

NEWS SUMMARY.

The East.

It cost New York $52,500,000 to run her city government last year. The Fashion stud-farm stables at Trenton, N. J., were burned the other day. Nine valuable horses were consumed, including two road-mares belonging to President Grant. Total loss, $75,000.

A New York telegram says that the amount of bogus securities which the railroad bond forgers expected to negotiate in this country and Europe was $2,000,000, and that $1,000,000 are already on the New York market. Two of the gang, it is said, left for Europe some time since, with a large amount of forged bonds, which are reported to have already been disposed of in the English market. A strange tragedy has just been enacted at Williamsburgh, N. Y. A young lady called on another whose school-mate and most intimate friend she had been for years. This female thereupon murdered her, and, after keeping the body in her bed-room for days, set fire to the building to destroy the evidence of her guilt. It appears that the motive of the murder was to obtain a sum of money which she supposed her friend to have upon her person. The murder, and the singular circumstances surrounding it, have produced a profound sensation in Williamsburgh. Titusville, Pa., was visited by a $60,000 fire on the 7th inst.

A large and important meeting of prominent New York merchants was held in that city, last week, to discuss the question of "cheap transportation." The resolutions adopted begin with the organization of an association to be known as the New York Cheap Transportation Association. After alluding to the rapid increase of the agricultural and manufactured produce of the country, the resolutions set forth that the policy of the Government should be to protect the producing interest and commerce from corporations and monopolies, which tend to oppress the rights of the people. Double-track railroads, exclusively for freight, are pronounced absolutely necessary, and reform in the management of railroads is demanded. The frequent and arbitrary changes in freight rates are denounced and "interference" is demanded. A resolution was also adopted sympathizing with the producers and merchants of the West in their movement to obtain cheaper transportation, and pledging hearty co-operation in all just and reasonable efforts to that end.

The most remarkable sale of short-horn steers ever made in this country or Europe took place at Utica, N. Y., on the 10th inst. The prices paid were enormous. One hundred and eleven head of cattle, comprising the celebrated New York Association, the property of the Hon. Samuel Campbell, were sold at auction for an aggregate sum of $380,800. The eighth Duchess of Geneva brought the starting price of $40,000. The Tenth Duchess of Geneva sold for $35,000, and $30,000 was given for the First Duchess. The average price paid for ten of the Duchess tribe was $21,700 each. This herd was beyond question the most valuable ever got together, and its sale attracted fancy stock-breeders from every part of this country as well as from Europe. The three highest prices were paid by Europeans.

An important female witness in the Stokes case has been arrested in New York. It is claimed that she picked up and concealed the pistol with which Fisk was trying to shoot Stokes at the time the latter killed him. A Butler and Charles E. Brown, of New York, have been arrested in New York city last week. The admission fee is $25. William G. Fargo has been elected President of the Samana Bay Company, vice Alden B. Stockwell, resigned.

The Warehouse and Security Company, of New York, has collapsed. The company amount to about $2,500,000, and the liabilities to $1,500,000. The Missouri, Kansas and Texas railway owned the company $1,000,000.

The West.

COL. JOHN T. HARPER, Collector of Internal Revenue for the Eighth District of Illinois, has resigned his position, leaving the accounts of his office at Springfield about $100,000 short. Archibald Duncan, of St. Louis, last week murdered his wife by shooting her with a pistol, and then blew his own brains out. The Toledo, Wabash and Western road is now laying new steel rails the whole length of the line, from Toledo to St. Louis. They have just received from Metz, France, the first steel rails ever brought here from that country. The Union Pacific Railroad Company sold during the month of August, 1873, 22,873 65-100 acres of land, at an average price of $2.90 per acre, amounting to $157,934. The sales averaged 87.7-10 acres each purchaser. Total sales to Sept. 1, 1873, 779,518 22-100 acres, at an average price of $1.45 per acre, amounting to $1,120,387.77. The Kansas stallion, Smuggler, has been sold to Col. Russell, of Milton, Mass., at a price above $50,000.

