Miss Rhea Cummings was down from Arion Monday.

Dr. Evans was in Omaha for a short time Thursday.

John Cramer who was sick several days last week is around again.

The Woodmen-Odd Fellow game Tuesday was too much one sided to be of interest. The latter obtained something in the neighborhood of 15 scores while the Woodmen were able to cross the plate but 3 times.

Memorial Day dawned clear and bright and Dow City entertained a larger crowd than usual. The march to the cemetery was made in the forenoon and after music by the band the usual ceremony was carried out.

In the afternoon one of the best addresses we have ever been privileged to hear given on such occasion was delivered by Rev. Bancroft of the Baptist church. The music furnished by the Dow City band throughout the day deserves special mention.

The Juniors and Sophomores of the High School defeated the Seniors and Freshmen in a warmly contested 10 inning game last Thursday. The score was 10 to 9.

Last week was probably the most notable period in the existence of our little town. The graduating class of 17 held the attention of all and programs were carried through as announced without a break. All deserve credit for the talent displayed both at the play and in the class day exercises. The lecture by Prof. Ed. Amherst Ott was the finest thing in that line ever heard here. With "Sour Grapes" as his subject he has the ability to hold the closest attention for hours.

Mart Goddard was in Denison Tuesday evening.

Miss Fern Butler was down from Arion Tuesday.

John Lawrence is on the sick list. Ira Tripp of Schleswig is visiting his family here.

The graduates and teachers were in Denison Saturday posing for pictures.

Kant's Windlasses.

Kant, the German metaphysician, was a singular being. The English writer Thomas De Quincey made close observation of Kant's personal peculiarities and frequently dwelt upon one of them with intense amusement. Kant, among other studies in the art of taking care of himself, avoided ordinary garters. He permitted no ligature to be placed on any part of his body, fearing to hinder in the slightest degree the circulation of the blood. He found it necessary at the same time to keep up his stockings. Accordingly he had loops attached to them, and outside each hip he wore a contrivance which may be called a box windlass. These affairs somewhat resembled an angler's reel, with a spring which secured the line at any given point. Behold Kant then expounding his philosophy to a select circle of disciples. Like the famous counsel who could not state his arguments without twisting a bit of twine, Kant worked the windlasses as he talked. The idea of this grotesque fancy so tickled De Quincey that he often lingered on the odd sight. It must have been to observe the master "paying out the cable" or hauling in the "slack" by aid of this curious machinery!

The Wilderness Manna.

In Exodus xvi, 14-36, and other passages in the Old Testament it is to be found an account of the manna fed to the Israelites during their pilgrimage in the wilderness. According to the article on this subject in Smith's Bible Dictionary, which is a summary of several passages, the manna came every morning except the Sabbath in the form of a small round seed resembling the hoar frost. It had to be gathered early, before the sun became so hot as to melt it. It had to be gathered every day except the Sabbath. The attempt to lay aside or accumulate for a succeeding day except on the day immediately preceding the Sabbath failed by the substance becoming wormy and offensive. It was prepared for food by grinding and baking. Its taste was like fresh oil and like wafers made with honey, equally agreeable to all palates. Indeed the manna became to each person the food he was accustomed to take. The whole nation subsisted upon it for forty years, and it suddenly ceased when they first got the new corn in the land of Canaan.

The Independent Shaver.

Two barbers were disengaged when the customer came in. Both got their chairs ready, but the newcomer dodged them.

"I need a shave all right," he said to the proprietor, "but I want to shave myself. Can you accommodate me here?"

"Certainly," said the proprietor, "but I'll charge you the same as if one of my men shaved you."

"That's all right," said the man. "I'm not kicking about the price. All I want is a chance to do my own barbering."

A tonsorial outfit was speedily produced, and the self sufficient individual set to work.

"Isn't that a new wrinkle?" asked another man who had been an interested observer of the proceedings.

"Not at all," returned the proprietor. "Every once in awhile we run up against a fellow who prefers to shave himself, but hasn't the apparatus at hand. We keep a lot of extra razors in stock for the accommodation of just such independent customers."—New York Press.

Severe Case.

"How did your sea voyage work, Bigley?"

"I was in such a state of collapse when I reached Liverpool that I called back to learn whether I had thrown up my job."

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED

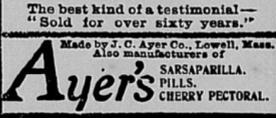

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound in your ears, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever. Nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Halls Catarrh Cure. Send for circular free.

My Hair Ran Away

Don't have a falling out with your hair. It might leave you! Then what? That would mean thin, scraggly, uneven, rough hair. Keep your hair at home! Fasten it tightly to your scalp! You can easily do it with Ayer's Hair Vigor. It is something more than a simple hair dressing. It is a hair medicine, a hair tonic, a hair food.

WALLACE'S CIRCUS WATER PROOF TENTS.

Most all circuses claim to have waterproof tents—canvases that will turn rain—but only the very largest ones can truthfully advertise to have them.

There are times when waterproof tents will not turn rain and yet they are, thoroughly waterproof. This may seem like a paradox but it is true, and is one of the several peculiar circumstances and incidents of a circus manager's career that place him in a bad plight, as far as his integrity is concerned.

