

WITH THE NEW YORK

Chapter One of the Great Warship's Diary.

STOP AT SAN DOMINGO

The Tomb of Columbus—Splendid and Squalor of the Black Republic.

PUBLISHERS.—According to announcement we publish herewith a part of Chapter One of the Diary of a Warship. This is from the original manuscript and is not published in any other paper or periodical. It will be a great feature of this summer's Reviews and will well repay the reader's time. Chapter Two takes the reader to Puerto Rico and gives much new information about Uncle Sam's new possession. As the advisability of holding these islands permanently is one of the questions of the day, added interest is given the opinions of this non-partisan and unbiased naval writer. This series is published by permission of Mr. S. M. Kelly of Denison.

The U. S. Flagship "New York" left the New York Navy Yard at 8:00 a. m. on Saturday, the 16th day of December, 1899, to follow out a cruise proposed to and approved by the Navy Department, as given in an itinerary published before our sailing. The complement of officers and crew was complete, an abundant supply of fresh provisions had been taken on board by many of the messes to last for some time, and with prospects of beautiful weather and tropical scenery in place of the freezing temperature and probable deep snow of the coming winter at home, every one had occasion to be pleased with the winter cruise before them.

A constant rolling, due to a long swell from the eastward, was about the only out of common occurrence during our passage south to the islands. The maximum roll was 31 degrees to starboard, which occurred on the afternoon of December 19th. At 6:00 a. m. on the 22nd we passed Monito Island off the port beam, and at 5:15 p. m. anchored off the city of Santo Domingo, the capital of the republic of that name, and also the oldest city of the Western Hemisphere. The usual salutes were fired at this place and on the following day the admiral and his staff called upon the President of the Republic, and this visit was returned by state officials the same afternoon. There were no men-of-war present except two inside the river flying the flag of the Dominican Republic, one the 14 knot seven gun cruiser "Presidente," which has been reconstructed from the famous yacht "Deerhound," the vessel present at the battle between the U. S. ship "Kearsarge" and the Confederate Cruiser "Alabama," in 1864, and which picked up some of the men from the latter ship.

As Santo Domingo is only a part of the Island Hayti, a short description of the Island will here be given. Hayti is, with the exception of Cuba, the largest of all West India Islands, having a length of 407 miles, a breadth of 160 miles and covers an area of about 28,000 English square miles, or nearly the same size as Ireland. It is very mountainous, some of the peaks reaching an altitude of over 9,000 feet. The population of the whole island is at the present time about 700,000, of which 550,000 are subjects of the Haytian Republic on the western end of the island, and 150,000 subjects of the Santo Domingan Republic, on the eastern end of the island. Of the Haytian republic nearly 500,000 are of African descent, and of the Dominican about 25,000. Of the mixed races about 125,000 are Spanish and 50,000 of French descent. As no Haytian port will be visited until the latter part of this cruise, I will confine myself to a short description of the Dominican Republic and its capital.

San Domingo.—The republic of San Domingo has an area of about 18,000 square miles, which is nearly double that of the Republic of Hayti, while its population numbers only 150,000—about one-half that of the Negro nation. There is also a wide difference in the character of the people of the two republics. Those of San Domingo are to a considerable degree Spanish in their origin and traditions, and retain the Spanish language without any degeneration while the Haytians use an impure patois. About one-tenth of the present inhabitants are of pure Castilian blood, and the rest exhibit every degree of mixture of white and colored, with comparatively little of the unadulterated negro.

Santo Domingo began her independence in 1821, and was later coerced into a union with Hayti, which lasted until 1844, when the new Dominican republic was established, and the first president was chosen. In 1861 the mother country, Spain, resumed control, but this only made the then bad conditions worse, and in 1895 independence was again declared after expelling the Spanish authorities. The republic is divided into five provinces and two maritime districts. According to the constitution of 1844 the executive power is in the hands of the president, who is elected for six years, and assisted by a ministry of his own appointment; and the legislature in the hands of a senate of nine members. Each state or province has also a legislature of its own. The Roman Catholic church has always been dominant on the island.

City of San Domingo.—The officers went on shore in this interesting place on the morning following our arrival, and in the afternoon a party of the crew was also given permission. The city is situated at the mouth of the Ozama river. At the entrance we saw a well preserved fort, but without guns, and also the great tower of the Homen-age, now nearly 400 years old, and near it traces of the tower in which Christopher Columbus was confined before being sent home in chains. When Columbus first landed on this Island he established a settlement on the North Coast, and when he returned to Spain he left there a small garrison. One of the latter men, it is related, fell in love with an Indian girl, deserted his fellows, and followed her to the south coast, when he was shown gold at the mouth of the Ozama River. He went back to his fellows, was forgiven, and the town already established by them was soon abandoned, and a mad scramble followed for the place where the gold had been found. They built a city there, and on the east bank of the river are still remains of the town, called Bartolome, which was destroyed by a hurricane in 1502, when the present site of Santo Domingo was chosen as a more favorable one.

(To be Continued.)

Caas. Christensen and wife went to Dunlap yesterday where Charlie is to do some work in the carpenter line.

