AGAIN IN ERUPTION.

GRAND SPECTACLE PRESENTED BY MOUNT VESUVIUS' BELCHINGS.

Grim Record of the World's Most Famous Volcano--Strange Phenomena of the Eruptions--Tourists Flock to See the Sight.

The people of Naples and the peasants living in the hills within the shadow of Mount Vesuvius have recently been passing some very anxious days and nights on account of the eruptive state of the volcano. "The gods are angry!" "Vesuvius is in a state of eruption!" cry the tourists, and they flock to Naples to get a glimpse of one of the world's grandest spectacles. Vesuvius has had many eruptions since the one which wiped out of existence the cities of Pompeii and Herculaneum, but they have been comparatively recent date. For several centuries there were no disturbances. The natives forgot that a volcano existed. Vesuvius to them was little more than a tradition. Once more the vines covered the crater, and the sides of the hills were covered with vineyards. But on Dec. 16, 1631, the volcano burst forth suddenly and unexpectedly. It continued until February, 1632. There was a tremendous flow of lava, mingled with water, resulting from the melting of the snow and mud. Torre Annunziata, Torre del Greco, Resina and Portici were almost wholly destroyed, and it is estimated that 18,000 persons lost their lives. There was another eruption in 1660, but only ashes and steam, which formed mud torrents, came forth.

One of the very grand eruptions occurred in 1779. Huge stones were projected several thousand feet into the air in a cloud of white vapor, with large masses of molten rock. Huge streams of lava poured down the mountain side, carrying death and destruction. Vesuvius was quiet for a few years, but in 1794 it burst forth again. Torre del Greco was again destroyed by lava, which flowed down in a fiery stream nearly a quarter of a mile wide at its base and 15 feet thick.

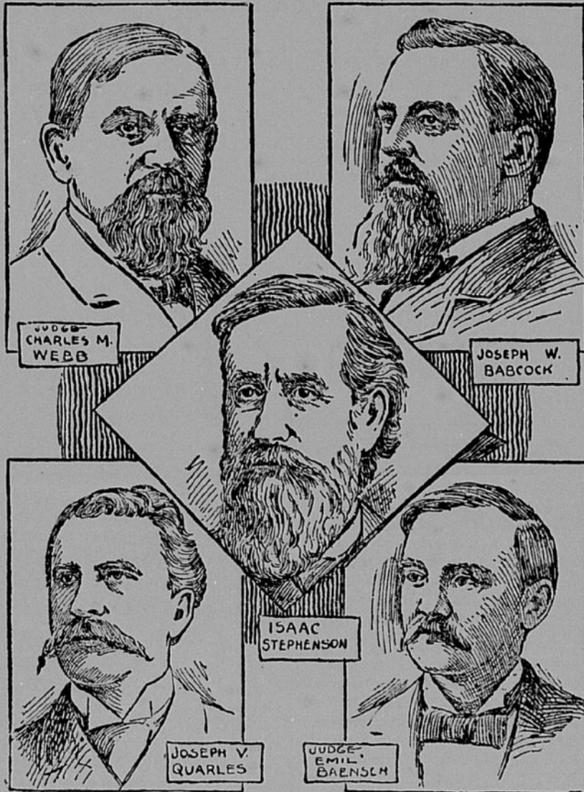

The outbreak which began in October, 1822, lasted nearly a month, rupturing the top of the cone and making a crater three miles in circumference and 1,000 feet deep. From that time Vesuvius has never been wholly quiet. In 1858 there was another eruption, when lava poured from the crater. But it was slow moving, progressing only a few inches a day. The eruption of 1861 was violent for seven hours, and Torre del Greco was overwhelmed for the third time. The intense cold, which rapidly cooled the lava, was of immense advantage in protecting property.

In November, 1867, there was an eruption which continued until June, 1868. The one of 1873 was very violent, two streams pouring down on either side of the observatory. The streets of Naples, eight miles distant, were covered inches deep with the sooty dust from the volcanic smoke. The flow of lava was three-fifths of a mile wide. Since then there have been numerous disturbances, but none of a particularly disastrous nature.

Notwithstanding many works which have been published bearing upon the subject the exact origin of these volcanic phenomena is still shrouded in considerable doubt. According to one authority, it is highly probable that they are intimately connected with the water of the sea, near which all the principal volcanoes are situated. There is reason to believe that the enormous clouds of steam generated during eruptions are due to some temporary communication of the water with the burning liquids of the interior of the earth, and that the premonitory earthquakes are occasioned by the vapors and gases as they expand and endeavor to find an outlet.

