optician named Hans Lippersheim. One day, in the year 1608, he was working in his shop, his children helping him in various ways, or romping about and amusing themselves with the tools and objects lying on his workbench, when suddenly his little girl exclaimed: "Oh, papa! See how near the steeple comes!"

Half-startled by this announcement, the honest Hans looked up from his work, curious to know the cause of the child's amusement. Turning toward her, he saw that she was looking through two lenses, one held close to her eye, and the other at arm's length; and calling his daughter to his side, he noticed that the eye-lens was plano-concave (or flat on one side and hollowed out on the other), while the one held at a distance was plano-convex (or flat on one side and bulging on the other). Then, taking the two glasses, he repeated his daughter's experiment, and soon discovered that she had chanced to hold the lenses apart at their exact focus, and this had produced the wonderful effect that she had observed. His quick wit and skilled invention saw in this accident a wonderful discovery. He immediately set about making use of his new knowledge of lenses, and ere long he had fashioned a tube of pasteboard, in which he set the glasses firmly at their exact focus.

This rough tube was the germ of that great instrument, the telescope, to which modern science owes so much. And it was on October 22, 1608, that Lippersheim sent to his government three telescopes made by himself, calling them "instruments by means of which to see at a distance." Not long afterwards another man, Jacob Adriansz, or Metius, of Alkmaar, claimed to have discovered the principle of the telescope two years earlier than Hans Lippersheim; and it is generally acknowledged that to one of these two men belongs the honor of inventing the instrument. But it seems certain that Hans Lippersheim had never known or heard of the discovery made by Adriansz, and so, if Adriansz had not lived we still should owe to Hans Lippersheim's quick wit, and his little daughter's lucky meddling, one of the most valuable and wonderful of human inventions.—St. Nicholas for February, 1892.

"FARMER" PEEL.

Life Sketch of A Very Notorious Desperado. San Francisco Stock Report.

John E. Bull, noted as the man who killed "Farmer" Peel in Montana, was recently killed at Denver. Langford Peel was in his day considered the most desperate fighting man on the Pacific Coast. He was a dead shot and of iron nerve, and had faced the six-shooter in the hands of an adversary scores of times, several times bringing down his man. When drunk he was a dangerous individual and a terror to all who were near him. In the early days of the Cattle Company he occasionally "took the town." When on the warpath, he would charge through the streets with a six-shooter in each hand, driving the people before him like so many sheep, and defying the authorities. There was an ample force of police in the town, but when Peel was on the rampage the policemen, from the chief down, had business in old tunnels on the outskirts of town. He was not a powerful man physically, but so reckless and such a dead shot that it was worth a man's life to cross his path when he was in his cups. Peel and Bull were friends and partners. While on the road to Montana in 1867, a quarrel arose between two disreputable women who accompanied them. The men took up the quarrel and became enemies. They separated on the road, but met shortly after in Helena. One night Bull went into the principal public gambling saloon of the town, where he met Peel, who called him up and engaged him in conversation. After a few words, Peel called Bull a hard name and slapped his face. Bull said he was unarmed, and Peel told him to get hell himself and come back fighting. Bull went to his cabin and procured his pistol and was coming down the main street when Peel emerged from the door with his woman on his arm. Bull immediately fired and Peel fell wounded on the sidewalk, his pistol having fallen from his hand before he could shoot. Bull then walked up and fired two more shots into Peel as he lay on the sidewalk, and then walked away and gave himself up to the United States marshal. He was tried for murder and acquitted. The killing of Peel created a great sensation in the mining regions of the Pacific Coast, where he was known as the champion desperado of the mountains.
