The American Boy Wants to be a Plumber.

A man who made millions by his mechanical inventions, a man whose inventions have changed the daily life of every American, told me, says Edward Everett Hale, in the June Cosmopolitan, that he had asked fifty boys what handiwork they would prefer; and that, in every instance, the boy replied that he would like to be a plumber. The curious truth was that plumbing was the only mechanical art which these boys, trained in our modern life, had seen in practice.
