

Cablegrams.

BERLIN, November 1.—The government appropriation to explore the wilds of Central Africa and encourage discoveries in that country, has been increased from 75,000 to 100,000 marks.

LONDON, November 1.—The committee authorized by the House of Commons to investigate the imprisonment of E. Dwyer Gray, of which committee Gladstone is chairman, and which includes fifteen of the most prominent members of the House, has decided that press representatives shall not be admitted to its deliberations at the first session held to-day.

PARIS, November 1.—A few days since placards were posted in Faubourg St. Antonio giving minute details as to how houses could be burned down or blown up with a view to bring justice to bear upon their landlords. The placards bore intrinsic evidence of being the work of educated revolutionists. The police took them down as soon as discovered. Since then the cabinet makers have gone on a strike, and fears are entertained by the authorities of a riot in that quarter. The troops have been confined to the barracks.

CONSTANTINOPLE, November 2.—The Council of Ministers at the Porte have decided to refuse the request that the British Government establish coal depots at the head of the province of Yemen.

LONDON, November 3.—A yacht foundered off Calais in the English channel. There were six persons on board and all were drowned.

In the House of Commons to-day Hugh Childers, Secretary of State for the War Department, said that General Woolsey had stated that the English troops were justified in attending the Holy Carpet ceremony, because their presence was necessary to preserve order.

The English Cabinet Council has been suddenly summoned to meet to-day. It has not yet transpired what the purpose was of such a hasty meeting.

The King of Corea has issued an edict declaring disorders in his dominion. The trouble is evidently due to his own maladministration in government affairs, and ordering that the insurgents who had been captured be released. This step was taken by the King for the purpose of assuring the allegiance of his subjects to himself in case the governments of China or Japan should renew their attempts to secure the annexation of Corea.

CAIRO, November 3.—In consequence of the vagueness of the telegrams received from Egyptian sources respecting the military operations about Soudan, three officers of the British army have been dispatched to the scene of conflict, with instructions to report fully the military situation and prospects, and to inspect the roads of Suakin and Kharطوم, and also report as to the possibility of placing a fortress at Khartoum in a state of defence in case it becomes necessary.

BERLIN, November 3.—The exports of Germany to the United States have reached the unusually large total of 56,000,000 marks. The National Zeitung of this city gives publicity to a note, evidently inspired by the highest authority, in which it sets forth that nothing in the range of possibility would shake off England in Egyptian matters more than the return of Gambetta to power.

In the Federal Council a bill has been submitted proposing to place the officers of the army on the same footing in regard to pensions as civil employes hold.

PARIS, November 3.—Revolutionary manifestations were posted last night in the communistic organ, and explosive materials were discovered in a coal depot and telegraph office at St. Pourcain.

A Duel With Horsewhips.

NEW YORK, October 25.—A Times special from Greensboro, N. C., says: A novel duel was fought this morning in the lower edge of Guilford county, between Ralph Johnston and Jack Williams, two young farmers of that section and rivals for the affections of a young woman. Bad blood had existed between them for some time, and ended in harsh words the day before yesterday. Soon afterwards Johnston sent a friend to Williams with a letter demanding the retraction of certain language used. Williams declined to withdraw his remarks, and further correspondence resulted in an agreement to meet in hostile combat. The articles were drawn up, and specified horsewhips as the weapons to be used, something not heretofore recognized by the code in North Carolina. These weapons were chosen, it is understood, in order that the parties could evade the penalties of the dueling law, which does not specify horsewhips as deadly weapons. Under the conditions of the fight each man was required to stand upon a line traced upon the ground, making the distance between the combatants about three feet. They were armed with heavy horsewhips, specially selected for the fight, and the second of each duelist was supplied with an extra whip, to be used by his principal in the event of the wearing out or breaking of the weapon first used. The combatants met this morning according to the agreement. The lines were made of rope fastened to the ground with long staples. After a vain attempt had been made by the seconds to adjust the difficulty, the men took their places for the fight. Both were in their shirt sleeves, the provisions of the fight being that no coat, vest or undershirt should be worn. At seven o'clock the question was asked: "Gentlemen, are you ready?" Each man nodded his head. The command, "Strike!" was then given, and the duelists fell to blows with a vigor. Although the blows given were heavy and fast neither man flinched. Upon the hands and faces of the combatants great welts soon rose. They wielded their weapons with one hand, then with both, and occasionally one or the other was forced, by a desperate assault of his adversary, to fall back from his line. After fighting for half an hour time was called, and the men, who were nearly exhausted, were given a brief resting spell. The fight continued for three hours, with short intervals for rest. The seconds finally decided that the requirements of the code had been complied with, and forced the duelists to desist. It is understood that Johnston was more severely hurt than his adversary, and that there is not a place on his body that is not covered with welts. Many of the blows gashed the flesh in a horrible manner. Williams is almost in the same condition, and both men are now suffering terribly from the effects of their wounds, which are of such a nature that they can hardly lie down. Their feet are almost the only part of their bodies not covered with welts. No arrests have been made, and the friends of the duelists are endeavoring to hush the matter up.

POOR LITTLE REDDY.

The Tragic Memorial of an Unknown Boot-black.

[Cincinnati Gazette.]

