RESOLUTIONS.

Iowa republicans, meeting in this, the proudest era of the republic and the state, grateful for the services of its leaders and proud of the pre-eminent position they hold in the councils of the nation and the party, commend and indorse the Iowa delegation in both the senate and the house of representatives. They indorse and commend the wise and successful administration of Gov. Leslie M. Shaw in state affairs. They have no other platform to present for the present campaign than the national platform of Philadelphia, which meets with the unqualified approval of Iowa republicans.

The republican party of Iowa has no apologies to make for that platform nor for the candidates who stand upon it—William McKinley and Theodore Roosevelt. It asks for those candidates the support of every citizen who has at heart the welfare of the republic. It asks for the nominees of this convention, not only the loyal support of every republican, but of every voter in the state who desires the prosperity of our people and the progress of the commonwealth.

The republicans of Iowa have assembled this year under the shadow of a great sorrow, the death of our distinguished fellow citizen, John Henry Gear. No man in the state was closer to the hearts of the people; no one in public life ever served them more loyally, faithfully and untiringly; no one was truer to every public interest; no one more efficient and zealous in the discharge of every duty. His public career forms a part of the history of Iowa, and in his death we recognize a loss to the state and nation.

In the remote east, among a strange alien people, in scenes of terror and of peril, Edwin H. Conger, a citizen of Iowa, is now representing not only the honor of his country but the dignity and manhood of the American people. His friends and neighbors of whatever faith earnestly pray for the safety and immediate succor of him and his family, and that the day may come speedily when in his own home he may receive the assurances of their constant sympathy and of their ever increasing interest and regard.

The Republican State Convention held in Des Moines on Wednesday was in many respects one of the most notable in the history of the party. The attendance was exceedingly large, but the notable feature of the convention was the fact that nearly every district showed evidences of factional strife. While this is in some respects to be lamented, it nevertheless shows the vigor and activity of the Republicans of the state. So long as Republicans have a safe majority in Iowa, so long will there be rival factions which seek to gain party control. It is a notable fact that at every convention succeeding a senatorial election there is a re-action in favor of the unsuccessful candidate. Mr. Morrow, who is himself a splendid man, has been unfortunate in having his candidacy twice fall in the "off" year. Mr. Gilbertson however, is a strong man who will bring many votes to the ticket, and he had the unanimous support of the 10th district, being the only candidate for any office except Mr. Mullan of Waterloo, who had his entire district behind him. Mr. Gilbertson is a representative of the Scandinavian Republicans and his nationality undoubtedly had much to do with his selection. Mr. Martin, Republican candidate for Secretary of State, is the author of the mulct law, and is recognized as a man of liberal and progressive ideas; it was largely through his instrumentality that the Republican party got back to a common sense position on the liquor question. Both prohibitionists and anti-prohibitionists find fault with the present liquor law, but we believe that in the main it is a piece of wholesome legislation, placing all the practical restrictions possible about the saloon business, and placing these businesses in responsible hands. It is remarkable however, to note how wholly the question of liquor legislation which at one time divided the Republican party, has been laid aside. During Mr. Martin's candidacy there was hardly a mention made of his authorship of this famous law, and he received the votes of the strongest prohibition counties in the state as well as the votes of the so-called liberal counties of Scott and Clinton.

The most bitter fight of the convention took place in the 11th district, and resulted as it should have, in the defeat of the candidate who provoked the factional strife. The eleventh district might have had one place, and possibly two, on the ticket, but as a result of the internecine strife the district obtained nothing, and we believe it will be a number of years before the district can be sufficiently reunited to secure the nomination of any candidate.

The candidacy of Judge Z. A. Church was pushed with vigor by the counties of his judicial district and the counties lying in the southern half of the Tenth congressional district. It is greatly to be regretted that after receiving the solid support of the south half of the district for Mr. Gilbertson, the northern portion of the district could not have returned the compliment.