PROF. MRS. YALE exploring party has returned to Fort Bridger, after an absence of six weeks in the Indian Mountains. The trip was eminently successful, many important discoveries of extinct animals having been made. Twelve months ago Peter Kiel, living in Chicago, was bitten by a dog, and died of the most horrible agony. Twelve men were recently suffocated in a mine at Sutter Creek, Cal.

A WOMAN'S Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals is the latest Chicago institution. The Fulton Elevator, in Chicago, was burned last week. Loss, $100,000. The amount of the defalcation of Col. Harper, Collector of Internal Revenue for the Eighth District of Illinois, is now fixed at $110,000. Half a million cattle were driven from the West to the East coast last season. The St. Louis Democrat prints a dispatch from Sedalia, Mo., which says: "The Iowa railroad-train robbers, who have been fitting about in some of the western counties of this State, are all together again. McCoy and the detectives have information that another bank robbery is being planned by them, and it will be carried out as soon as McCoy joins the gang. All the banks in that part of the State are being closely watched by special officers, and efforts are constantly being made to capture these desperadoes."

CLOUD, the Philadelphia carman, bound for New Orleans, passed Cairo on the 8th inst., having been out 56 days. He is confident of winning the $5,000. He is as hardy as a pine-knot, and as brown as a South American. The skin on the back of his hands is almost as tough as leather. John Irving, of San Francisco, the self-accused murderer of Benjamin Nathan, of New York, insists on the truth of his story, and is very indignant at the press and the public for discrediting his statements. A light frost—the first of the season—in Northern and Central Illinois on the night of Sept. 7.

THE Pleasant Hill (Neb.) jail was recently set on fire by an incendiary, and the building, together with four inmates, were consumed. The receipts of wheat at Milwaukee are enormous. The amount received in one day (Sept. 9) was 433,709 bushels, being 168,709 bushels greater than those of Chicago, and the largest ever reported in the West. John W. Coon, a well-known professional billiard expert, died last week, in Chicago, of cerebro-spinal meningitis. In a match game of billiards, 2,000 points up, on a carom five by ten table, played in Chicago, last week, between George Slosson and John Bessinger, the former was the victor, making the extraordinary average of 142.

SATANTA and Big Tree have arrived at Fort Sill. The meeting with their families is said to have been quite affecting. A bold attempt was recently made to rob Paymaster Brooks, of the United States Army, near River Bend, Col., while en route to the camp of the Sixth Cavalry to pay the troops. One of the robbers was mortally wounded and the others put to flight. Lieut. Willmore and Mrs. Roberts, who were in the ambulance with Major Brooks, were slightly wounded. The robber that was shot is an ex-army officer—G. W. Graham—formerly a captain in the Tenth Cavalry.

The South.

SIXTEEN illicit whisky mills were recently seized and destroyed in the Seventh Revenue District of North Carolina. Three negro children were last week burned to death in a cabin in Fayette county, Tenn. Australian Kelley, the once noted prize-fighter, died recently in the ambulance with Major Brooks, a prominent citizen and eminent jurist of Louisiana, is dead.

JUDGE T. CRAWFORD and District-Attorney Arthur H. Harris, of the Twelfth Judicial District of Louisiana, were assassinated recently, near Winnsboro, in Franklin parish, while on their way to hold court at that place. They were shot several times, and their brains blown out. The murderers are not known, but it is thought that personal and not political differences led to the assassination, as Crawford was a Radical and Harris a Democrat. The Louisiana Courier-Journal, commenting on the Ku-Klux outrages in the State, proposes, if the Governor has not the means or power at his command to equip a company of men to proceed against the Ku-Klux, that the Courier-Journal will pay the expenses necessary to the organization of an efficient company for the purpose.

BALTIMORE has been visited by another disastrous fire, involving the destruction, among other buildings, of the Holiday Street Theater. Loss, $120,000. The ravages of the "rallies" at Shreveport, La., are described as frightful.

Washington.

