

LOVE AND LIFE.

Love, we were happy, you and I, few words of love came between us...

A GOOD DANCER.

The men tell me that I am a pretty good dancer myself, which may or may not be the case...

Certainly, as it turned out, I did not dance with any other girls, but I don't see that that weakens my statement...

My fascinating partner and I never were formally introduced. The thing was quite simple, and I dare say the trick has been played thousands of times before...

So when a man came up from behind, bowed, addressed me by name and asked for a dance I felt distinctly glad to see him...

I couldn't do less than bow slightly and conclude that I had been introduced to him one of the previous years. I also saw fit to give him waltz "No. 7," which he asked for.

"And would you take compassion on me and give me another?" said he. "I know as few people here this year—at least so few that I care to dance with. Awfully obliged."

I suppose the compliment was a trifle broad, but it tickled me at the time, and I gave him the dance next after supper. "By the way," he said, "are you engaged for the first time?"

From that very first moment I told myself I was in luck's way. At the first sweep of the waltz I knew it. By the time we made the first round of the floor I felt that I could have danced on with that partner forever.

We danced the dance through to its very last lingering bar, and I said to my fascinating partner—a thing which I very rarely allow myself to say to any man after a waltz, lest it should make him unduly conceited—I said, "Thank you."

He turned the key in the lock and put it in his pocket. "Please sit down again. Sit down, I say, Miss Coyners, and don't make a noise. I don't think any one could hear you, even if you did scream out, but if you try to make the experiment I shall be forced to resort to unpleasant measures. In fact, I shall be compelled to cram part of this antimacassar into your mouth by way of a gag. So now you are reasonable."

"What do you mean?" I gasped, feeling very scared indeed. "No bodily harm to you unless you force me to it, that I swear upon my honor. And, really, after those delicious waltzes you have given me I haven't regretted having to offer you any annoyance whatever. But, Miss Coyners, business is business, and I have been at considerable trouble and expense to get here tonight to enjoy the pleasure of your society, and I feel sure you will understand that some recompense was due to me. I must trouble you for your diamonds."

"Oh, you cannot mean to—" "Miss Coyners, I am a man of my word, and let me remind you that time presses. My carriage is waiting for me outside, and I have a long drive ahead of me. Now, must I act as your lady's maid, or do you prefer to unclasp the diamonds yourself?"

With trembling fingers I took off and handed him my necklace and the bracelet and the half dozen little brooches from my corsage. "Thanks, very much," he said, slipping them deftly into his breast pocket. "And might I venture to remind you of that exquisite star which nestles in your hair? Thanks again. No other trifles you would like to part with? I think my dear Mr. Coyners, if you take off your left eye, you might find something interesting there. I believe I see a slight protrusion on the third finger. Thank you. You are too awfully good. And how I won't bother you any further."

And he was gone, and I heard the lock shoot in the door, and the key was turned on the farther side. It was a full hour before any one came near to let me out, and by that time my fascinating partner was far enough away.

It was quite true that he had come down from town on purpose for the assembly ball. The police said that he was a well known London swell mobster. But, unfortunately, they never managed to rediscover his address, or what was very much more to the point, my beautiful diamonds.—London Answers.

Chinaman. [St. Louis Republican.] Ah Hooy, one of the best-known Chinamen in St. Louis, was buried Tuesday afternoon from the undertaking establishment of Harrigan & Sheehan, with simple, but appropriate Chinese ceremonies.

Ah Sing, a New York Chinaman, who is a cousin of the deceased; Hop Sing, another cousin of the dead man; Jack Lee, the boss of the Chinese colony in this city, and one other friend, accompanied the remains to the grave, in Wesleyan cemetery, where all St. Louis Chinamen are temporarily buried.

The coffin was very plain, and the corpse was dressed in plain clothes, but the shippers were elaborately endowed. On the head was placed a hat, and in the right trousers pocket was placed a Chinese diek.

At the grave Jack Lee took charge of the ceremonies. The coffin was opened and a package, containing baked meats and Chinese delicacies, placed on the breast of the dead Chinaman. In the bottom of the coffin, near the right hand of the corpse, was placed a good-size purse of Chinese coins.

