Do not neglect the opportunities which the campaign offers of hearing the speakers on both sides. The meetings will do you good if only to strengthen you in your former opinion. We would urge republicans to attend the democratic meetings and cordially invite the democrats of the county to attend those held by the republicans.

A crowded school house greeted Hon. George W. Egan of Logan at Jackson Center on last Saturday night, over seventy-five being present. Mr. Egan gave a splendid speech and one which was enthusiastically received by his auditors. Mr. Egan certainly is one of the brilliant young orators of Iowa and he has a bright future before him. It is to be hoped that the First Voters will be able to secure him for next week.

Sunday was Denison Day in the Iowa newspapers. The Register and Leader published a sketch of Hon. J. P. Conner together with his portrait and a cut of his home, while the Council Bluffs Nonpareil devoted the major part of a page to sketch and portraits of "Denison's Two Big Men" Shaw and Conner. Denison surely has reason to be proud of both Mr. Shaw and Mr. Conner and we believe we do not overstate it when we say we are proud of Denison too.

Do not miss hearing Senator Fairbanks and republican candidate for Vice-President. He is a great man, worthy of the great honor bestowed upon him by the nomination and still greater honor of election that awaits him in November. It is planned to make the day a notable one. There will be music all day. Fairbanks will be here in the morning at 10:20 and will speak from a platform at the Illinois Central depot. The platform will be erected in the identical spot from which President Roosevelt spoke. In the afternoon some speaker of national reputation, probably Congressman Bartholdt, the great German-American leader of St. Louis. If the republicans are fortunate enough to secure him he will speak both in English and in German. This should be the biggest meeting of the year and it will be possibly the only chance for the majority of us to hear and see a vice-presidential candidate this year. Many committees would give a great deal to secure a speech from Senator Fairbanks and Crawford county people regardless of politics should show that they appreciate his coming.

The Denison postoffice is soon to have additional equipment in the shape of 117 new lock boxes. They will be of the latest improved automatic type and will accommodate the many who have been on the waiting list for a lock box for more than a year. Other changes and improvements will be made so that Denison will soon have as fine a little postoffice as can be found.

The Council Bluffs Nonpareil says "If Denison keeps on growing the way it is now, it will soon be as big as Sioux City." We can assure the Nonpareil that even at present we feel just as big—and a whole lot better.

EGAN AT VAIL.

George W. Egan, closed a great speech at Vail in behalf of the Republican Party, with the following remarkably eloquent appeal for votes for President Roosevelt:

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:

The Republican Party is proud of its candidate for president; proud of what he is, proud of the things he has accomplished. No self-respecting man will question his integrity, his morality, or his dauntless courage. We ask you to vote for him because he possesses the lofty purpose of Metternich; the patriotism of O'Connell; the sincerity of Washington; the scholarship of John Quincy Adams; the moral and physical courage of Andrew Jackson; and the statesmanship of Abraham Lincoln! We ask you to vote for him because he represents the highest qualities of Puritan and Cavalier; the flowered manhood of a noble race; the greatest president since the immortal Lincoln, and the foremost American in all the world!

Whether you find him on the plains of North Dakota, censuring a sheriff for neglect of duty; in the New York Legislature voting for laws to restrict child labor in factories; as assisting secretary building up the American navy; as a soldier leading a charge on the field of battle; as president settling the greatest coal strike of the world; putting the Northern Securities out of business; protecting alike the rights of union and non-union laborers; proclaiming, in clarion tones, the sanctity of American citizenship; holding that the stars and stripes shall be the passport of Americans, in every nation and among all the islands of the sea; at all times, under all conditions, everywhere the same honorable, level-headed, upright American citizen, believing in equality before the law; the law for rich and poor fearlessly and honestly administered.

But our political opponents after admitting his high moral courage and rugged honesty, whisperingly exclaim "he is Unsafe!" "Unsafe!" and for what? For men and combinations that obey the law? No! For the peace and progress of the Republic? No! For the glory of American statecraft and the valor of American arms? No! For the dignity of American labor and the chivalry of American manhood? No! Unsafe for the most humble American who wanders abroad in foreign lands among heathen Boxers or treacherous Brigands? No! Positively No! Unsafe for what, then? For trusts, for lawless rings and cliques, for combinations that wish to disobey the law? Yes! For plutocrats and autocrats who think themselves above the law? Yes! For the corrupting forces of American polity and the degrading influences of the individual? Yes! Unsafe for thieves, and rogues who break the public trust, for the individual who wrongs society and disregards the law? Yes, for these he is indeed, Unsafe and dangerous in a very great degree.

One of the most significant cartoons which this campaign has brought out appeared recently in the Chicago Chronicle. The historic Secretary Dix, of Civil War fame; stood in the background pointing to that famous message of his. "If any man attempts to haul down the American flag shoot him on the spot." In the foreground sat Judge Parker writing his letter of acceptance in which he urges evacuation of the Philippines.