It is stated that the attempt will be renewed in the next Congress to repeal the Bankrupt act, or to obtain such amendment to the same as shall render its operations more favorable to commercial interests. There is considerable discussion of the departments of asking Congress to amend the law passed last session abolishing the franking privilege, so that letters on public business, addressed to Government officials, may go through the mails without payment of postage. A Washington correspondent says: "I am looking for the persons who mutilated the body of Beau Hickman. When the undertaker went to the potter's-field to remove the body to the Congressional burial-grounds, he found the legs disjointed at the hips, the head severed from the trunk and skinned, the viscera cut out and removed, with the exception of the heart, which was found in the bushes near by, wrapped in a newspaper. What could be gathered was interred in the cemetery."

THE Attorney-General most emphatically denies the published statement that the Government has determined to abandon the prosecution of the Credit Mobilier suits. The supervising Inspector of Steamboats has laid upon a plan for more effectually bringing to the surface the steam vessels that do not conform to the law for the protection of human life. The plan is, without previous notification or warning, to send special agents of the Bureau into the regular Inspection Districts, so that not only the steamers, but the boats shall be taken by surprise, and the inspectors also.

QUARTERMASTER-GENERAL MEIGS opened bids last week for furnishing tombstones for the national cemeteries. There was a large attendance of bidders from different parts of the country, and the bids ranged from $800,000 to $1,000,000.

The secret agents sent abroad by the Treasury Department, to test by experience the treatment immigrants received from the ocean steamship companies, have returned from Washington. They claim to have detected a number of serious abuses, and will recommend to Congress, in December, the following changes:

First—The establishment of a treaty with England, Germany and France for the joint appointment of a Government agent to travel on every steamship plying between the United States and Europe, and carrying 30 passengers or more. The agent to be known as such, and to act as mediator when necessary between the captain of the vessel and the emigrants.

Second—That the various lines of railway in this country shall be compelled to run emigrant trains on schedule time, like regular trains, instead of as they now do.

Third—That for every emigrant killed on a railway the company shall pay to the Government for the funeral expenses, and in case of maiming, a proportionate sum.

The $15,500,000 awarded to our Government at Geneva, Switzerland, was paid into the United States Treasury on the 9th inst., by Secretary Fish, in one bond. The bond was skillfully printed with a pen, being a facsimile of a printed form. Upon being duly executed, it was photographed, and then sent to Secretary Fish, who is its present owner. The certificate of deposit, retained by the Secretary of the Treasury, will be framed and preserved among the archives of the Government as a memorial of the amicable settlement of the difference between the two countries. Secretary Richardson invested the money in 5 per cent. registered bonds, to await further action by Congress.

Foreign.

THURSDAY, the 4th inst., was the anniversary of the proclamation of the French Republic; but on account of the ban pronounced by the MacMahon government, there was no observance of the day in Paris. At Lucerne, in Switzerland, however, ex-President Thiers was waited upon by a number of his fellow-countrymen, to whom he made a speech strongly advocating the preservation of republican institutions. The total force of the Carlists in Spain is put down at 40,000. They are arranging to establish a cannon factory at Tarragona.

THE Pope is again announced to be ill. So stern was the repression by the French Government of any attempt to celebrate the anniversary of the establishment of the Republic, that American citizens in Paris were not even permitted to make a complimentary display of the United States flag on that day. Nicolas Salmeron, President of the Republic of Spain, and all the members of his Ministry, have resigned.

MINISTER and Historian Motley is convalescent. Emilio Castelar has been elected President of Spain. This young Republic, though only six months old, has had four rulers during its existence. Castelar, before his election, demanded, as a condition upon which he would take the office, that he should be allowed to increase the army, purchase 500,000 rifles, organize the militia, impose a forced loan, suspend the Constitutional guarantees, and be furnished with material and appliances sufficient to overcome both the Carlists and the Intransigent insurgents. The Cortes has granted him these conditions, and, therefore, Castelar takes upon himself the responsibility of crushing out the opposition to the Republic. It remains to be seen whether he is equal to the responsibility.

The cholera is raging in Hungary. Five men sent out from Madrid to assassinate Don Carlos have been executed. On the last day of the Vienna Exposition, the fair was thrown open to the public, and was visited by 100,000 people. On the night of the 6th of September a square of buildings in Havana, Cuba, known as the Plaza Vaper was reduced to ashes. Fire broke out simultaneously in four corners of the square, and is supposed to have cost the lives of 100,000. It is reported that twenty lives were lost. The scenes around the burning square were exciting and terrible. Parents threw their children from balconies to save them from the flames.

