Crawford County State Bank

DENISON, IOWA.

The Best Security for Depositors. Farm Loans at Five Per Cent Interest.

This Bank is incorporated under the laws of the State of Iowa. This gives the best security to all depositors, not only to the amount of stock, but the personal property of each shareholder is held to the amount of his share for any loss to the bank. Incorporated banks are under the control of the State Auditor, who can at any time examine the business, and according to his investigation the published statements are made. Depositors in an incorporated bank have more security than the confidence imposed in the offices. They have the best security, because the capital stock can not be used at pleasure for outside speculation and investment. The Crawford County State Bank is the best incorporated banking institution in the County. A general banking business done.

REPUBLICANS AND THE TARIFF.

To Secretary Leslie M. Shaw, of Denison, was given the honor of opening the republican campaign of this year. Under the circumstances it may be considered that he spoke with authority and represented the administration ideas of the tariff and other questions. The Secretary was specific in his declaration of endorsement of the Iowa platform but at the same time he pointed out ways in which the platform might be misinterpreted and cause dissension and unrest in republican ranks and throughout the business world. We believe that the republicans of the country would better devote their efforts toward seeing how near they can get together rather than trying to discover how far they are apart. The doctrine of protection is an ingrained republican doctrine. It is a doctrine that has always brought prosperity to the country when put into practice and which has always brought disaster when disregarded. It can safely be asserted therefore that protection is one of the fundamental principles of republicanism and one upon which all can unite.

It is further safe to say that no republican desires the protective tariff to act as a shelter for monopoly. The protective tariff is designed not only to protect American labor but also to protect capital to the extent of a fair and living profit. Unless capital is thus protected, labor cannot be. When in the course of industrial and commercial changes the protection goes beyond this it is wrong and unnecessary. But again when protection goes beyond this point home competition steps in and as a rule counteracts the injustice of the tariff. Let us be concrete in our statement. Let us suppose that at American wages and with a fair allowance for American profit to the manufacturer an article could have been laid down to the consumer in this country five years ago for ten dollars. Under the European wage as scale the same article could have been laid down in this country for eight dollars. At that time a tariff of two dollars would have placed the American manufacturer on an equality with the European manufacturer and would have correctly carried out the republican idea of protection. In the course of time the American manufacturer is enabled to produce the same article for nine dollars or even less. If his only competitor were the European manufacturer he would have an unfair advantage and would be enabled to reap an exorbitant profit.

This is the point at which home competition steps in. There never was a time when capital could be more easily attracted to any project which gives promise of fair returns. Other American manufacturers enter the field and it is but a short time until the price to the consumer is made on the nine dollar basis. In this case one dollar of the protective tariff becomes practically inoperative and whether it remains on the statute books or not is of small concern. It is only in case the American manufacturers get together, form a monopoly completely annulling the factor of home competition that the tariff becomes irksome and should be repealed. It becomes therefore the duty of those who urge tariff reductions to be specific. Secretary Shaw points out that nothing will be gained by the reduction of the tariff on beef cattle for instance as the beef combine, if exists would be just as easily able to control the market and the only effect would be to put the western farmer and the stock raiser in direct competition with the "grazers" of Mexico. The REVIEW pointed out some time ago what would be the effect of a reduction in the tariff on anthracite coal. How it would simply place a lever in the hands of the coal combine that would compel American workmen to accept whatever wages the operators wished to grant. Our reading the Secretary's speech presents to us entirely different views from those presented to the Sioux City Journal for instance. The Journal seems to think the Secretary's idea is to muzzle the republican press and the republican voters. We believe the Secretary's idea is that it is the first duty of the republicans to elect a republican congress so that whatever tariff changes are necessary may be made by the friends, not the enemies of protection and then not to persist with cheap talk about "protected trusts" but to point out the specific cases where the tariff is a hardship upon the people at large and see that these schedules are corrected. The Secretary is eminently correct in his statement that random tariff debate breeds general business stagnation. Experience has shown that this is so. The Wilson bill while embracing so many protective ideas that Grover Cleveland refused to sign it still disturbed business to a tremendous extent. Let the impression go out that there is to be a general tariff revision and business interests will run to cover and hard times will be quickly upon us. Let it be understood, however, that no changes are to be made unless it is clearly proven that the tariff gives undue protection to some specific industry and the wheels of industry will not cease.

CONCERT IS A SUCCESS

DENISON SINGERS AGAIN PROVE THEIR EXCELLENCE

Individual Work of Great Merit. Prof. Bartlett Highly Commended By Local Musicians.

The grand chorus concert given at the opera house on Wednesday evening proved a rare musical treat and was greatly enjoyed by a well filled house. Considering the disadvantages of bad weather during the rehearsals and busy way in which Denison people are always engaged the excellence of the choral work was very remarkable and many are the words of praise bestowed upon Prof. M. L. Bartlett for his efficient training. The fact was established beyond cavil that Denison can sing and it will indeed be a pity if a permanent chorus is not organized as a result.

The work of the chorus was appreciated by all and the solo numbers were received with great applause throughout the evening.

