The REVIEW is not sending free copies to all the voters in Crawford county. The REVIEW is such a good paper that it costs something to publish it and we cannot afford to give it away. Never-the-less the majority of the people seem to know a good thing when they get it and are willing to pay for it.

It will be excellent news to the friends of Miss Nettie Clough to hear that she expects to spend Thanksgiving with her sister and will remain in Denison until after the holidays. She will also make the acquaintance of her niece, Lillian Janet Kemming, which we doubt not will be mutually agreeable.

We understand the democratic leaders intend starting a foot ball team with the eleven counties which went silver this fall. Jim Weaver will act as coach and Finn as umpire. The great trouble with the team will be that there are no counties to act as substitutes.

The Rev. Mr. Judd held services at the Episcopal church in Denison on Monday evening, to which there were a goodly number of people present. The Reverend gentleman is a very pleasant speaker and holds his audience in rapt attention. It is much regretted that he is unable to be present more often. While in Denison he was entertained at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wygant.

Miss Emma Dellinger, of Vail, has accepted a position in Orkin Bros. store as a saleslady. A PLEASANT AFTERNOON.

Mrs. Chris Kemming gave the Friday club a very delightful afternoon's pleasure on Friday. It was decidedly informal, no program being given but a good old fashioned visit being indulged in. Mrs. Campbell was the guest of honor and as she was as popular in the club as she was in every other relation during her life here, it was a great delight to her fellow club members to meet with her. Mesdames Ley, Gebbert and Charles Kemming were the only guests present beside club members. The two last named ladies assisted in serving a two-course supper which did full credit to Mrs. Kemming's well known culinary skill. The club certainly appreciated Mrs. Kemming's admirable hospitality to the utmost.

THE MIDWAY.

When the town and country press Where beginning to address All their readers on the exposition theme, And the workman's skillful hand Formed the grounds and buildings grand Which had heretofore been nothing but a dream, Then amid the talk of Spain, And the stinking of the Maine, You could now and then o'erhear a word by chance Of the fair which soon began, And their minds now often ran To the Midway—with its Hoochee-Coochee dance.
As the summer rolled along, With it came the usual throng, Which was there to "see the fair, and see it right," And they peopled the lagoon Both before and after noon, But it wasn't there you looked for them at night For their friends who'd been before Had kept saying o'er and o'er, "Let me tell you, under any circumstance, Don't you dare to come away, Till at least one night you stay On the Midway—with its Hoochee-Coochee dance."
So the days passed, one by one, Till the harvest time was done, And more often then the farmer met our eyes, That brave tiller of the soil, Who by ears of patient toil Had made possible this giant enterprise. And the crowd which now, at least Seemed each day to be increased, As the summer time continued to advance, Took him with it, as it went, As it were, with one consent, To the Midway—with its Hoochee-Coochee dance.
But the Exposition's o'er And the people no more Of the wonders which were there to take their fill, And the buildings, tall and high, Which had once so pleased the eye All are empty now, and desolate, and still, But tho' it has had its day And it now has passed away, Ye, as o'er the now receding past we glance, We recall it with delight, That fair city clothed in white, And the Midway—with its Hoochee-Coochee dance.
—FRANCIS J. GABLE.

Longfellow To Be Illustrated

Last year Charles Dana Gibson illustrated "The People of Dickens" for The Ladies Home Journal. The pictures were so successful that this year, and during next year, W. L. Taylor, the New England artist who has made such rapid strides in the art, will illustrate "The People of Longfellow" also for The Ladies' Home Journal. The poems selected are "The Psalm of Life," "Hiawatha," "Evangeline," "The Courtship of Miles Standish," "The Children's Hour," "The Village Blacksmith," and others.