Few people pause to think what unwritten histories, what mournful tragedies are hidden away in the dusty files at police headquarters. The rogues' gallery is to many simply a collection of scamps' portraits, and all the blighted hopes, the aspirations, forever dead, the promises of youth never to be fulfilled are passed unnoted. Those ponderous books wherein are written down the annals of crime in few, bare words, such as clerks employ: the mere fact that such and such a person suddenly disappeared from home and was never seen again; or, that, weary of the battle of life, some hopeless soul threw down his arms and, by his own act, plunged uncalled into eternity. The shadowy sketches of misery and suffering are passed by them unnoticed, with never a thought of the more than realistic romances that are there, of the fearful struggles and trials that man has endured before he fell. They gaze upon that horrible collection of things associated with crime, bits of the rope with which men have been hung, knives and pistols that murderers have used, bullets dug out of dead men's skulls, with a ghoul's curiosity, but their fancy never carries them back to the men themselves. This museum is ever on the increase. It was only yesterday that the mail brought to the office of the Chief of Police a narrow piece of board, upon which was rudely carved "Little Reddy Cleveland." It was accompanied by a postal card from North Vernon, Ind., which stated that on the previous day a boot-black, who was stealing a ride on the cars, had accidentally fallen under the wheels and had been mangled almost beyond recognition. Near him lay his box of brushes and blacking, which was the only thing that could possibly give a clue as to his identity, and the authorities at that place had therefore cut out that portion of the box which had the name of the owner upon it, and forwarded it here in the thought that the police of this city might possibly know something of the dead boy. No one knew him. The little bit of board was black with wear, over the letters was still the traces of soil left by the shoe of his last customer, and over it all were the crimson stains made by the blood of the unknown wanderer. Poor little Reddy, dying away from home, if he ever had a home; whether he came or whence he was going, alike a mystery. No mother to weep over him, for perhaps he never knew a mother, or sadder still, never what love was, and in the inscrutable wisdom of an unseen and a doubted Providence he was snatched away from a life of crime and hardships ere the world had blighted the fresh, fair flowers whose germs are implanted in every human heart. Poor little Reddy! No friend to close your eyes. Some coroner, to whom an inquest simply means so much money, will gaze on your mangled body, talk learnedly of how you came to your death, nobody's business but your own—very true, perhaps; and then without a single tear being shed, it may be without the comfort of a ten word prayer, what is left of you will be placed in the roughest of pine coffins and buried in some lonely, desolate potter's field, without a stone to mark the place. And so you end, and what you have done and what you might have done end with you. Quick oblivion is your fate, and that little piece of board on which, in some moment of idleness, you roughly cut with a jackknife, borrowed, perhaps, will be your only monument. It will be stored away in some drawer full of dusty papers, and will lie undisturbed until those deep crimson spots will have become black and faded away, until age and decay shall have done their sure work, and your last record, Little Reddy, will have crumbled into dust.

Union Pacific Passenger Business.

Assistant General Passenger Agent Jones, of the Union Pacific, now in Helena, has traveled extensively over branches of the main line during the past three weeks and has personally familiarized himself with many matters of importance assisting to the intelligent and comprehensive management of his office. Mr. Jones is a quick, keen observer, and grasps situations with that clearness and promptitude that shows him to possess an alert and practically drilled mind. He has traveled over the newly constructed part of the Oregon Short Line, has visited Hailey and other growing mining towns in Idaho as yet not reached by the road, and has passed over the entire length of the Utah & Northern, gaining thorough information of passenger needs and requirements, and gaining a budget of information concerning two Territories tributary to the Union Pacific system that will be invaluable to his department. The gentleman has a lively appreciation of the solidity of Helena and the splendid future before it. The longer he remains here the stronger will become his conviction that the Capital City is the Hub of Montana in wealth, in commerce and trade, in mining, in stock growing, and in all the industries contributing to an important, staple and enduring community. Col. Jones will probably not depart on his return journey to Omaha until the fore part of next week.

—It is hard to realize how these things get out, but, though rather embarrassing, the following will serve to advance the interests of the Territory. About all the young men of Bismarck have already purchased through tickets to Helena: "The country can expect to be greeted at any time with the news of the total annihilation of the male portion of Helena, M. T. The young ladies there have organized a kissing club, and jealousy is already a foot deep all over the town.—Bismarck Tribune.

—George B. Smythe, Jr., for the past three years connected with the Union Pacific freight office, has been appointed agent at Deer Lodge, for which place he will leave in a few days. The good wishes of his many friends will follow him to his new home.—Pilot.

HOPSTETTER'S CELEBRATED STOMACH BITTERS. Old fashioned remedies are rapidly giving ground before the advance of this conquering specific, and old fashioned ideas in regard to depletion as a means of cure, have been quite exploded by the success of the great renovant, which tones the system, tranquilizes the nerves, neutralizes malarial, depraves and enriches the blood, restores the liver when dormant, and promotes a regular habit of body. For sale by all druggists and dealers generally.

STAYED OR STOLEN—$20 REWARD. The above reward will be paid for the arrest and evidence leading to the conviction of the party or parties who stole a bay mare and bay colt from the undersigned, on or about the evening of the 28th inst. Or we will pay $15 for the return of said mare and colt. We have also a white mare, which we suppose was taken at the same time, or she strayed in attempting to follow the mare and colt. The mare and male were poor, have been worked hard, and are branded with a small dim brand, as follows: N B on left shoulder. May be other brands upon them. The colt is in good order, and about nine months old. N. BENNETT & CO., French Woman's Ranch, on Little Blackfoot. October 31st, 1882. d&wif-nov2