A REPORT comes from Shanghai that the Chinese are planning a massacre of all the Europeans in the interior of the Empire. The provocation which has inflamed them to this bloody design is the refusal of the French Minister to some changes which the Chinese Government wishes made in a treaty. President Castelar begins his administration of Spanish affairs with energy. He has decided to reinforce the Republican forces by calling out 150,000 of the regular army reserve and by adding a levy of 500,000 men from the militia, and with these accumulated resources intends to wipe the Carlists and Intransigent out of existence. San Domingo item: Col Rivas attempted the life of Col. Lupeon with a sword. Lupeon evaded the blow, drew a revolver, and shot Rivas through the head.

FURTHER particulars of the great conflagration in Havana have been received. The total loss is variously estimated at from $3,000,000 to $8,000,000. The insurance only amounts to $524,000, nearly all in English companies. Owing to the rapidity with which the flames spread, very little property was saved. In less than three hours from the time the fire broke out the entire square was a mass of ruins. Over 2,000 people who occupied the buildings are homeless, and nearly all have lost everything. Great distress prevails among them, and numerous subscriptions have been started in the city for their relief.

The cable reports another accident on the Northeastern railway, of England. Three persons killed and twenty injured. A party of Mormon emigrants, who recently arrived in Paris on their way to America, were notified by the prefect of the 8th arrondissement to hold their religious exercises in public they would be expelled from the city.

The cholera has broken out in Paris. William of Germany will shortly pay a friendly visit to Joseph of Austria. Salmeron, late President of Spain, has been unanimously elected President of the Cortes.

Political.

The Anti-Monopoly party in San Francisco has elected two Senators and twelve Representatives to the Legislature. The returns from the interior indicate that the Anti-Monopolists were a majority in both houses of the Legislature. Oliver Warner, of Oregon, is Ex-Senator. Foot's pronouncement "an intentional and villainous falsehood" the statement that he is to be provided by the Administration with a lucrative appointment as a reward for denouncing the 8th of March law. Foot never applied for office in his life, and desires no position in the gift of Gen. Grant. The Texas Democrats have nominated Richard Coke for Governor, and R. B. Hubbard for Lieutenant-Governor.

The Maine election came off on the 8th inst. Dingley, Republican, is elected Governor by 12,000 or 15,000 majority. The vote was very light.

The San Francisco Bulletin gives the composition of the newly-elected California Legislature as follows: "Republicans, 44; Independents, 35; Democrats, 40. Sixty-one votes will be required to elect a Senator. The Independents and Republicans together will cast 89 votes. Assuming that some hold-over Republicans will vote for Booth, his strength at the outset would be greater than any other candidate."

The Massachusetts Republican State Convention, at Worcester, nominated Washburn for Governor by acclamation—Butler, recognizing the hopelessness of the contest, having very sensibly withdrawn his name. The balance of the ticket is composed as follows: Lieutenant-Governor, Thomas Talbot; Attorney-General, Charles R. Train; Secretary of State, Oliver Warner; Auditor, Charles Reddick; Treasurer, Charles Adams, Jr. The resolutions condemn the salary-grab, deprecate the practice of interference in State elections on the part of Federal officers, and favor cheap transportation and temperance laws.

General.

News has been had from the Juniata expedition in search of the Polar. On the 19th of July, Commander Braine was at Holstenberg, Greenland. He sailed thence to Disco, and returned on the 20th inst. Up to the 10th of July nothing had been heard at Disco of the Polar or her crew.

The late storm on the Nova Scotia coast was by all odds the most fierce and destructive ever experienced on this continent. Additional particulars of the disaster continue to be received. A late Halifax dispatch says: "The loss of property is immense. In Cape Breton, the late unpropitious storm, with that force which will have difficulty in saving their crops. It is feared there will be starvation among the fishermen, and it is probable that even among the farmers, who sustained heavy losses by the gale, there will be suffering. The country will go bare this year. On the Nova Scotia side of the Strait of Cansu, all the wharves between Port Mulgrave and Sand Point are carried away. Thirty vessels, with all hands, were lost in North Bay alone. The whole number of Modocs killed by the late storm was 100. The vessel was exactly four. For every Modoc engaged in the war there were two United States soldiers killed."

