"Difficulties are Things that Show What Men Are"

And the more difficulties a man can overcome—the stronger his character. Perhaps it is hard for you to save money, but don't admit that you can't. That word is a sign of weakness. Overcome the difficulties and save in spite of your tendencies to spend all you make. You'll be all the better for the effort.

COMPOUNDING FELONY CHARGE

Ivan S. Penef, who married a maid in Bulgaria, his native country, in 1911, left his wife, Mary, over there when he came to America. Later, he says, he sent her money to come to Montana and established a home in this county, but Mrs. Penef declined to leave Bulgaria and is still there. FINE RECORD OF TULLOCK

It is not in such spectacular episodes as this, however, that Mr. Tullock has shown his eminent fitness for the position of sheriff, but in his demonstration of executive ability and his complete familiarity with all the duties of the place. If a man can be said to have won a claim to the consideration of the voters through devotion to duty and intelligent, straightforward conduct during nearly three years in a subordinate position, then Guy Tullock should be elected the next sheriff of Fergus county by a most emphatic majority. Chris Beck was in the city from Buffalo Saturday.

WET SIDE GIVEN AT THE MYRTLE

Charles B. Ryan, former city attorney of Memphis, Tenn., addressed an audience that packed the Myrtle theatre Monday evening, presenting in the wet side of the prohibition argument. He was introduced by Otto Scheidt in a neat address and at once declared there were two sides to this prohibition question and voters should be willing to give it sufficient attention to understand it well before voting upon it. He laid great stress upon the proposition that the question was altogether an economic and political one and not a religious matter. Our forefathers had laid down the proposition that church and state were to be forever separate and distinct in this country. It stood today as it had through all the centuries. The question of prohibition was not bound up in religion at all. Vote Montana dry and it would depress the state. Washington voted dry and they said Seattle was prosperous. It was, but that prosperity did not come from prohibition. It came from the enormous increase in transportation and in trade due to the great war. It was unwise to undertake to regulate tastes and appetites by legislation and a man could not be changed by such means. If the law should be enacted it would introduce other evils but it would not terminate the consumption of liquors. Mr. Bryan dwelt at length upon the general conditions prevailing in Montana, of the great prosperity of the people and of the rosy future it had. It would be unwise, he contended, to make such a change as this proposed law contemplated. The experience of the states that had adopted prohibition demonstrated conclusively that prohibition did not prohibit. This statement was one the dregs did not like, yet it was true. Such a law, he claimed, made whisky drinkers out of those who formerly drank a glass of beer. One-seventh of all the liquor manufactured was consumed in the dry states. Mr. Bryan referred to the blind pigs boot-leggers and other evils that he said were always ushered in by prohibition. He contended that liquor had little to do with girls going wrong and with youthful delinquency in general. Fifty-eight per cent of such cases, he said, were the result of abnormal mental condition, while low wages also contributed. Mr. Bryan presented a lot of statistics for the purpose of answering those of the dregs as showing that conditions in dry localities were not superior in any way to conditions in wet sections. Home training, he contended, was what counted and the foundation for good or evil was laid in the training at home. P. J. Onweiler and C. L. Covall have just returned from a trip to Dawson county, where they have considerable interests. They report that the county is rapidly being settled up and everyone is anxiously awaiting the completion of the railway.

WOODMAN ON POLITICAL TREND IN MINNESOTA AND WISCONSIN

M. L. Woodman returned home Sunday evening from a business trip to Duluth, the Twin Cities, Milwaukee and other points in Minnesota and Wisconsin. He says that in Minnesota there is a tremendous Wilson sentiment and many of the shrewdest supporters of conditions in that usually rock-ribbed republican state are predicting that Wilson will get Minnesota's electoral vote. Everywhere he went, he found the Wilson men jubilant and the Hughes supporters downcast and dejected. The Wilson sentiment was even more pronounced in Wisconsin. He visited a number of old-time friends, practically all of whom are republicans and they are going to vote for Wilson almost to a man. Mr. Woodman reports a most enjoyable trip despite much bad weather which he encountered.

The meeting was a very interesting one and it is expected that the organization will prove of much benefit to the schools of the county in promoting a closer union through the contests and interchange of ideas. Homer McDonald, one of the well known farmers of Christina, was in the city yesterday, en route to Thermopolis, Wyoming, where he intends spending a few weeks recuperating from his severe sickness of the past six weeks.
