ANCIENT SEA WALLS.

Punishment That Was Inflicted For Neglecting Their Repair.
 W. H. Wheeler in his "History of the Fens of South Lincolnshire" quotes Harrison as saying, in his preface to Holinshed's "Chronicle," that "such as, having walls or banks near unto the sea, do suffer the same to decay, after convenient admonition, whereby the water entereth and drowneth up the country, are by a certain ancient custom apprehended, condemned and staked in the breach, where they remain forever a parcel of the new wall that is to be made upon them, as I have heard reported."—P. 40.

Harrison, so far as I am at present able to make out, is the earliest authority for this, and he only speaks of it as a report.

In a paper by the Rev. F. C. J. Spurrell in "The Archaeologia Cantiana" relating to Dartford, I find the following, which, though it is by no means a proof of what Harrison had heard, tends to make the statement less improbable than it otherwise would be:

"In early times the Roman way crossed the marsh untroubled by the tide. Afterward, the tide having advanced further inland, the road was raised, becoming a causeway. In mediaeval times this bank was heightened against the tide, the road running inside, as at present. During a section made a few years ago through this road, near Stidolph's house, I saw a human skeleton extended across the bank about two feet below the present surface. This is, of course, a strange situation; but, looking to the fact that it was a tide wall, it is possible that the once owner of the skeleton had the duty of repairing the bank and, having let the tide through by his neglect, was placed in the breach, thus helping to repair it while suffering punishment. S. Smiles has mentioned that such a mode of dealing was a mediaeval custom. However, I know not how far the ancient graveyard extended hereabout, so that the body, which showed no signs of burial, might yet have been buried in sacred ground."—London Notes and Queries.

POINTED PARAGRAPHS.

Don't abuse your rival. Behave better than he does.

Every one has an excuse for drinking. None of them is good.

How many people are you "comfortable" with? Not very many probably.

When it comes to romance, the kind found in books is very superior to the real thing.

It is stated there is an exception to every rule, but don't hope you will be one to the rule of old age.

A good many people are like little birds in a nest. When you praise them they lie still with their mouths wide open for more.

Engines are very much like people. The switch engine makes more fuss around the depot than the engines on the through trains. The cheaper the person, the more trouble he causes.—Atchison Globe.

Beauty and the Beast.
 A well known southern churchman was recently visiting New York, accompanied by his wife, who is as beautiful as her life mate is homely. They were walking down Broadway one sunny afternoon, and the pair attracted much attention. One of two young "sports," evidently thinking to attract the favorable attention of the churchman's wife, in an audible aside remarked that it was another case of "the beauty and the beast." Quick as a wink the husband turned and, as he swung his right to the speaker's jaw, scoring a knockout, said, "I am a man of peace, but I never allow any one to call my wife a beast."—New York Tribune.

Catharine Parr.
 Catharine Parr, the sixth wife of the much married Henry VIII, owed more to her intellectual than to her personal charms. She was not good looking, but had a pleasant face and a world of tact. So skillfully did she manage her troublesome husband as actually to turn him against some of the most trusted of his own officials. Once an order was made out for her arrest on a charge of heresy, but she got news of the matter and so cleverly flattered and soothed Henry as to effect a complete reconciliation, and when the officers came to serve the order he drove them out with curses and threats.

Brave or Reckless?
 When a young man on a small salary and with the future very uncertain gets married we claim he is as reckless as if he jumped into water and couldn't swim. The romantic may call it courage, but it is pure recklessness.—Atchison Globe.

All Broke Up.
 "She was very much affected, was she not, at the bad news?"
 "I should say so. Her eyes dropped, her voice broke, her face fell, and finally she burst into tears."—Baltimore American.

Courtesy to Strangers.
 If a man be gracious and courteous to strangers it shows he is a citizen of the world and that his heart is not island cut off from other lands, but a continent that joins to them.—Bacon.

A Bunch of Her.
 First Artist—What's that you're painting, a mediaeval family group?
 Second Artist—Not exactly. That's a portrait of Mrs. Henry VIII.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Anything to Please.
 Mudge—See here, what did you mean by saying I wasn't half witted?
 Yabsley—What shall I say? That you are half witted?