The schooner Abbie Bradford, which arrived last week at New Bedford from Hudson Bay, reports the wrecking of two whalers, which went ashore on Marble Island. Fourteen of the crews died on the island from exposure and lack of proper food. Among those who perished were Murray D. McConnell, of Jacksonville, Ill.

THE POLARIS.

She is Found to have Sunk off Littleton Island—Her Crew Escaped in Boats Made from the Ship.

The Secretary of the Navy has received the following dispatch from Commander Braine of the Juniata:

UNITED STATES STEAMER JUNIATA, ST. JOHN'S, N. F., Sept. 10. The Hon. George B. Benson, Secretary of the Navy, Washington, D. C. The Juniata arrived to-day. Met the Tigress at Upernivik and coaled her. She sailed Aug. 11 for Littleton Island, and on the 12th inst. was launched, being captained by Delong, of Tennessee, who had been to Cape York in the launch, and reports that the camp of the Tigress was found Aug. 14, off Littleton Island, latitude 78 deg. 22 min. north, longitude 73 deg. 46 min. west. The Tigress and the Polaris were all well. Had gone south two months before in two boats made from the ship. The Polaris sank one month after. The Tigress kept a careful lookout going north and coming south. There were no signs. Stopped at all settlements for news. The crew of the Polaris are probably on the coast of the Labrador coast, to continue the search so long as coal and season permit. (Signed) D. L. Braine, Commander, U. S. N.

Littleton Island, referred to, is about 60 miles north of Northumberland Island, where the party rescued from the Polaris supposed they had left her. It is a little south of the life boat depot of Dr. Kane, in 1853. The Polaris in her disabled condition succeeded in any way in reaching a point 90 miles further north. It is understood orders were sent to Commander Braine to continue the search for the crew of the Polaris.

It is stated that 75 per cent. of cotton factory operatives in England are women and young persons. A Lancashire cotton-spinner shows how small an item of expenses wages form by the statement that he pays $12,000 annually in wages, and from £70,000 to £80,000 for raw material, to say nothing of rent, coal, oil, and many other things.

A FASHIONABLE young lady accidentally dropped one of her false eyebrows in her opera-box the other evening, and greatly frightened her beau, who, on seeing it, thought it was his mustache.

THE QUESTION OF THE DAY.

The Attempt of Great Aggregations of Capital to Control the Government in Their Own Interest—The Forms of the Republic—The Right of Property—Destroyed—Aims of the Railroad Magnates—Magnificence of the Prize at Stake.

(Extracts from the Great Speech of Gov. Booth, of California, at San Francisco.)

FELLOW CITIZENS: The issues involved in the political canvass of this year are peculiar, and the conditions under which they are to be decided anomalous in American history. We shall err, however, if we suppose these issues and conditions are confined to California; they are common to the people of the United States. Everywhere there is a deep pervading feeling that old things are passing away; that the nation confronts new questions and difficulties—that again the Sphinx's riddle is propounded to us, which we must read or be destroyed. We have then to consider these questions closely. We find that they are indeed in our history and new in form, but in substance and universal history they are as old as history itself: it is a new phase of the old, old contest between prerogative and personal freedom, between force and law, between strong to take and the right of each man to his own. [Applause.]

PARTY TIES RELAXED. In the presence of new dangers party ties are relaxed. Where they bind together it is rather from social affiliation than the power of political allegiance. From force of habit and personal association, we look to our old political leaders and comrades for guidance and counsel; but pass along the street, take the men as you meet them, listen to their frank words, and you will find that the old party discipline is fast passing away. The hosts like contending armies, is destroyed. Gather together a representative, intelligent assemblage like this, composed of Republicans and Democrats, poll it, and you will find that on the living questions of the hour, where the differences are deep, the parties do not differ as Democrats and Republicans, but as men of independent convictions; and those who prefer to remain with old organizations simply feel that for the present there is no other way of hope to accomplish new purposes with old forms. This is not a local, but a general truth, and there is a general feeling that a warfare should cease whose motive and meaning have gone.

