THE "EMPEROR" RESIGNS.

Following so closely upon Mr. Bryan's statement that President McKinley was an "emperor" and the insinuation that he desired to perpetuate his reign, the statement just given to the public by the President has great force. Mr. McKinley says:

I regret the suggestion of a third term has been made. I doubt whether I am called upon to give it notice. But there are new questions of gravest importance before the administration and the country, and their just consideration should not be prejudiced in the public mind by even the suspicion of a thought of a third term.

In view, therefore of the reiteration of the suggestion of it, I will say now, once and for all, expressing a long settled conviction, that I not only am not and will not be a candidate for a third term, but would not accept a nomination for it, if it were tendered me.

My only ambition is to serve a second term to the acceptance of my countrymen, whose generous confidence I so deeply appreciate, and then with them do my duty in the ranks of private citizenship.

William McKinley.

The third term idea, which had never taken strong hold among the people, has thus been laid to rest. We say that it had not taken strong hold among the people, but this was not because they do not love and honor the President, but because of the deep rooted prejudice against a third term for the presidency, which has evidenced itself throughout the entire history of this country. Among the greatest of the great deeds of Washington was his resignation. Had he accepted a third term the precedent would have been established and it would have been much easier for this country to have drifted into monarchy. As it is, the existence of an empire with the emperor changed every eight years is an absurdity.

The letter of President McKinley has naturally opened up the gossip concerning his succession and it is with pleasure we note that the eyes of people all over the country have turned to Gov. L. M. Shaw as one of the bright possibilities. It would certainly be a grand thing for Iowa, and a triumph for all the West, should he receive the nomination. It would break the ice and remove some of the barriers of prejudice which the east has for anything coming from beyond the Mississippi. No where could a more ideal man be found to unite east and west. Gov. Shaw has all the business judgment and shrewdness of the former and all the energy and enterprise of the latter. He is a Vermonter transplanted in early life to western soil and is typical of the best of the two forms of Americanism. Looking over the field of western statesmen, there is only one other to be found who has the entire confidence of the east and the entire affection of the west as does Gov. Shaw. That man is another son of Iowa, Senator Wm. B. Allison. It is understood that Senator Allison will not be a candidate and it would appear that, if the West is really desirous of being for the first time honored with the presidency, Gov. Shaw is the man upon whom it must unite.

This does not mean that the West has not produced other great men, great orators, great thinkers, but there are none whom natural ability, circumstance, and force of character have placed in such commanding position throughout the entire country. Gov. Shaw has made an almost ideal official. Since the time of Kirkwood no other governor has had so many various and trying details to contend with and no governor has been more free from substantial criticism. It is true that the Governor has detractors but in a record of four years the only thing which has been found against him by most the acute and persistent of his critics is that he accepted as safe and proper for railroad assessments the basis which has been used in Iowa for many years, the basis upon which Larrabee and Boies and Jackson and Drake acted and which through all these years has been considered fair except for the jealousies among the railroads themselves. Before Governor Shaw had been seated four months the Cuban war was upon us. It demanded new duties of the governor not exercised since the time of Kirkwood. It is a matter of state history how well and nobly Gov. Shaw responded. What a personal interest he took in the boys from Iowa! The judgment and care displayed was fully justified in the Iowa regiments which saw actual fighting. No regiments made better records than did the Iowa boys and it was found that they were fully equipped, well drilled and ready and fit for duty, where other regiments rushed to the front by over-anxious governors fell by the wayside. When the Iowa boys were encamped in Tennessee, Gov. Shaw investigated the conditions for himself, doing what few other governors did, and spending his own money freely for comforts for the Iowa boys. He made a journey to Washington and hastened the return of those who were not to be sent to the front and on every occasion showed his good will and his determination to be of use to the Iowa troops.

When Governor Shaw took his seat the state was many hundreds of thousands of dollars in debt. The credit for the fact that there is now a handsome balance in the treasury is not due to him alone. But it must be remembered that he has plunged the state into no useless extravagances, that he has been careful and wise and that he has discouraged no law which had for its purpose the economical administration of the state's affairs. It is a well known fact that if the executive but winks at extravagance, lavish expenditures are apt to follow. Gov. Shaw did not do this. He has been as wise a counsellor when the treasury was replete as when it was depleted and has seen to it that the people have received full value for every dollar expended. Above all things Gov. Shaw has shown himself to be beyond petty things. As one of the large supporters and strong friends of Cornell college it was feared by some that he would discriminate against the State University. The verdict of those who know is that no governor has taken a more active interest in the work of the university or has given wiser council for its growth and development.