It would seem that the northern half of this district is totally regardless of district obligations. There has not been a candidate from this portion of the congressional district who has received the hearty support of their neighbors to the north. For our part we had hoped that this matter was at an end. We realized that owing to the arrangement of the Senatorial and Judicial districts and the fact that the candidacy of Senator Funk was announced previously to that of Governor Shaw, a number of the counties of the northern half of the district were under such obligations to the brainy Senator from Dickinson that they could not well leave him. Anxious as we were for their support in 1897 we could not but see the fairness of their position. Since that time, however, there has not arisen a single proposition in which these northern counties were willing to unite in good faith with the southern counties. They have continuously asked and received the support of the south end for their candidates, but have been willing to tender nothing in return. Even in the matter of the candidacy of Hon. Thos. Rae of Crawford county for presidential elector, although the north half had no candidate up until the morning of the caucus, so determined were they not to yield gracefully to any request coming from the south end of the district, that two candidates were introduced at that late hour and it was only after a close contest that Mr. Rae was successful. Crawford county wishes to thank those of its neighbors who responded to its request for support in this matter, and, we believe, that should any of these counties call upon Crawford county for aid at any time it will be cheerfully forthcoming. There are matters which are apt to arise in this district in which the southern counties and their public men may be of great benefit to the republican leaders of every county in this district. It would be the part of wisdom for the northern counties to frankly admit that they have not lived up to their district obligations, to promise to do so in the future, and to keep that promise. We are in favor of "letting the dead past bury its dead," we have no personal strife nor animosity toward any man living in the northern tiers of counties; we wish for co-operation, not from selfish motives for the aggrandizement of any south district man, but to the end that the tenth congressional district may act as a unit and thus be able to accomplish something for itself and others. We warn our friends that this game of all give and no take cannot go on forever.

Crawford county has no reason to regret its part in the past convention. It was loyal to both candidates from its district, and neither Mr. Gilbertson nor Mr. Church have reason to be anything but grateful. As to the other candidates having no particular interest at stake and its vote being considered in some places as to a certain extent being the expression of the governor's political wishes, the vote of the county was wisely divided between the various candidates. Although Crawford county did not cut any spectacular figure in the convention, its record was one of loyalty and wisdom as the vote of the county will show. For our part we much prefer suffering defeat with our friends and going down with the flag at the mast and with the feeling, that we have been honest with those who had reason to expect our support, than to jump into every passing band wagon at the expense of the loss of our own self-respect and the esteem and confidence of our friends. The ticket as named is an excellent one, geographically it is well distributed throughout the state and each candidate represents an element of strength. The selection of Chancellor Emlin McClain for judge was a particularly fortunate one. He is recognized as one of the greatest men of the legal profession in Iowa. The hundreds of young men throughout the state, who received their legal education at his hands and who feel toward him the strongest sentiments of personal affection, will, we believe, make his vote for supreme judge relatively larger than that received by any other candidate for that position this state has ever seen.

With the ticket as named there is no danger but that Iowa will give from sixty to seventy-five thousand republican majority this fall.

THE STATE COMMITTEE.

Wednesday afternoon the republican state central committee was organized. H. O. Weaver was re-elected chairman and C. W. Phillips secretary. E. H. McCutchen of Holstein, was defeated by Geo. C. Scott of Plymouth county. The following is the committee;

- First district—H. O. Weaver, of Louisa, (hold-over.)
- Second—C. W. Phillips, of Jackson (holder.)

- Fifth—E. M. Sargent, of Grundy (hold-over.)
- Sixth—R. W. Clayton, of Mahaska (hold-over.)
- Seventh—S. M. Leach of Dallas (hold-over.)

The following is the section of that portion of the new constitutional amendment by which the people of North Carolina are striving to exhibit their love for universal liberty and the principles of the Declaration of Independence:

No male person who, on January 1, 1867, was entitled to vote under the laws of any State in which he then resided, and no lineal descendant of any such person, shall be denied the right to register and vote at any election in the State by reason of his not possessing the educational qualifications prescribed in section 4 of this article; provided, he shall have registered in accordance with the terms of this section prior to Dec. 1, 1908. The General Assembly shall provide a permanent record of all who register under this section on or before Nov. 1, 1908; and all such persons shall be entitled to register and vote at all elections by the people in this State, unless disqualified under section 2 of this article (for crime, non-residence, or removal); provided, such persons shall have paid their poll taxes according to law.

The section 2 referred to is the one fixing the educational test for registration.

It will be observed that no matter how ignorant a man may be, if he were intitled to vote in 1867, or if he is lineal descendant of a man who was entitled to vote at that time, the educational requirement does not effect him; in short, the educational requirement is but a sham and an excuse to disenfranchise the laboring man of North Carolina. In his speech of acceptance, we trust, Mr. Bryan will not neglect this opportunity of promoting the principles of liberty which he now affects to love so dearly. It would be entirely proper for him to tell the people why the principle that no government derives its just powers without the consent of the governed does not apply to North Carolina.