REASONS FOR DISINTEGRATION. It is natural under circumstances like these that men who believe that political parties are the right way to the attainment of public salaries to directors and dividing up among stockholders, should begin to inquire, "What man hath done this?" and to look about for some victim for their impotent wrath. Sir, no man hath done it! They are the results of the political system, and it is the fault of the system, not of the men who are its organs. The fault is not in the men, but in the system. The men are the organs of the system, and the system is the fault. The men are the organs of the system, and the system is the fault. The men are the organs of the system, and the system is the fault.

It is natural under circumstances like these that men who believe that political parties are the right way to the attainment of public salaries to directors and dividing up among stockholders, should begin to inquire, "What man hath done this?" and to look about for some victim for their impotent wrath. Sir, no man hath done it! They are the results of the political system, and it is the fault of the system, not of the men who are its organs. The fault is not in the men, but in the system. The men are the organs of the system, and the system is the fault. The men are the organs of the system, and the system is the fault.

It is natural under circumstances like these that men who believe that political parties are the right way to the attainment of public salaries to directors and dividing up among stockholders, should begin to inquire, "What man hath done this?" and to look about for some victim for their impotent wrath. Sir, no man hath done it! They are the results of the political system, and it is the fault of the system, not of the men who are its organs. The fault is not in the men, but in the system. The men are the organs of the system, and the system is the fault. The men are the organs of the system, and the system is the fault.

It is natural under circumstances like these that men who believe that political parties are the right way to the attainment of public salaries to directors and dividing up among stockholders, should begin to inquire, "What man hath done this?" and to look about for some victim for their impotent wrath. Sir, no man hath done it! They are the results of the political system, and it is the fault of the system, not of the men who are its organs. The fault is not in the men, but in the system. The men are the organs of the system, and the system is the fault. The men are the organs of the system, and the system is the fault.

It is natural under circumstances like these that men who believe that political parties are the right way to the attainment of public salaries to directors and dividing up among stockholders, should begin to inquire, "What man hath done this?" and to look about for some victim for their impotent wrath. Sir, no man hath done it! They are the results of the political system, and it is the fault of the system, not of the men who are its organs. The fault is not in the men, but in the system. The men are the organs of the system, and the system is the fault. The men are the organs of the system, and the system is the fault.

It is natural under circumstances like these that men who believe that political parties are the right way to the attainment of public salaries to directors and dividing up among stockholders, should begin to inquire, "What man hath done this?" and to look about for some victim for their impotent wrath. Sir, no man hath done it! They are the results of the political system, and it is the fault of the system, not of the men who are its organs. The fault is not in the men, but in the system. The men are the organs of the system, and the system is the fault. The men are the organs of the system, and the system is the fault.

It is natural under circumstances like these that men who believe that political parties are the right way to the attainment of public salaries to directors and dividing up among stockholders, should begin to inquire, "What man hath done this?" and to look about for some victim for their impotent wrath. Sir, no man hath done it! They are the results of the political system, and it is the fault of the system, not of the men who are its organs. The fault is not in the men, but in the system. The men are the organs of the system, and the system is the fault. The men are the organs of the system, and the system is the fault.

It is natural under circumstances like these that men who believe that political parties are the right way to the attainment of public salaries to directors and dividing up among stockholders, should begin to inquire, "What man hath done this?" and to look about for some victim for their impotent wrath. Sir, no man hath done it! They are the results of the political system, and it is the fault of the system, not of the men who are its organs. The fault is not in the men, but in the system. The men are the organs of the system, and the system is the fault. The men are the organs of the system, and the system is the fault.

It is natural under circumstances like these that men who believe that political parties are the right way to the attainment of public salaries to directors and dividing up among stockholders, should begin to inquire, "What man hath done this?" and to look about for some victim for their impotent wrath. Sir, no man hath done it! They are the results of the political system, and it is the fault of the system, not of the men who are its organs. The fault is not in the men, but in the system. The men are the organs of the system, and the system is the fault. The men are the organs of the system, and the system is the fault.