Sherlock Holmes Story

to his wife. It was consumption of the most virulent kind. The poor boy was half crazed with grief, and yet he had to go to London to play this match, for he could not get out of it without explanations which would expose his secret. I tried to cheer him up by wire, and he sent me one in reply imploring me to do all I could. This was the telegram which you appear in some inexplicable way to have seen. I did not tell him how urgent the danger was, for I knew that he could do no good here, but I sent the truth to the girl's father, and he very injudiciously communicated it to Godfrey. The result was that he came straight away in a state bordering on frenzy and has remained in the same state, kneeling at the end of her bed, until this morning death put an end to her sufferings. That is all, Mr. Holmes, and I am sure that I can rely upon your discretion and that of your friend."

Holmes grasped the doctor's hand. "Come, Watson," said he, and we passed from that house of grief into the pale sunlight of the wintry day.

Colophon.
 Colophon was a city of ancient Ionia, nine miles north of Ephesus, and near the sea. It was said to be the birthplace of Homer, and near it was a famous oracle of Apollo. The Greek proverb, "To put a colophon to," meaning to end an affair handsomely, is explained by Strabo as arising from a belief that the cavalry of Colophon was so excellent in quality that their charge was always decisive in a battle. Hence arose the custom of calling any device or monogram or printer's name or sign or date of printing in old printed books a colophon in the sense of a definite, satisfactory end.

Tycho Brahe.
 It was the great eclipse of Aug. 21, 1560, that turned Tycho Brahe into an astronomer. He was in his fourteenth year at the time, a Danish boy of noble origin, and had been destined first for the army and then for the law. But the accuracy with which the eclipse was predicted impressed him with the belief that astronomy was a divine thing, and thenceforward he devoted his life to it. The debt of astronomy to Tycho Brahe not only for his own work, but as the man who shaped the genius of Kepler, can scarcely be overestimated.

Dinner in a Bell.
 In the tower of Erfurt cathedral hangs a huge bell ten feet high and thirty feet in circumference, weighing thirteen tons. Within this in July, 1713, dined ten of the town's most opulent burghers on dishes cooked in a kitchen temporarily erected on the beam that supported the ponderous mass of tintinnabulary metal. To celebrate this repast medals were struck, having on the obverse the portraits of the guests and on the reverse the representation of the curious scene.

Use For the Synonym.
 Teacher—What is a synonym? Pupil—A word that has the same meaning as another word. Teacher—And why does our language possess synonyms? Pupil—So you can use one when you don't know how to spell the other one.—Exchange.

A Bad Patient.
 Friend—I suppose you're always glad to get a patient who's never had any bad habits. Doctor—Indeed I'm not. Friend—How's that? Doctor—Why, man, I can't order him to stop anything.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Some naturalists say that the whale was once a land animal that took to the water for safety.

Wonderful Miniature Book.
 The smallest bound book in the great collection of miniature books owned by the New York Library society is a campaign document issued in 1852. It bears not only the distinction of being the smallest volume in the great collection referred to, but has been pronounced by experts in booklore to be one of the tiniest books in existence. It contains but fourteen leaves, each of which is closely printed on both sides in microscopic type. Each leaf is one and one-half inches in length and seven-eighths of an inch in width. The title page bears the following inscription: "Life and Public Services of General Pierce. Respectfully Dedicated to General Lewis Cass. Concord Press, 1852."

A Cheerful View.
 Walter's mamma was very sick with rheumatism, and he was rubbing her arms when she said, "Walter, it is too bad that mamma is such a trouble to you."
 Walter replied cheerfully: "Never mind, mamma. If you are only just alive we don't care how much you suffer."

Used to Begging.
 Graspit (angrily)—What! More money? If you keep on you'll bankrupt me. Then, after I'm dead, you will be a beggar. Mrs. Graspit (calmly)—Oh, well, I'd be a great deal better off than some poor woman who never had any experience in that line.

The Name Fooled Him.
 "Are you fond of smelts?"
 "Never tasted it."
 "Eh! Smelts are fishes."
 "Fishes! I thought they were some kind of cheese."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

A lie always has a certain amount of weight with those who wish to believe it.—Rice.