The board of control bill was passed during Gov. Shaw's first term. It was a new departure. Its success depended largely upon the personnel of the board and the personnel of the board depended upon the governor. The wisdom of his selection for that board surprised the state. It has been often repeated that at that time and in that emergency no better men could have been named. Ex-Gov. Larrabee, John Cornie, ex-Supreme Judge Kinne were names to conjure with. They at once raised the Board in the estimation of the people and gave a weight to its actions which nothing else could have done.

At the death of Senator Gear many friends urged the governor to pursue such a course as would promote him to the senatorship. We know that the governor did not listen to these suggestions for a moment. It was also forecasted that he would appoint a nonentity who would not expect to be a candidate for election and thus leave the field open for the governor. What the governor did was to appoint a man from his own congressional district, thus effectually shutting the door in his own face. That the appointment was a good one is shown by the fact that in the present gubernatorial contest a large number of the conventions endorsing Senator Dooliver's chief opponent for the senatorial appointment also endorse Dooliver's appointment as made by Gov. Shaw. In the present contest Gov. Shaw has been a spectator only. He has felt that it was not proper for a governor to even attempt the dictation of his own successor and he has demanded of none of his friends that they support or oppose any candidate. This is the official record of Gov. Shaw.

As a public speaker he is regarded as one of the strongest advocates of sound money and republicanism. His speeches have been listened to by interested thousands and read by interested millions. He does not court the graces of oratory, but rather that plainness of speech and thought which immortalized Lincoln and which has been the foundation of the oratory of all those great men whose words have accomplished results in the world. His private character is without a flaw. No breath of scandal has ever attached to his name. He is true to his friends and kindly to his enemies. He is conservative, safe and careful. His range of vision is wider than Iowa; or the West; or the East. He is big enough to be president of the whole country, giving to each section its due, and to be just and generous to all. The presidential nomination is a long way ahead, many events may transpire which will remove the possibility of a western man. As we understand it Gov. Shaw does not wish to pose as a presidential candidate. It would be well for the republicans of Iowa to bear in mind, however, that by wise and careful management Iowa may be able to present an acceptable candidate to the republicans of the nation in the person of Gov. Shaw, and that if he should be a candidate and if he should be successful, it would be the greatest aid to the material and political prosperity of Iowa and the West of anything that has ever happened in their history.

GREENE COUNTY SITUATION.

The republicans of Greene county have seen fit to make almost impossible the candidacy of Judge Z. A. Church for the supreme bench. This is a matter to be regretted by all of Judge Church's friends. He was worthy and entitled to the support at least of his home county and we believe of the delegates from the entire Tenth district. It is too often the case that men, over-anxious to carry their point, lose sight of the future and thus involve themselves in enmities and factional fights which last for years. It appears that the Greene county convention was entirely in the hands of Mr. Cummins' friends, it was understood that only Cummins men were to be on the delegation and it would have seemed that resolutions were unnecessary. Judge Church had brilliant prospects of victory; we know of many counties outside of this district that would have supported him and we are inclined to ask the Judge to re-consider his withdrawal.

We believe we know enough of the sentiments of Crawford county republicans to say that Judge Church will receive their hearty support if he will permit the use of his name. Crawford is for the Tenth district first, last and all the time. It knows no paramount obligations to any man or set of men. The Greene county delegates should get together, ask Judge Church to remain in the field and pledge him their earnest support, then, if he consents to remain a candidate, they should go to Cedar Rapids prepared to make a strong fight for him and thus refute the charge that Greene county does not stand by its own candidates. As far as Crawford county is concerned it will make no difference how the Greene delegation votes for governor. We feel under deep obligations to that county and are prepared to stand by their candidate if they have one. Let the breach in Greene be healed, let the county vote for the candidate for governor of their choice, but let them be firm in their support of Judge Church. Greene county should not court a similar state of affairs as that which confronts Carroll.