It is natural under circumstances like these that men who believe that political parties are the right way to the attainment of public salaries to directors and dividing up among stockholders, should begin to inquire, "What man hath done this?" and to look about for some victim for their impotent wrath. Sir, no man hath done it! They are the results of the political system, and it is the fault of the system, not of the men who are its organs. The fault is not in the men, but in the system. The men are the organs of the system, and the system is the fault. The men are the organs of the system, and the system is the fault.

It is natural under circumstances like these that men who believe that political parties are the right way to the attainment of public salaries to directors and dividing up among stockholders, should begin to inquire, "What man hath done this?" and to look about for some victim for their impotent wrath. Sir, no man hath done it! They are the results of the political system, and it is the fault of the system, not of the men who are its organs. The fault is not in the men, but in the system. The men are the organs of the system, and the system is the fault. The men are the organs of the system, and the system is the fault.

It is natural under circumstances like these that men who believe that political parties are the right way to the attainment of public salaries to directors and dividing up among stockholders, should begin to inquire, "What man hath done this?" and to look about for some victim for their impotent wrath. Sir, no man hath done it! They are the results of the political system, and it is the fault of the system, not of the men who are its organs. The fault is not in the men, but in the system. The men are the organs of the system, and the system is the fault. The men are the organs of the system, and the system is the fault.

It is natural under circumstances like these that men who believe that political parties are the right way to the attainment of public salaries to directors and dividing up among stockholders, should begin to inquire, "What man hath done this?" and to look about for some victim for their impotent wrath. Sir, no man hath done it! They are the results of the political system, and it is the fault of the system, not of the men who are its organs. The fault is not in the men, but in the system. The men are the organs of the system, and the system is the fault. The men are the organs of the system, and the system is the fault.

It is natural under circumstances like these that men who believe that political parties are the right way to the attainment of public salaries to directors and dividing up among stockholders, should begin to inquire, "What man hath done this?" and to look about for some victim for their impotent wrath. Sir, no man hath done it! They are the results of the political system, and it is the fault of the system, not of the men who are its organs. The fault is not in the men, but in the system. The men are the organs of the system, and the system is the fault. The men are the organs of the system, and the system is the fault.

It is natural under circumstances like these that men who believe that political parties are the right way to the attainment of public salaries to directors and dividing up among stockholders, should begin to inquire, "What man hath done this?" and to look about for some victim for their impotent wrath. Sir, no man hath done it! They are the results of the political system, and it is the fault of the system, not of the men who are its organs. The fault is not in the men, but in the system. The men are the organs of the system, and the system is the fault. The men are the organs of the system, and the system is the fault.

It is natural under circumstances like these that men who believe that political parties are the right way to the attainment of public salaries to directors and dividing up among stockholders, should begin to inquire, "What man hath done this?" and to look about for some victim for their impotent wrath. Sir, no man hath done it! They are the results of the political system, and it is the fault of the system, not of the men who are its organs. The fault is not in the men, but in the system. The men are the organs of the system, and the system is the fault. The men are the organs of the system, and the system is the fault.

It is natural under circumstances like these that men who believe that political parties are the right way to the attainment of public salaries to directors and dividing up among stockholders, should begin to inquire, "What man hath done this?" and to look about for some victim for their impotent wrath. Sir, no man hath done it! They are the results of the political system, and it is the fault of the system, not of the men who are its organs. The fault is not in the men, but in the system. The men are the organs of the system, and the system is the fault. The men are the organs of the system, and the system is the fault.

It is natural under circumstances like these that men who believe that political parties are the right way to the attainment of public salaries to directors and dividing up among stockholders, should begin to inquire, "What man hath done this?" and to look about for some victim for their impotent wrath. Sir, no man hath done it! They are the results of the political system, and it is the fault of the system, not of the men who are its organs. The fault is not in the men, but in the system. The men are the organs of the system, and the system is the fault. The men are the organs of the system, and the system is the fault.