First among the special features was a clarinet solo by Mr. Thos. Coates. This was executed in a masterly manner and received a hearty encore. Prof. Bartlett paid tribute to Mr. Coates' excellence by pronouncing it the work of an artist and one of the best performances he had ever heard. Soprano solos of great merit were rendered by those favorite singers of Denison, Mrs. John Kott, Miss Lillian Garrison, Mrs. E. Hamilton, whose old friends are always glad of her appearance on a Denison program. These singers need no words of commendation at the hands of the REVIEW, the singing of each is well known and all Denison worships at the shrine of their beautiful music. The male quartette composed of Messrs. Sibbert, Cassidy, Plimpton and Gibson created a splendid impression and the audience was rather much displeased that they did not respond to an encore. One of the most enjoyable numbers was a duet by Mr. and Mrs. B. J. Sibbert. The harmony was beyond criticism and the duet was splendidly rendered. Mr. Charles McHenry gave an excellent bass solo and in response to the tremendous encore he "loosened up" and gave some of those catchy, rollicking selections which have made him so many friends throughout the county. Denison is justly proud of the singers and their splendid concert and return thanks to Prof. Bartlett for his work as conductor. The accompanists, Mrs. Bartlett, Mrs. Hodges and Miss Agnes King also deserve special mention for their careful and well executed work.

The Omaha Daily News is conducting a contest for a piano, 300 votes going with each yearly subscription. On yesterday Miss Mary Anthony visited Denison in the interests of her candidacy. She appears to be a worthy and attractive young lady but one who believes that if a thing is worth having it is worth working for. Those who subscribe for the News now and who have no particular friend for whom they wish to vote might do much worse than to cast their ballots for Miss Anthony.

Denison Normal and Business College enters upon its tenth year of successful work on September 2. This school has been eminently successful in preparing students for the universities of this and other states. Its graduates are now standing the test in the best institutions. It has prepared and secured positions for many young men and women in commercial and shorthand work. In fact members have been sent to fill positions before they have had time to complete these courses. The calls for the right persons have been greater than the supply. Last winter the Legislature passed a law by which the state board were authorized to inspect and recognize such schools as have been established for the preparation of teachers for the rural schools. Graduates from the approved schools can secure a certificate which will be good for any part of the state. Denison has been inspected and approved so that this additional inducement can be offered to those intending to attend school.

OLD SETTLERS' PICNIC.

The old settlers picnic held here on Wednesday was one of the best attended and most enthusiastic affairs of the kind ever held in the county. A large number of the old settlers were present from all parts of the county and they had a splendid visit and reunion while the young folks chattered and played. Owing to unavoidable circumstances the REVIEW is obliged to omit its extended account of the picnic in this issue of the but we promise our readers an account of the exercises in our next issue, which will be of historic value to all who were present and to all the old settlers of the county. The REVIEW regrets this greatly but prefers giving a full account which may well be filled with the annals of the county.

Among the prominent old settlers in attendance at the picnic was Mr. Ben F. Galland, of Deloit. This venerable old settler has lived in Iowa for 71 years, and can give almost a complete history of the state. He has perhaps tramped over Iowa's hills hunting big game more than any other man in the state. He speaks the Indian language very fluently. He received most of his education in the first school house ever erected in the state, and we give a short history of this building, taken from the Montrose Journal of 1898:

It was erected in the fall of 1830 by Dr. Galland, who was a leader in all enterprises tending to build up the country and to promote the interests of the inhabitants. The building was erected at Nashville (now Galland) the Indian name of which was Ah-wi-pe-tuck, meaning the beginning of the cascades or rapids. It was 10x12, constructed of hewed logs and was located at a point between the river and the south side of the creek, the ground now being within the inclosure around the government guard lock of the canal, and between the north-west end of the lock and a tree standing alone some twenty or thirty yards from the lock.

The floor was puncheon and the chimney constructed of sticks and mud on the outside of the building, as was the general custom then. Large flat rock, set on edge, formed the fire-proof casing for the fire place, which was three feet in depth and four feet wide, being large enough to take in a large backlog and forestick, the space between being filled with small wood. The fire thus formed in this huge fireplace was ample to keep the room warm and those of the pupils now living can remember of no inconvenience or suffering from the weather. Instead of glass in the windows greased paper was used through which the light was filtered to enable the hardy youngsters to pursue their studies. In the course of time glass, 6x8, in a single sash, superceded the greased paper. The benches were long pieces of puncheon with slanting holes bored in the ends into which sticks were put for legs. The writing desks were constructed of pieces of whip-sawed plank, ten inches or a foot wide, fastened against the wall under the windows. The few larger scholars interested in learning the art of writing had to either stand up at this desk or furnish their own personal high stools.

After this building had passed out of use as a school house Samuel Brierly built a story and a half hewed log dwelling house, using the old school house as a kitchen. Brierly afterward moved onto a farm about two miles from town. His old dwelling house was afterward used as a place for holding religious services and for a school taught by the Rev. Addis, a Cambelitte preacher. This was sometime in the 40's. The old school house, still standing, the door being open, was a place of refuge for stock in bad weather. The building finally decayed and was torn down, the remains being used for fuel by the people.

Two Charming Receptions.

On Thursday and Friday afternoons receptions were given at the residence of Mrs. W. H. Sievers, which proved to be two of the most delightful social events of the season. Little Morine Gibson and Winifred Wright admitted the guests who were shown into the parlor by Master Carl Sibbert, where they were received by the hostesses, Mrs. J. D. Sievers, Mrs. W. H. Sievers and Miss Marie Sievers.

The afternoons were pleasantly passed with instrumental music and very interesting games. Mrs. P. H. Rank invited the guests to partake of delicious frappe which was presided over by Miss Edythe Mae Luney and Miss Ione Romans. Later the guests were invited to cross the lawn to the home of Mrs. J. D. Sievers. Here they were seated at little tables arranged through the parlors and around the large table in the dining room which was particularly attractive with its center piece of fruit and flowers and streamers of yell satin ribbon. A most tempting lunch was served by the Misses Miller, McWilliams, Luney and Carter. The ladies were most sincere in their felicitations to their hostesses over the great success of their mid-summer reception.

In another column will be found an advertisement calling attention to a sale of town lots on September 2nd in Manilla Iowa.