When Ah Hooy was thus fully equipped for his long journey, with plenty to eat and money to pay his admission into the Promised Land, the lid was screwed down on the coffin and it was lowered into the grave. Jack Lee took a bag of small pieces of red paper, each of which was marked with appropriate Chinese characters and perforated with small holes, and scattered them around the grave.

These, he said, were for the purpose of hindering the Evil Spirit, who would have to pass through each of the holes in each piece of paper before he could approach Ah Hooy, and by that time his intended victim would be well on his way to Paradise.

For Representative of Ohio county—W. M. Laska. "Too much similarity between the two parties for to have two candidates in the field" is the language of the Industrialist in speaking of the People's party and the Prohibition party.

While the two parties are similar in some respects yet there is a wide difference in the two parties. The Prohibition party is founded upon that firm and solid rock of justice and right, submissive to the will of high heaven. The winds and storms of party persecution may surge and beat upon it, but yet it stands. While the People's party has some good things in it, it lacks the one thing needful—a solid foundation. It, like the old parties, instead of being subject to the will of the Creator, is subject to the will of the brewers and money power.

How is it that a Christian man can blind and sear his conscience when he goes to vote and vote with a party that he knows is licensing the sale of that which is damning more souls per year than the Christian world is the instrument in saving?

There is nothing in all the world that is doing as much injury to the human family as the liquor traffic. It not only degrades the human family, bringing suffering and misery, breaking the hearts of mothers and wives, but it goes further—it at last sinks its subjects into eternal damnation.

Many Christians and preachers will labor in preaching, praying and singing and toiling for the salvation of souls and then on election day cast their ballot for a whisky party and thus do more for the damnation of souls than they have done for their salvation in the whole year. But so it is throughout the land; the Christian voter craves craves, hangs his harp upon the party willow on election day and sings the party version: "All hail the power of Jesus' name! Bring forth the royal diadem, and send all Thine enemies to hell!"

Why pay $2.50 and $5.00 per day for board while in Louisville when you can get the very best of accommodations at the Enterprise Hotel, 334 East Market street, for $1.00 and $1.50 per day? Get in the right trousers pocket, spare neither time nor money in making it pleasant for his guests. Try this shoe once and you will make it your stopping place in the future.

CURED BY ELECTROPOISE.

A LADY WHO SUFFERED DEATH ATTEMPTING TO CURE HER NEURALGIC PAINS BY ELECTROPOISE.

I will say that my wife suffered death with sick headache for years and the Electropoise has almost cured her. It relieves neuralgic pains every time, and I do not doubt that that persistent use will entirely cure that trouble. I have used it for ordinary fevers on our children of 3 to 6 years of age with most marked success. Thirty-six hours resulting in a decided cure.

As for myself, I have had occasion to treat for a violent attack of the grippe, broke it up completely in forty-eight hours, an hour's treatment locally between the eyes and all-night treatment at high power on the ankle, and continued through the next day did the work. The Electropoise is the sovereign remedy for colds and all forms of prostration from over-work. Yours very truly, B. B. SANDERS, Hickman, Ky., May 7, 1895.

Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly for October is an exceptionally beautiful number pictorially, without any sacrifice of that quality of timeliness which makes it unique amongst illustrated magazines. The opening article is an idyllic description, by Mrs. Leicester Addis, of a summer holiday visit to old England's loveliest county, Surrey, with a description of the stately manor of Deepdene, upon which the present American Duchess of Marlborough has spent large sums of money to good purpose.

"To me it is quite clear that the social money should keep in touch with all the members of the Democratic party. By doing so we may bring the united Democracy of the State to the support of a sound money candidate for the Presidency in 1896. It would be fatal to the case in Kentucky to ally the Democratic people in two hostile factions. The path of safety lies in keeping together and in electing our State ticket. When that is done we can take up the work of preparing for the national campaign of 1896, and can then work together through a compact Democratic organization."

Harper's Weekly will soon—probably September 30th—contain a large and handsomely illustrated supplement devoted to the forthcoming revival at Athens of the ancient Olympic Games, which will be attended by an immense concourse of athletes from all countries. The article is written by Demetrios Kalopothakis, Ph. D., the correspondent at Athens of the London Times. The article will contain a description of the restored Stadium, in which the games will be held, and views of many other examples of modern Greek architecture, and an interesting account of the circumstances leading to the re-establishment of the ancient sports.