Crabs In Oysters.
"The demand for that little southern delicacy, the oyster crab, is always larger than the supply, and I have all I can do to obtain the 50 or 60 gallons which are daily required for favoring stews and making omelets in the leading hotels, restaurants and clubs of this city," said a wholesale fish dealer in New York to a Washington Star writer. "Our northern oysters do not contain the little dainties, so I am obliged to buy them from the oyster shuckers along the York, Rappahannock and other southern rivers. The Chesapeake bay shore oystermen send us some also."

"The little crab found in the oyster is not, as commonly supposed by two-thirds of the oyster eating community, the young of the blue crab, but is a distinct species. It is a messmate of and caterer to the wants of the oyster, being therefore a benefit instead of a detriment to the latter. In return for the oyster's kindness in protecting it against its enemies the little crab catches and crushes food which in its entire state could not be taken by the oyster. A singular thing in connection with them is that all found inside of the oyster are females. The male of the oyster is a more variety has a hard shell."

Turtles Trained to Fight.
You want to go to China to see animal fighting reduced to a science. There are hundreds of young men in the larger cities there who make a living by training animals to fight and in exhibiting their savage qualities to interested audiences. They catch both mud and snapping turtles, feed them on raw meat and some sort of drug that warms them up, and at the end of six months they become savage enough to fight a tiger. The jaws and teeth are filed and sandpapered until the mouth becomes a dangerous thing to go near. The turtle is tantalized each day with a piece of wood or a bunch of cotton until its temper reaches a white heat. When confronted with another turtle that has been trained and badgered in the same way, they go for each other with distended jaws, and there is sure to be a fight to a finish.

They have each been starved for a week. Each is handled by his owner, who has teased it to the killing point. The two turtles are then placed in a small ring, and only one comes out alive. The fight lasts from one to ten hours, and death generally comes only when one of them has secured a throat hold on his doomed antagonist.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

He Bought a Section.
A Pittsburguer who has money to spare had to go east on short notice. He is a man given to exclusiveness, and he detests traveling in a public conveyance because he is thrown in with so many persons of whom he knows nothing. When he does take a trip, he takes a stateroom wherever he can get it, or, failing in that, if his business is urgent, he takes a section in the sleeping car. He had little time to make arrangements last week, but his first thought was of a stateroom. He called one of the employees and hurried him to the ticket office.

"Get a stateroom, if you can," he said, "and, if you cannot, get a section. You know what a section is—two berths."

"Yes, sir," replied the man as he started off.
He returned soon with the information that there wasn't a stateroom to be had on the train.
"But I got two berths for you, sir," he said, handing out two tickets.
He nearly lost his job when his employer examined the tickets and found one for "upper 3" and the other for "upper 8."—Pittsburg News.

Accommodating Diseases.
Perhaps the record for school attendance belongs to a Walworth lad named Thomas Ward, who was never absent or late during his 11 years of school life, beginning with his fourth year. The local member of the school board for London tells the story that when the proud boy received the attendance medal for the eleventh year, which had to be specially struck to meet his case, the mother was questioned as to how her boy had been able to make so remarkable a record.
"Has he had the usual children's complaints?" she was asked.
"Yes, sir."
"The measles?"
"Yes, sir."
"Whooping cough?"
"Yes, sir."
"How is it, then, that he has never been away from school?"
"Well, sir, he had them in his holidays." was the interesting reply.—Westminster Gazette.

THE PARIS EXPOSITION

Graphic Letter From Rev. Father M. J. Farrelly.

FOR FRANCE AND RUSSIA

The Alliance an Ever Present Feature—Paris the Queen of the World's Cities.

PARIS, LE 21 May, 1900.

TO THE REVIEW:
As the story of my travels for the past six weeks—the story of a holiday leisurely spent in a pleasant continental tour—would be better told viva voce; your readers will please excuse my Italian and my Greek. Just let me say a word of France, of Paris and the exposition.

This country seems to be enjoying a period of prosperity and peace. Not a ripple of excitement to be seen in any quarter. Are the Dreyfusards dead? Yes, and buried, if the elections of the 13 inst and of yesterday count for anything. The battle was fought out on well defined lines—the cities of the nation were called upon to choose councilmen who in turn choose the members of the upper house and the result has been an overwhelming majority in favor of relegating the affair Dreyfus to the regions of the distant past where it should remain for ever. France is exceedingly prosperous, even more prosperous than the United States, and the prosperity is with the common people. This is a hard working, sober, saving people who own their own homes and have some money to loan to the government of their country. The soil is productive, the climate is mild, the manufacture of every article known to commerce progresses apace while every good Frenchman loves more the longer he lives, the incomparable beauties of his Belle France.

Paris stands alone—easily the queen of the world's cities—streets broad and clean—gutters washed with living water perpetually running—sidewalks shaded by fragrant blossomed chestnuts, public and private buildings substantial and artistic, fountains playing in the sunlight of the squares, parks and gardens—huge Norman horses hauling merchandise of every sort while the handsome French coach lurches all around you. I will not speak of the great church edifices, of Notre Dame the Sacred Heart or St. Sulpice; I will pass over the more than two hundred religious communities and their holy missions of charity. I will conclude this paragraph with the repetition—"Paris stands alone."

