AMERICAN LABOR UNION

It is generally conceded by thinking men that the chief objection the employing class have to true trade unionism is its persistent, unremitting struggle for higher wages and a shorter workday.

The employing class perceives the tremendous power that federated trade unionism has generated, and knows that every time a state legislature or the federal government enacts laws favorable to the working people it is because the federated union movement in its entirety is behind them; like an elephant driver prodding his huge lumbering beast, it is prodding dilatory legislators on to a fulfillment of their sworn duty.

Congress and state legislatures respond to a compelling voice of labor because millions of men, thoroughly organized with solidarity pre-eminent speak in no uncertain tone. State and federal legislators fear the censure of millions of men thoroughly united, in the same proposition as they would scorn the same people if they were unorganized.

Every scrap of industrial legislation we now enjoy has been placed on the statute books by a united labor movement. Effective resistance to capitalistic oppressions and usurpations would not exist were it not that the American Labor Union has brought our working men into one great trade union family where an injury to one is truly the concern of all.

Word has been received from Billings to the effect that Stock Inspector Webb has arrested two men in that vicinity who are believed to have stolen a number of horses in this part of Montana. They had in their possession about 25 head of horses bearing the half-circle brand, which is owned by the Green Cattle company, and were unable to produce a bill of sale for the outfit.

Nothing to think of, nothing to write, no one came in to pick up a fight; nobody buried, nobody born, nobody run in for taking a horn. Oh! for a regular Thanksgiving tear; something to stir up the peace laden air; somebody beat to an inch of his life, someone to run off with another man's wife; someone to wear his eyes shaded blue; anything, anything so it is new.

There will be a football game here Saturday between the Chinook and Havre elevens. Both teams are in fine form, and the struggle for supremacy will without doubt be a fierce one. The Chinook eleven will be accompanied by a large and enthusiastic crowd of "rooters" who will see to it that their favorites lack nothing for encouragement. On the other hand, Havre lovers of the strenuous game will turn out in full force to cheer their champions of the gridiron on to victory.

According to data gathered by the state bureau of labor and industry, the output of coal mines in Chouteau county last year was 29,000 tons. Chouteau county is sixth on the list of coal producing counties in the state.—Chinook Opinion.
