VISITOR FROM A DISTANCE

Carrier Pigeon Brings Tidings From Far-Away Alaska.

Ben Rowland of the firm of Rowland & Lucier, proprietors of the Hoffman bar, had his attention attracted by a white pigeon Tuesday morning, which had fallen exhausted in front of his place of business. The bird made several attempts to fly, but was unable to make any distance, and Mr. Rowland easily captured it. Upon examination he discovered it to be a carrier pigeon and about its leg was tied with a silk cord over a piece of buckskin a rubber nipple. Inside the nipple, carefully rolled in an oiled paper, was this message, written with pen and ink on a paper:

"300 miles N. E. Dawson, Dec. 2, 1904. Bill, the old place, if note is received O. K. come at once. Lots of gold. Finder of this bird please notify Wm. Raymond, address 2152 Mission St., San Francisco, Calif. Signed: Jim Orr."

The pigeon's leg was badly irritated from the cord which the message was tied on with, and the flesh had been worn to the bone, showing that the bird had traveled a long distance. Mr. Howland immediately wrote to the party mentioned in the message, and it is possible that a bit of history will develop from the pigeon's visit to Havre.

Mr. Howland had a crate built for the bird, which has fully recovered from the effects of its journey, and is enjoying its new home at the Hoffman bar.
