The Cock Wouldn't Have Crowed. There is a doorkeeper in the house of representatives who is from the Green Isle and is so proud of his native land that he never tires of telling of the famous men of the same extraction. Some of his assertions are in singular contradiction to history, and often the members of the house cajole him to converse upon this favorite theme for their own amusement. One day he said Saint Peter was an Irishman. "Well," said Benton McMillin of Tennessee, who was then in congress, "you can bet he was no negro; no colored man would have given that cock a chance to crow three times."
