

THE SECOND MARRIAGE.

Her soft brown eyes opening to his face as through the aisle's one sunlight shaft they pass...

"He is too young to live alone," we hear, "This woman's fair as was the first, and then she's dead a year."

"The new life clings as fondly as the old;" "There's love in brown eyes as there was in blue;"

"The elm, you know, looks bare without a vine;" "But, ah, Death makes, when two souls intertwine, No void place for the new!"

"Yet this his first true flow'r of love may be;" "Oh, on the dead wife's grave why pour out gall?"

Laughter and bells ring o'er the bridal train, But through their sigh upon the love tuned ear...

SALT WATER BLOOD.

An Operation That Is the Saving of Many Human Lives.

Transfusion of blood is a procedure that must have been employed by physicians in very early times. Ovid tells of Medea bringing back youth to the aged by the injection into their veins of the blood of young men...

The procedure is a dangerous one, however, although many lives have been saved by it, and it has now been almost entirely abandoned...

It is found that the blood when defibrinated is no longer a living fluid, and the corpuscles it contains serve no useful purpose when injected...

Often it is not even necessary to pour the fluid into a vein, but simply to inject it through one or more hollow needles into the tissues beneath the skin of the abdomen or the thigh.

This is done not only to supply an equivalent for fluid lost in hemorrhage or cholera, but also in certain diseases in which blood poisoning exists.

In this latter case a large amount of fluid is injected slowly, and being taken up by the blood is almost immediately excreted through the kidneys...

This operation has been felicitously called "blood washing," for this is what it really is, and to the process humanity owes the saving of many lives.

There are many good housekeepers who are indifferent in the matter of saving small coal and cinders. Unseen waste goes on in most houses in this respect.

After the cinders have been removed cold water should be poured over them. This causes them to make much better fuel when mixed with coals.

The best kitchen fire is made by putting coal in front, banking up cinders behind and then leaving the fire alone. To be constantly stirring a fire takes all the life out of the coals and also "starts" the dust.

In Guinea if a child is slow in its movements the parents apply an ant to the child instead of a whip to make it move faster. This little ant bites more cruelly than a mosquito, and its bite is apt to be troublesome afterward.

A party of Americans were sitting on the upper deck of a Rhine river boat enjoying the charming scenery. One was reading aloud from a guidebook about the various castles as they came into view.

"No," said a man standing by her side; "those are the shades of their ancestors."

"D'ye notice onny change since ye was here before, sor?" asked the native guide at the lakes of Killarney.

"How do you know I was never here before?" asked the American tourist.

"Faith, sor, no man ever comes here that hasn't been here before." Philadelphia Record.

He—Have you done as I asked, Elsie, and saved some money this month?

She—Oh, yes. I spoke to the grocer and asked him not to send in my bill next month. Pilegende Blatter.

A FAMOUS BEAUTY'S RESCUE

Emily Marshall's Walk Over a Human Bridge at Niagara.

Writing of "The Loveliest Woman in All America," William Ferrine, in The Ladies' Home Journal, recalls the thrilling adventure of Emily Marshall, the famous Boston beauty, at Niagara Falls.

"In the commotion Job had been forgotten, but instantly a ray of hope shot into Willis' heart when he saw his rugged features, his sandy hair plastered over his forehead, his scanty dress clinging to his form like a skin and his hand trembling on the poet's shoulder as he stammered his steps.

"Willis covered his eyes in fear and wonder. The next moment when he opened them they lay at his feet the quivering and exhausted girl. Job was nearly seven feet high. He had flung himself over the gulf, caught the rock with his fingers and with certain death if he missed his hold.

HE ASPIRED TO OFFICE.

And He Will Never Forget His First Lesson in Politics.

One Detroitier who hopes some day to be elected to the legislature jollies the reporters by saying that he used to be a member of the craft.

"Well, just between you and me, it was this way: My father ran a weekly paper down in Indiana, and it was the party organ in the country.

"So I put up what I thought was a great scheme and kept it from the governor. The truth is that I thought him just a little skay for my chag.

"We had a delightful talk for an hour, smoking his cigars and sampling the juice of the grape from his own vineyard. I was too tickled for words till I got about half way home.

"That naive trust in human honesty that one sees here is distinctly American," said an Englishman, pointing to a letter box.

"Jack is awfully taken with that blond Perkins girl."

"Yes, he even thinks she's pretty after she's been eating huckleberry pie." Chicago Record.

"No, he doesn't seem to have any heart in his work."

"I'm afraid he hasn't any work in his heart." Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Of all the tantalizing things by which we are beset, the man who makes an "able" speech, he is the toughest yet.

And the boys get tired and wriggle, and the girls all want to giggle, and I lose his chain of logic and go drifting into doubt.

It really must be a most depressing mental strain for a man to have an "able" reputation to sustain.

And just when I am dozing and in comfort am proposing to yield my own opinions to this wondrous able chap.

His monotone he changes and through wild crescendos ranges in a series of explosions just to jar my little nap.

The fellow was thrifty, the maiden was shifty, and she had her eye fixed on his pail. Such shirt waists she bought as would look—and why not—As if made by her dear little self.

Fortunes of War.

Abdul Hamid smiled and blew the blue wreaths of his cigarette ceilingward.

"No," he said, "I am not an advocate of peace. Let there be war and plenty of it."

"Why are you thus minded?" asked the foreign diplomat.

The diplomat quietly tore up his bill and went back to his legation.—Syracuse Herald.

Too Close For Comfort.

Little Waldo—Professor Thingumbob in his work on sociology advises us to get in touch with the masses, but I never imagined it would be anything like this.—New York Journal.

Intuitive Knowledge.

"You are such a worthless fellow!" she faltered, with quivering lips.

"For I am only 17 years old, and I love you desperately!" exclaimed Maud, her eyes filling with hot, blinding tears.

Foster St. Cyr pressed his hand to his throbbing temple and wondered if the intuition of this mere child had indeed discovered his true character.—Detroit Journal.

A Tip For Married Men.

Mrs. Henpeck—I have no control over my husband at all any more.

Hardupp—I'm very sorry, but I can't pay you today. You see, the grocery man has just been here, and—

"Your dissipated cousin from Paris is keeping very straight, isn't he?"

"Some folks," said Uncle Eben, "seems so skay for feah dey won't gib de debble his due dat dey seems liable to foght about whut's comin to de younsh people."—Washington Star.

Intricacies of Girlish Friendships.

"What brought on this dreadful coolness between you and Viola, Lillian?"

"Pa, what's an optimist?"

"Jack is awfully taken with that blond Perkins girl."

"Yes, he even thinks she's pretty after she's been eating huckleberry pie." Chicago Record.

"No, he doesn't seem to have any heart in his work."

"I'm afraid he hasn't any work in his heart." Cleveland Plain Dealer.