Mr. B. E. Wallace the sole owner of the high-class circus bearing his name, always buys new canvas for his horse, menagerie circus and dressing-room tents each year. This year the size of the various tents was considerably increased, owing to the enlargement of the show. These "tops" are carefully sewed, roped and ribbed by expert sailmakers after they have left the tent factory, then they are taken to the winter quarters and spread out on the ground. It is when the new tent tops are seen in this way that the size of a circus outfit can be appreciated. This spring, when the top of every tent with the Wallace Show was being made waterproof, a small pasture of eight acres was used. It was found to be too small and a large field was secured, where the canvass could be spread without any trouble.

After the canvas is thoroughly dried by the sun, men walk back and forth over it, pouring a fluid upon it, which is later rubbed in by brush. The tent is again dried and is ready for use. It will turn water, except under certain conditions. If put up dry it is as good as the average roof.

The manager of a circus of the high order and merit of the Wallace Show is compelled to use waterproof tents. The high-salaried performers with this show are independent, they know that their services are in demand, that all big shows would like to have them. They will not work under a bad canvas, especially one that leaks. In order to retain them, a waterproof tent is necessary, and hence, for a number of years, Mr. Wallace has always provided waterproof tents. He makes the surroundings as pleasant as possible, not only for his patrons, but for his own people, who are essential to the presentation of a circus program of rare novelties.

The Great Wallace Show will be here under its waterproof tents on Thursday June 21 in Denison.

Too Much to Ask.

A traveler in the highlands observed while at a tavern in a small village a very beautiful collie. At his request the owner was pointed out to him, and he asked the man what he would take for the dog.

"You'll be taking him to America?" the Scot asked cautiously.

"Certainly, if you sell him to me." "I no coull' part w'ie Rob," the dog's owner then said emphatically. "I'm muckle fond-like o' him." And liberal offers were no inducement.

To his astonishment, the traveler later saw the dog sold to a drover for half what he had offered and after the drover had disappeared requested an explanation. "You said that you could not sell him," he remarked.

A twinkle came into the highlander's eyes.

"No; I didna say I'd no sell him. I said I couldna part w'ie him," he said. "Rob'll be hame in two or three days fra noo, but I couldna ask him to swim across the ocean. Na; that wou'd be too muckle to ask."—Harper's Weekly.

Leaves That Carry a Vote.

The parish church of Chertsey possesses a curious anomaly. It has several pews in its gallery which are bought and sold by auction, just like a table or a chair, and these pews give their owners for the time being a legal right to vote at parliamentary elections in the division. Moreover, the owners of the pews have to pay the poor rate of £2 a year into the bargain, a privilege they are not so eager to use as the former one. Many years ago the churchwardens of Chertsey were at their wits' end in order to raise money for the restoration and repair of the sacred edifice, and they could find no solution to the question until some parishioners suggested that they should sell the gallery pews to the highest bidder. They accepted the idea and obtained a special act of parliament allowing them to do this and also giving the privilege of a parliamentary vote.—London Spectator.

A Gallery of Forgeries.

Paris possesses a very fine gallery of modern masters, largely of the Barbizon school, not one of which is genuine. It is to the painter Harpignies that France is indebted for this queer collection of the spurious. Passing through the Rue de Valenciennes one day, his eye caught some canvases in a window. They were all signed by prominent names, including his own, and every signature was forged. Passing inside, the list became more extensive, and the painter found himself in the presence of false Corots, Diazes, Daubignys, Lancretts, Isabeyes, Neuvelles and even English Turners. The revelation of his own identity enabled Harpignies to become possessed of this collection for something less than the proverbial old song, and it may now be inspected by those interested in such matters at the state furniture depot, where it is preserved as a kind of high water mark in sophistication.

Parsee Burial Customs.

A Bombay correspondent, writing of the burial customs of the Parsees, says: "The approach of that transition we call death is a signal for the relatives to leave the presence of the dying one, the priest alone remaining to whisper Zend-Avesta precepts into his ear. He in turn passes out of the room and admits a dog, who is trained to gaze steadily into the face of the dying one. A dog is accounted the only living creature that can terrorize the evil spirits, so the 'sas-did,' or 'dog stare,' is the last sight the Parsee has on earth. No human shadow must intervene; otherwise the guardian virtue of the dog's gaze is annulled."

To Scrape an Acquaintance.

"To scrape an acquaintance" was originated by the Emperor Hadrian. Once when visiting the public bath he found an old veteran scraping himself with a piece of broken crockery in lieu of an iron or copper scraper. Hadrian gave him a sum of money to provide the necessary materials for a bath and on his next visit to the institution found it full of veterans scraping themselves with potsherds. "Scrape away, gentlemen, but you shall not scrape an acquaintance with me," was Hadrian's comment as he went out.

How to Break Up a Cold.

It may be a surprise to many to learn that a severe cold can be completely broken up in one or two days' time. The first symptoms of a cold are a dry, loud cough, a profuse watery discharge from the nose, and a thin, white coating on the tongue. When Chamberlain's cough remedy is taken every hour on the first appearance of these symptoms, it counteracts the effect of the cold and restores the system to a healthy condition within a day or two. For sale by Ph. A. Schlumberger.