It is natural under circumstances like these that men who believe that political parties are the right way to the attainment of public salaries to directors and dividing up among stockholders, should begin to inquire, "What man hath done this?" and to look about for some victim for their impotent wrath. Sir, no man hath done it! They are the results of the political system, and it is the fault of the system, not of the men who are its organs. The fault is not in the men, but in the system. The men are the organs of the system, and the system is the fault. The men are the organs of the system, and the system is the fault.

It is natural under circumstances like these that men who believe that political parties are the right way to the attainment of public salaries to directors and dividing up among stockholders, should begin to inquire, "What man hath done this?" and to look about for some victim for their impotent wrath. Sir, no man hath done it! They are the results of the political system, and it is the fault of the system, not of the men who are its organs. The fault is not in the men, but in the system. The men are the organs of the system, and the system is the fault. The men are the organs of the system, and the system is the fault.

It is natural under circumstances like these that men who believe that political parties are the right way to the attainment of public salaries to directors and dividing up among stockholders, should begin to inquire, "What man hath done this?" and to look about for some victim for their impotent wrath. Sir, no man hath done it! They are the results of the political system, and it is the fault of the system, not of the men who are its organs. The fault is not in the men, but in the system. The men are the organs of the system, and the system is the fault. The men are the organs of the system, and the system is the fault.

It is natural under circumstances like these that men who believe that political parties are the right way to the attainment of public salaries to directors and dividing up among stockholders, should begin to inquire, "What man hath done this?" and to look about for some victim for their impotent wrath. Sir, no man hath done it! They are the results of the political system, and it is the fault of the system, not of the men who are its organs. The fault is not in the men, but in the system. The men are the organs of the system, and the system is the fault. The men are the organs of the system, and the system is the fault.

It is natural under circumstances like these that men who believe that political parties are the right way to the attainment of public salaries to directors and dividing up among stockholders, should begin to inquire, "What man hath done this?" and to look about for some victim for their impotent wrath. Sir, no man hath done it! They are the results of the political system, and it is the fault of the system, not of the men who are its organs. The fault is not in the men, but in the system. The men are the organs of the system, and the system is the fault. The men are the organs of the system, and the system is the fault.

It is natural under circumstances like these that men who believe that political parties are the right way to the attainment of public salaries to directors and dividing up among stockholders, should begin to inquire, "What man hath done this?" and to look about for some victim for their impotent wrath. Sir, no man hath done it! They are the results of the political system, and it is the fault of the system, not of the men who are its organs. The fault is not in the men, but in the system. The men are the organs of the system, and the system is the fault. The men are the organs of the system, and the system is the fault.

It is natural under circumstances like these that men who believe that political parties are the right way to the attainment of public salaries to directors and dividing up among stockholders, should begin to inquire, "What man hath done this?" and to look about for some victim for their impotent wrath. Sir, no man hath done it! They are the results of the political system, and it is the fault of the system, not of the men who are its organs. The fault is not in the men, but in the system. The men are the organs of the system, and the system is the fault. The men are the organs of the system, and the system is the fault.

It is natural under circumstances like these that men who believe that political parties are the right way to the attainment of public salaries to directors and dividing up among stockholders, should begin to inquire, "What man hath done this?" and to look about for some victim for their impotent wrath. Sir, no man hath done it! They are the results of the political system, and it is the fault of the system, not of the men who are its organs. The fault is not in the men, but in the system. The men are the organs of the system, and the system is the fault. The men are the organs of the system, and the system is the fault.

It is natural under circumstances like these that men who believe that political parties are the right way to the attainment of public salaries to directors and dividing up among stockholders, should begin to inquire, "What man hath done this?" and to look about for some victim for their impotent wrath. Sir, no man hath done it! They are the results of the political system, and it is the fault of the system, not of the men who are its organs. The fault is not in the men, but in the system. The men are the organs of the system, and the system is the fault. The men are the organs of the system, and the system is the fault.

It is natural under circumstances like these that men who believe that political parties are the right way to the attainment of public salaries to directors and dividing up among stockholders, should begin to inquire, "What man hath done this?" and to look about for some victim for their impotent wrath. Sir, no man hath done it! They are the results of the political system, and it is the fault of the system, not of the men who are its organs. The fault is not in the men,