EXIT—A MAN.

Time alone will bring upon the country a proper sense of the loss sustained in the death of George Frisbie Hoar last week. Having served his country for thirty-four years as a representative in Congress and as United States Senator from Massachusetts, he was able to say at the close of that period that he had never asked the assistance of any man in the securing of any office. He was sent to the state legislature of Massachusetts against his own protest and his first nomination as a congressional candidate was made while he was travelling abroad and when he had no opportunity to oppose it. Few men who have reached high places in public life can boast of this record.

On every public question which presented itself, Senator Hoar was found on the side which he regarded right, without respect to party. No matter how much he may have differed from his party on certain questions it cannot be said that he ever broke with his political associates. Every one recognized that whatever stand he took was from pure motives and not for political effect. He was easily the peer of his illustrious predecessor, Daniel Webster, and when unprejudiced historians record the history of this generation, will be ranked in statesmanship with such men as Burke and Pitt.

HIAWATHA'S DEPARTURE AND RETURN.

(With Apologies to the Federation of Women's Clubs.)

HIAWATHA'S DEPARTURE.
In the morning Hiawatha, Kissed his snow goodbyes and left her, Left her there to do the dishes, While he went to do the people; Left her with her household troubles. Ere he took his leave, however, Cast another glance behind him. Passed upon the front veranda. Then resumed his journey toward. All the way his thoughtlets wandered To the home that he was leaving. To the loving wife and children Who were all his joy and pleasure; Wished he might retire from business. Stay at home with them forever. But he must hie him to the office. Catch some suckers for their living. Keep the howling wolf of hunger From the doorway of the dwelling. All the morning Hiawatha Cast his line in various waters. Every now and then a sucker Bit the bait upon the fish line. Ever and anon, however, Hiawatha's longing longings Turned unto his cozy dwelling. Where his loving wife and child were.

HIAWATHA'S RETURN.
At the noon hour Hiawatha Hastened homeward for his dinner. For an hour of peace and freedom From the busy cares of business, When he entered the front hallway Everything was topsy turvy; Everything was inside, outside, Upside, downside, hindside, fore-side. Hiawatha stood with horror While his loving squaw related All the happenings of the morning. How the ladies to solicit For the rummage sale of rubber-garments. Came and got a few old worn-out, Castoff garments from the wardrobe. Hiawatha in suspicion Made a close examination, Found his smoking jacket missing, Dearest treasure of his treasures. Searched in vain for various other Sundry articles of clothing. Dared he then to seek no longer, Took a hie without his dinner, Hastened toward his office. To the busy cares of business.

FIRST VOTERS' CLUB.

The Roosevelt First Voters' Club will hold a meeting at the City Hall Friday evening, Oct. 7th. There will be a good program and Hon. C. F. Kuehnle will deliver an address. Everybody is invited to come.

BARTCHER-ANGSTEAD.

On Wednesday evening, Sept. 28, 1904, at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Angstead, occurred the marriage of Benjamin B. Bartcher and Bessie Florence Angstead, Rev. G. E. Morphy of the Baptist church officiating.

The wedding party entered to the strains of music played by Miss Laura Pearson. The bride was prettily dressed in cream silk mull while the groom looked handsome in conventional black. After the ceremony a wedding supper was served and the guests enjoyed a pleasant social time.

The next morning the young couple left on their wedding trip and will be gone about a month, visiting relatives in Iowa and Illinois and also the World's fair at St. Louis.

The groom is one of our worthiest young men, held in highest regard by the people of Denison. He is also a rising young business man having been connected with the furniture and undertaking firm of C. J. Salomon for a number of years. The bride is a daughter of one of our most respected citizens well liked by those who know her, and will make a loving companion and wife for the man of her choice. THE REVIEW extends its hearty congratulations to both these young people and joins their many friends in wishing them a long and happy life.

WHERE WAS CASWELL?

The Sioux City Journal is responsible for the following:
Mr. S. V. O'Hare is one of the leaders of the democracy of Crawford county, and it was he who managed the Hearst campaign in that county and succeeded in carrying it for Hearst. Inasmuch as the support of Crawford county was needed to make the Tenth district "right," and inasmuch as its support was an absolute necessity on the resolutions committee, Mr. O'Hare considers his county entitled to the distinction of a place in the pivotal class, and believes that if Hearst coin were really flying around in the air, some of it would have fallen in the vicinity of Crawford county.

Last Thursday Mr. J. T. Wakeham, and his sister, Miss May Wakeham, came to Denison from Ames, Neb., upon a sad mission, that of bringing their father, Mr. William Wakefield, back to the old home for burial. Mr. William Wakefield died on Monday, Sept. 26, at his home near Ames, Neb., at the age of 80 years. He was brought to Denison and laid to rest beside his wife who died Feb. 16, 1874, and one daughter who died Feb. 17, 1879.

