"If there is any one who believes the gold standard is a good thing or that it must be maintained, I warn him not to cast his vote for me, because I promise him it is not to be maintained in this country longer than I am able to get rid of it."—W. J. Bryan.

LATER DAY COPPERHEADS.

Mr. L. E. Godkin of New York, Wall Street is his probable address, as according to our democratic friends everybody from the eastern metropolis resides on that street, is out in a letter in the Evening Post in which he makes a fierce attack on President McKinley. He says, "the President has done everything leading up to a coup d'etat, that there is no denying that McKinley has disregarded the constitution by annexing foreign provinces without the authority of law, that he has committed faults unknown to former presidents; that he has employed 65,000 Americans to massacre foreigners who have done no injury, and to destroy their homes; that he has declared war upon a friendly power, that he has done all the things which usually precede a coup d'etat whether under Julius Caesar or Louis Napoleon, and what is unheard of in history he has secured a congress in connivance with him."

The above attack upon the president of the United States can be answered by every school boy who has read the recent history of his country. The soldiers in Denison who have returned from the Philippines know that war was not declared upon a friendly power; they know that in the dead of night, this so-called "friendly power" rose up by stealth and with premeditation to massacre every man, woman and child in the city of Manila who was not of Philippine origin. They know and can tell of the cruelty and treachery of this well planned attempt at butchery; they know that not an American soldier fired a shot until the American flag was fired upon by Aguinaldo and his fellow assassins. Aguinaldo's proclamation, his warnings sent to friends weeks in advance, all go to prove the blood-thirsty designs, which were only frustrated by the bravery and courage of the 65,000 American boys who, Mr. Godkin asserts, left their homes and followed the flag to distant seas to massacre and destroy the homes of innocent foreigners. There is one statement in Mr. Godkin's letter which he himself contradicts in the course of his attack. He says that McKinley disregarded the constitution by annexing foreign provinces without the authority of law, and later he adds that he did these things by the connivance of congress. Congress is a constitutional power through which annexations of territory may be made. If, therefore, the president acted with the connivance, and consent, and initiative of congress, Mr. Godkin's contention is disproved by his own words. The letter emanating from New York is noteworthy only in that it shows the class of people whom the republican party is to fight this year. The leaders are of the same class as were the "copperheads" during the administration of President Lincoln. We can find in the attacks made on President Lincoln at that time almost the exact language as that used by Mr. Godkin. Mr. Lincoln, it is said, committed faults unknown to former presidents. When he called for 75,000 volunteers, this same class denounced the act as an attempt to coerce without their consent the free people of the south. The same cry of "no government without the consent of the governed" was brought to bear. The same hypocritical tears were shed over the declaration of independence. The same hands were held up in holy horror over the violation of the constitution. Later when Abraham Lincoln signed that great proclamation which was intended to free millions of human beings, an intention which would have been carried out in spirit, as well as in letter, had it not been for continuous acts of oppression by the democrats of the south; when he signed this great proclamation how this same class degenerates did cry out against the violation of the sacred property rights of the southern people. "How they sneered at the abolitionists, and how they compared Abraham Lincoln's proclamation to the acts of the British during the Revolutionary war, in securing the co-operation of the savage Indians to massacre American settlers. All these things are matters of history. It seems almost impossible to us now that these sentiments were ever expressed by American citizens, living under the broad light of American civilization. These men called God to witness that slavery was right; that a man because he was white, had a God given right to barter and sell his own flesh and blood; that Abraham Lincoln, whose immortal name Bryan pollutes by his quotations, was a traitor and violator of the liberties of the American people. These things were said by preachers of the gospel, by writers and men of prominence just as they are being said today, and we believe that when another generation has passed the traducers of President McKinley will be classed in the minds and hearts of the American people with these men, as people who failed to grasp the ideas of American progress and of the God-given destiny of our nation.

Mr. Godkin's letter is an insult to the good sense of the American people; to the honor of its congress and to the patriotism of its soldiery. We appeal to all right thinking, sober-minded people if they wish to join hands with the Godkins and the Atkinsons of the east in their wild denunciations of an administration that has done more to promote the prosperity and welfare of this nation than any other administration in its history, and that has accomplished more for the general up-lifting of mankind, and the progress of civilization throughout the world, than has been done by any American since Abraham Lincoln signed that "traitorous" (?) proclamation. Do not endorse these detractors by your vote at the polls. Do not say to the world that the American people repudiated one of the grandest chapters in their history. It is well to look backward, but let us not go backward. The hand of destiny points to every man his way; the door of opportunity is open at some time to all. Those who press onward reach the goal, those who linger, whining at the advancement of others, carping at petty ills, reach not that goal, and the setting sun finds them with their work undone and with their task unfinished; hopeless failures seeking to blame not their own incompetence, but the energy and success of those who nobly fought to win the prize.

BRYAN, THE BRAVE.

Some one in Mr. Bryan's audience had the unlimited impudence to ask him what he had to say relative to the taking away of the rights of citizenship from the negroes of North Carolina as has been recently done by the democrats of that state. "That is just what I want to talk about," said Mr. Bryan, "I want to talk about the negroes, and speaking of negroes reminds me of the Sultan of the Sulu Islands." Not a word did Mr. Bryan, the friend of the oppressed, the apostle of liberty, the great guiding star of those who do not wish to work for a living, have to say about this action in North Carolina which is one of the deepest blots upon the history of our country to-day. Mr. Bryan denounces the policy of the administration in our new possessions. He deplores the fact that American enterprise and civilization have entered those islands; that roads are being built, industries revived, public schools instituted and law and order made to take the place of Spanish oppression and native savagery. Mr. Bryan shed tears over these people who are being thus abused. He deplores the fact that the blessings of education are being extended to the people of Porto Rica and the Philippines. He breaks forth in violent denunciation against a cruel president who will not allow Aguinaldo and his brigands to massacre and burn and destroy without let or hindrance.

