CROSSLAND GAINS TIME.

Given Leave of Absence and Told to Resign—Leniency Extended at Request of Friends in Missouri Conflicting Official Reports.

After considering thoroughly all elements in the case, the state department has decided that instead of peremptorily recalling Dr. Crossland, minister to Liberia, it will grant him a leave of absence and order him to the United States. The leave will be granted with the distinct understanding that upon his arrival in this country he will immediately tender his resignation. It was stated in these dispatches several days ago that the department intended to recall or peremptorily remove him. This was the intention at that time. Since then Missourians who were interested in the affair called at the department of state and told the secretary that Crossland was without funds and his recall or dismissal while still in Africa would leave him stranded there without the means to reach the United States.

While the department does not hesitate to say that there is no sympathy for Crossland, it was decided to be the part of wisdom to have him return to this country. The department officials did not relish the idea of a former representative of this country being stranded in the country to which he was formerly accredited. The orders for his return have been sent, and the leave which he has been given is two months. Remaining in the pay of this government for two months longer will enable him to meet any obligations he has contracted while at Monrovia and secure passage to this country.

The department has received an extended written explanation of the shooting incident in which Dr. Crossland severely wounded T. J. R. Faulkner. In this explanation Crossland claims he only fired in self-defense and did not fire until Faulkner assaulted him with a razor. The minister also says that the differences grew out of trouble over the lease of the building in which the legation is housed. The minister says that he first boarded at the house and then the lease for the building was transferred to him at the suggestion of Faulkner.

The independent investigation conducted by the department does not entirely bear out the statement the minister has made. The officials learn, or are informed, from what is believed to be a reliable source, that the shooting was the direct outgrowth of attentions which were paid to Faulkner's wife by Crossland. The department has information that the secretary of the legation, Joseph R. Surgeon, is afraid of Crossland, and he states that Crossland terrorizes him by keeping a revolver on his desk at all times. The messenger of the legation tells a similar story. The officers of the department also say that complaints have been received from residents of the capital of Liberia, but the nature of these complaints are personal rather than of an official character, so the department does not wish to make them public. No action has been taken relative to George W. Ellis, the Kansas City colored man who went to Liberia with Crossland and who was named for secretary of the legation. It is probable, however, that the nomination will be withdrawn immediately after the holidays.

Isaac Hayes Given Tremendous Cheer.

By standing Jack Monroe off for four rounds, the crowd goes into a fit of cheer for the colored champion in another round. Ike would have sent his man into the land of Nod. He showed to be much the stronger man at the finish of the fourth round. From all sides and corners could be heard encouraging words for Ike, and Ike did go after him like a hungry ox would a stack of hay. Munroe tried hard and faithful to put Ike out at the finish, but the colored champion was fighting like a demon and sent Munroe to his knees several times. In fact, Ike scored the most points, considering that Munroe is much the younger man and has at least thirty pounds the best in weight. Munroe showed plenty of nerve and seemed to have a cake walk in the second round, but Ike gained courage from the many yells of go to him, Ike, and got down to business and came out within a whisker of putting the coming world's champion.

Milwaukee, Wis., Jan. 7.

Mrs. N. A. Yancy passes into immortality. She lived in Milwaukee and was beloved by many friends, who mourn her untimely departure. This sad news was received by Mrs. Nelson last Wednesday. The surviving members of the family are six daughters, who are Mrs. A. Nelson, of this city, Mrs. B. J. Fuller, of Fairfield, Iowa, Mrs. Lula Brown, of Watumau, Iowa, Mrs. Ida M. Clair of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, and Mrs. Clara B. Pindexter, of Milwaukee. Altho' Mrs. Yancy had been in a feeble condition for a long time, yet her sudden demise came as a great shock to the family. Our sympathy goes out to the remaining members of the family, and especially to those who live among us and cannot be present to pay the last sad rites to their departed mother. She had reached the declining years and in a few months would have witnessed her 71st birthday. While sadness and bereavement has clouded the homes of those who mourn departure, we trust that they will find consolation in those words, "Why should we mourn departed friends, or shake at death alarm, 'tis but the voice that Jesus sends to call us to his arms."

Mrs. C. P. Smith Entertained.

Mrs. C. P. Smith entertained at a dinner last Sunday, consisting of five courses, with wine. Mrs. Smith entertained a few friends, who were Mr. and Mrs. R. Lawrence and Mr. Charles F. Smith. The table was elaborately decorated with fancy chinaware, and the menu consisted of the very best the market affords.

TUTTLE WATCH TALK

Watches are not like wine—they do not improve with age. As well give a calendar for 1890 as a Christmas present in 1902 as a watch that is as much out of date as the calendar. Ours is positively the only entirely new, high-grade stock of Watches in the city—it is large and covers a wide range in value. Investigation will prove that for accurate movements, in new and beautiful cases, our prices are the lowest. In fact, they are really lower than the out-of-date kind can be bought for elsewhere.
