Capt. Van Etter of South Dakota, lectured here Wednesday and Thursday evenings in the M. E. church to large and appreciative audiences, his subject being temperance. The Captain is an old soldier, and Ex-United States Revenue officer, and is withal, an easy and fluent talker. He did not, as some speakers do assail the seller of intoxicating liquors—but rather blamed our incongruous social system which throws the door of temptation open to young and old, under the sanction of the law, for a few pieces of silver, always the price of treachery and sin. His pleas were to save the youth, a thing impossible so long as rivers of beer and whiskey pour out, sanctioned by our Uncle Samuel, for the sake of revenue. Such lectures are the grains of sand which will sometime be cemented into a wall to protect the home and the youth of the land from the curse of intemperance.