It pains him that after having driven out the power of Spain, after having become the legal sovereigns of these islands by the treaty which he, himself, endorsed and helped to ratify, that any man should be compelled to swear allegiance to the flag and to live under its folds as a peaceful and law-abiding citizen under the promise and sacred pledge of the United States of America, that as soon as order shall be restored, he shall enjoy the privileges and blessings of American civilization. These things Mr. Bryan deplores, and while he has the insurmountable gall to quote in his cause the immortal Lincoln, he has not one word to say against those men who have successfully conspired to make null and void the very act which gave to Abraham Lincoln his immortality. What liberties did Aguinaldo, the self-exiled bribe taker of Hong Kong, have which have been taken from him by the American people? What rights and liberties did the Philippino people have which have not been increased many fold by American rule, and which will not be infinitely more extended when peace and order is restored to the islands? Compare their case to that of the colored people of North Carolina; men whose ancestors were brought to this country by cajolery and force and treachery; men born and bred upon American soil, seeing with their own eyes and knowing from their own experience what it is to be an American citizen. These men have, within the last few months through intimidation, threats, and violence, had their liberties taken from them and have been reduced to practical serfdom, and Bryan says not one word. Can any of you give any other reason for his silence save these acts of brutal force were committed by democrats in a democratic state, and that it is only by their votes and by the votes of their fellows in the South, that Mr. Bryan can for one moment expect to be elected president? How different is he from that great man who declared that "he would rather be right than president." Bryan is willing to grovel in the ditch before these southern violators of liberty, willing to denounce the brave American volunteers, willing to commit this country to a policy of financial ruin; willing to create discord and distrust among the people of this country; willing to be all things to all men; willing to degrade himself to the last level of demagogery if only he may by his many sided acting cajole enough of the American people to place him in the president's chair. We do not believe that it can be. We do not believe that the God of nations who has watched over us through all the many crises of our history can intend that this blight should fall upon the American people. We do not believe that a sufficient number of people can be found, who have so far forgotten their duty to themselves and to their country, who have become so misguided by high sounding phrases and glittering promises to place in power this Don Quixote of American politics who cries with loud voice against the introduction of American civilization in other lands and yet who dares not, and we use the word advisedly, dares not, we say, utter one word against the atrocities which the men of his own party have perpetrated against the helpless colored American citizens of the south.

Judge Conner will not be called "Shaw's man" or anybody else's man by those who know him. He is a man of great strength of character and marked individuality. Indeed his individuality and independence of thought and action at times border on imperious self-assertion. He is nobody's man. He is too large and strong to act under the influence of another. L. M. Shaw could no more control the course of action of J. P. Conner than he could that of Theodore Roosevelt. It should be understood from the first that the successor to J. P. Dolliver is a man of full stature and has entire control of his own intellectual assets. —Carroll Herald.

Mr. W. S. Kenyon of Fort Dodge has just been nominated for District Judge to succeed Judge Birdsall, resigned. The nomination is a source of especial pleasure to the republicans of Crawford county. Early in the congressional campaign Mr. Kenyon gave his support to Judge Conner, later the resignation of Judge Birdsall and his own candidacy placed him in an embarrassing position, as the congressional candidates in that judicial district were most insistent that he should support them. Mr. Kenyon said that his word had been given and that his honor was dearer than the judgeship. The result shows that men who prize honor most are themselves most highly prized, and we sincerely congratulate Mr. Kenyon on his elevation to the bench. He is a young man of splendid ability and will make an able Judge.

The nomination of Judge Conner for congress meets the approval of Carroll people. While there was a hope that a home man would be chosen at the Fort Dodge convention it was generally conceded that Judge Conner ought to come next. The Judge is as well known in Carroll as he is in his own town, almost, having been presiding Judge here for years, and our people all know and admire him. While on the bench he became part of the social life of Carroll and was generally liked. Since his retirement to the practice he has been in attendance at nearly every term of court and kept in touch with the business and political interests of the town and county. Our people know and like him so well that there was a general feeling that he ought to be the congressman, if Carroll county could not have the nominee. —Carroll Herald.

GOV. L. M. SHAW AT CARROLL Has a Big Meeting and is Given a Royal Reception by the People.

The court house was packed last evening by one of the largest audiences ever assembled to hear a political speech in Carroll. The reason that several hundred more people did not hear Governor L. M. Shaw was because they could not get into the court room or within hearing distance. It was a magnificent gathering. Neither Dolliver nor Bryan ever addressed a better one in Carroll. Patriotic pieces by the band had put the vast assembly in fine "form" for the governor's masterful address, and for two full hours he held the closest attention of all within the sound of his voice. It is saying a good deal to state that Gov. Shaw is making his best speeches this year, but it is so. After listening to his logical discourse for two full hours one may readily understand how it is Iowa's governor ranks among the ablest speakers in the nation. As in 1896, he states his case in such a way as to make every hearer understand, and he argues with such fairness and logic that no candid listener can differ from him when through. The fact is, Governor Shaw is simply invincible on the stump. His speech carried conviction and is a vote-getter. It did good and will be often referred to from now till election day.