The red-hot fluids expelled from the volcano by means of these vapors are termed lava. When, however, they are broken by the vapors into fragments, the largest of these are known as lapilli, while the minute portions form volcanic sand or ashes. When freed from the pressure of the lava, the vapors rise to a height of about 10,000 feet, in form somewhat resembling a pine, carrying dense masses of lapilli and ashes along with them. They are then condensed in the air and, descending, give rise to the formidable streams of mud which proved especially destructive to Herculaneum.

murder. A suspicion of... in the manner described, limited to a very limited extent, including vapors and stones with a roar resembling that of distant artillery. Its effects, however, are at present confined to the formation of the cone in the crater.

More serious eruptions are accompanied by loud subterranean noises, earthquakes and flashes of lightning. The temperature of the lava as it descends occasionally exceeds 2,000 degrees F. The volume of the streams, as well as their velocity, depends on a variety of external circumstances. The surface of the lava ultimately becomes disintegrated into black sand. The smoke which ascends from the crater is more or less dark in color, according to the quantity of ashes mingled with it. The appearance of fire at night is not flames, but the reflection of the molten lava in the interior of the crater on the rising clouds of vapor and ashes.

The present spectacle is said to be full of grandeur. At night the faint, palpitating glow that normally marks the great crater is now exchanged for a vivid tongue of light, colored at times almost like a rainbow, illuminating the heavens and reflected with exquisite effect in the waters of the bay. These manifestations are accompanied by deep rumblings and thunderous subterranean explosions, followed by great outpourings of lava and ashes. Small wonder that the tourists should wish to get a glimpse of so imposing a spectacle, especially in view of the tragic history of this the most celebrated of the world's 350 active volcanoes.—New York Herald.

Smallpox on Board. New York, Nov. 21.—The French line steamer La Normandie, which arrived from Havre, is detained at quarantine owing to smallpox among her steerage passengers. When the health officer boarded the steamer Surgeon Vaquer reported two cases of smallpox, the patients being Syrian children who were taken ill during the voyage and promptly isolated in the steamer's hospital.

Killed by a Blow on Head. San Francisco, Nov. 21.—Arthur A. Brown, shipping clerk for the Albion Lumber company, is dead from the effects of a blow with a club, inflicted by Albert Bierworth, proprietor of the Globe lodging house on Howard street. Bierworth, who is under arrest, claims that Brown, who was intoxicated, created a disturbance, and that he acted in self-defense.

MURDER, NOT SUICIDE.

Suspicious Circumstances Surrounding the Death of a Fifteen-Year-Old California Girl.

Oakland, Cal., Nov. 21.—The supposed suicide of Lillian Brandes, a pretty 15-year-old girl in East Berkeley on Saturday, is likely to prove a case of murder. The autopsy showed that the girl had been beaten on the head until her scalp was laid open and her skull dented. Her body was covered with bruises and there were no signs of strangulation. After the surgeons had completed their examination they said the girl had died from or been rendered unconscious by a blow on the head, and had been subsequently tied up to the bed post. The girl's father, W. A. Brandes, has been arrested on suspicion of having committed the horrible crime. The stepmother has become hysterical and refuses to talk about the tragedy, which was first reported to the police by the accused man. The neighbors tell many stories of how the girl was cruelly treated and the community is greatly excited over the startling developments.

How a Detroit Man Cured Himself of Stone in the Bladder.

Detroit, Michigan, Nov. 27. The remarkable case of Robert A. Henry, of 350 Champlain street, has attracted a great deal of notice, and many persons have profited by his experience. Mr. Henry had a stone in the bladder, and suffered great agony. How he was cured and made happy again he tells as follows:

"I have been troubled with stone in the bladder. Could not get it removed without having an operation performed which I would not submit to. "I was told of Dodd's Kidney Pills, and tried one box as an experiment. I found relief, so I continued and used seven boxes, and now the stone has dissolved and passed. I am now cured." Thousands of warm testimonials are absolute and indisputable proof that Dodd's Kidney Pills are a positive and unfailing cure for all kidney diseases, including Bright's disease, diabetes, lumbar, dropsy, gravel, stone in the bladder, all urinary complaints, diseases of women, paralysis and heart failure.