There are left to mourn the father's death five children, John, who lives in Egypt, a daughter residing in Hamburg, Germany, a daughter living in Washington, and J. T. Wakeham and M. J. Wakeham, of Ames, Neb. At one time Mr. Wakeham lived on the farm now occupied by Geo. Wilson just north of town, and was much respected.

Via the North-Western Line, will be in effect from all stations daily until October 15, inclusive. Stop-overs and interesting side trips. Two solid fast trains through on the Pacific Coast daily. "The Overland Limited" less than three days enroute. Another fast daily train with drawing room and tourist sleeping cars and free reclining chair cars daily. Personally conducted excursions. A DREAMLAND DETECTIVE.

Singular Way in Which an English Murderer was Discovered.

In the London Mirror of Literature for June, 1844, there is an account of a dream that was remarkable in many respects. It is given upon the authority of a clergyman of the Church of England, the Rev. Mr. Alexander, who speaks from personal knowledge of some of the facts. It appears that a young man of good reputation, named Horrocks, was found robbed and murdered. His head had been beaten in apparently with bludgeons. A vigilant search was made for the assassin and after several months abandoned, no clue to the crime having been discovered. One night a gentleman who had been well acquainted with Horrocks awoke and told his wife that he had had a dream in which he had been assured that one Samuel Longsmith of Bolton was the murderer.

Longsmith lived some twenty miles away and was a person whom the dreamer had met but once or twice. His wife told him to think no more about it, but to go to sleep. A second time he awoke from the effects of the same dream and announced his resolution to take steps the following morning to see what could come of it. Accordingly he went to Bolton the next day and sought a warrant for the arrest of Longsmith. The magistrate, however, refused to grant it upon such evidence. Passing through the market place, he met Longsmith and invited him to go to a public house to hear something he had to communicate to him. There, locking the door, he charged him with the crime. Longsmith was staggered and faintly denied the accusation. In his confusion he said he was innocent, for he did not strike the blow.

"Then you know the man who did," replied the accuser, and Longsmith was arrested and examined. He prevailed at the examination and was remanded for three days. At the end of that time and after many hours' prayer he confessed that he had been induced to join three men in a robbery expedition, when, meeting Horrocks, who made some resistance, his three companions murdered him. This confession came out before the grand jury, and Longsmith was brought to trial. The fact of the dream was not offered in evidence, but other testimony sufficient to convict him was produced. A few days before the execution he made a full acknowledgment of his guilt.

POETRY OF THE HEART.

A happy heart is better than a full purse.

He who hath most heart knows most of sorrow.

A cheerful countenance betokens a good heart.

No estate can make him rich that has a poor heart.

When you open your heart be always ready to shut it to again.

The heart's testimony is stronger than a thousand witnesses.

A glad heart seldom sighs, but a sorrowful mouth often laughs.

The heart is the hidden treasure of man; the tongue is the gate to the treasure.

There never was a heart truly great and generous that was not also tender and compassionate.—Chicago Post.

Pointing the Way.

Some years ago an English traveler visiting the Transvaal asked a man whom he met to direct him to the president's house. "You," came the answer, "stuck on dill you know to a road vot koes around der skoolhouse; but you don't dake dot road. No, you ko on till you see der big barn, shingled mit shtraw, den you durn der road down der field and ko on dill you comes to a pig red hoose; dot ees my Broder Hans' hoose. Don't ko in dere; ko straight on dill you comes to der haystick mit a farm. Vell, he get der live dere. But when you get further you see a hoose on der top of a leedle hill, so you ko in dere and asks der old vovan inside. She vill tell you petter as I can."

The Roof Dogs of New York.

There are dogs in New York that never set foot on the street. They belong to the janitors in the downtown buildings, and their runways consist of the roof of the building in which their owners live and adjoining roofs on the same level. That is a rare day when the office worker on looking out the steepest story window does not see a half dozen dogs romping about upon the roofs beneath him. There is one advantage at least in being a roof dog—the dog catcher has no terrors for him.

Success.

With great care and much labor a caterpillar climbed up a tall spear of grass. When he reached the top he stood on his hind end and waved his front end in the air. "Just as I feared," said he. "Success does not bring happiness." But then he turned and climbed down, for the caterpillars are wiser than men.—Puck.

Wasted Cash!

"Improvident? Well, I should say! He spends his money in the most foolish way."

"Indeed?"

"Yes. Why, only the other day he spent half a dollar to advertise for an umbrella he had lost."—Philadelphia Ledger.

An Added Horror.

"That's a horrible idea De Eiter has conceived."
"What's that?"
"He's talking of setting some of Browning's poems to Wagner's music."