But what say I of the Exposition of 1900? I hardly know, I have tried for ten days to explore the halls, its passages and pavilions and the more I try the more I wonder. Larger than the World's Fair at Chicago, on the whole, it is to me less handsome. True, there are many sights exceedingly magnificent. The bridge of Alexander III, to commemorate the Franco Russian Alliance, the map of France presented by Russia, a map of precious stones studded with diamonds to mark the cities, costing four million francs, yet in strange contrast to this exhibition of the mutual friendship of these two countries, not more than twenty rods from the gilded figures of the great bridge, and at the west end of the Avenue of Alexandre Tresieme, stands out to the full gaze of every visitor, a permanent building of grand proportions, with its great dome and gold cross overlooking the political situation—the tomb of Napoleon—the only man who ever undertook to destroy the Empire of Russia. It is also true that the nations of the earth are well represented, along every line and in every department but no effort is anywhere made to conceal the avowals that France and Russia must stand or fall together.

This Paris exposition has no Midway Pleasance, no side shows, none of that abominable eastern and western laxity of morals that disgraced the World's Fair. The gayety of the capital does not disturb the sober seriousness, the practical piety of the exposition—so to speak, for it seems to me that here is a grand piece of competition along the lines of peaceful arts and progress.

The American exhibit is incomplete, Iowa has a modest corner in the American building; Commissioner Peck and Mr. Rouilliard are working hard to get the work done soon as possible; the presses will be running next week and visitors will be treated gratis to a daily paper printed in the best American fashion. Mr. A. D. Rouilliard is O. K.—much admired and respected—likes his new work, his new friends, but will be glad to come home in "single blessedness" when this fair is over. I will advise the people of Denison who need rest and recreation to visit the exposition and then I'll say Adieu,
M. J. FARRELLY.

DINNER ON WOODMEN DAY.
The young people of the Presbyterian Society will serve dinner and supper on Thursday (Woodmen Day) at the old German Methodist church building next to McAhren's livery. An excellent warm meal will be served for 35 cents. Patronize the young people.
G. A. Smith was up to West Side on business Monday afternoon.
H. Norman is at present up near Boyer working for Mr. Shives.

NOW FOR THE LOG ROLLING

Preparations All Completed For the Greatest Celebration Ever Held Here.

EVERY HOUR WILL BE FILLED WITH HILARITY.

People Coming From All Over Iowa to Be Present.—A Special Train From Sioux City.—People of the County Cordially Invited.—The Programme.

The Log Rolling is to be a grand success. Nothing but a deluge can prevent it. All the arrangements are made, the money is provided and the Woodmen await their guests with confidence and pleasure. As chairman of the finance committee, the editor has had occasion to sound public opinion and we know that Denison people are determined to make this a red letter day for every one who comes. The response for financial aid has been prompt and generous, so that the committees have been able to add many details which will delight and entertain the guests. Wednesday evening is to be devoted to the Woodmen exclusively, but the events of Thursday are free to all and everyone is invited. Denison extends a particular welcome to the people of the county to come and join the fun. The indications are that Denison will not celebrate the Fourth and that the Log Rolling will, in a measure, take its place. There will be plenty for everyone to see and hear and do, so bring the family and the family lunch basket and come and have a good time. The following gives an idea of the program, but does not contain all of the special features:—

WEDNESDAY EVENING.

AT THE CITY HALL.
A reception to visiting Woodmen will be held. Refreshments and cigars will be served and the following features will be included in the program:—
Music by the Denison Orchestra.

SANG WAY TO FAVOR.

A company of colored musicians played and sang their way into the favor of a large audience last night in the lecture room of the Young Men's Christian Association building, Grand and Franklin avenues. The entertainment was given under the auspices of the Caroulet M. E. church, and St. Lukes M. E. church and a second concert by the same organization for the benefit of the two congregations is to be given tomorrow evening at the same hall. The company presenting last night's program is styled the Canadian Jubilee Singers and Imperial Orchestra, and its members were quite versatile. The program consisted of orchestral selections, choruses, vocal and instrumental solos. All of the numbers were well received and encores were frequent.
Rev. Father White, of Dunlap, was a Denison visitor Monday.

HOLINESS MEETINGS

Many People In Attendance and Much Interest Manifest.

A BAND OF WORKERS.

Rev. Rees An Eloquent and Interesting Speaker.—Assisted by His Son.—Singing in Charge of Mr. Gillispie.
The ten days' Holiness Camp Meeting under the auspices of the International Holiness Union is in session and the meetings are now being well attended. Washington Park is being crowded every night with people coming from far and near. There is a good sprinkling of tents on the grounds used for camping purposes. Last Sunday the Park was over crowded with an attentive congregation, and Rev. Rees, the minister in charge, preached three eloquent sermons during the day. The song service was a special feature of the Sabbath ceremonies and was very much enjoyed by all. Those who have the meetings in charge are much pleased with the progress being made and predict a great amount of good will be the result.
