

SCIENTIST LECTURES

Upholds Tenets of Christian Science Church

GREETED BY FINE CROWD

Edward A. Kimball of Chicago Delivers Able Address on Monday Evening

A fine audience greeted Mr. Edward A. Kimball of Chicago, Ill., in the Opera House on Monday evening and listened with marked attention to his explanation of some of the fundamentals of Christian Science. His speech was clear and his deductions sound and logical. He explained the purpose of these lectures to be, to correct erroneous conceptions and base reports circulated by the uninformed and not to proselyte and gain new adherents. He said it was impossible to tell all about Christian Science in the course of one lecture, that he could but give a brief outline of its First Principles and the rest must be gained by study.

He said in part as follows: In Christian Science there is no longer an unknown God. No longer do the distorted graven images of human thought mask or hide from us the real God who is altogether lovely, who is our dearest friend, whose help is ever available, whose grace is sufficient and who created man that he might have life and peace. Christian Science promises to lead mankind to God through the highways of health and life instead of death. It promises to humanity, in the name of God, not the doubtful felicity of the grave, but a sensible, practicable dispensation of good, now. It promises to incline men naturally and willingly to a more spiritual life, which will satisfy them and it promises that as they wend their way to a sure heaven this Christ-truth will be the Christ way-shower through all the mazes and besetments of an evil sense and an evil age, until, with undeviating truths and confidence, they abide under the shadow of the Almighty.

We disagree with others concerning the nature of veil. Mrs. Eddy knows full well that "Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap," and that sin inevitably imposes suffering on its victim, nevertheless, she declares that sin, sickness and kindred evils are unreal, meaning thereby that they belong in the realm of the temporal, illegitimate, abnormal. They are the paraphernalia or mortal belief of the carnal mind—unlawful, unrighteous and unnecessary—monstrosities of unnatural existence.

Christian Science explains that sickness is of a kindred unreal nature, and is to be obliterated by the same process, whereby everything that has no right to exist or continue is to become extinct through Christ and Christianity.

If insanity and sickness are real, then God, who includes all reality, must have made them. If He made them and bestows or sends them, then it is a sin to try to get well or to want to get well.

Complete Salvation Through Christ.

Concerning the divine Christ there is among men much conflict of opinion. Most Christians believe He was the Son of God and was divinely commissioned; that His mission was to preach the gospel of reform and regeneration, to set forth the way and promise of salvation after death, by reason of His mediatorial atonement. It is believed that, incidentally, He did many mighty works. It is also affirmed that He is the only Messiah, or Savior, and that His way is the only way of salvation.

Christian Scientists believe all this and yet their sense of Christianity differs from that of all others. We know that Christ was and is divine, is our Savior or Messiah; is the "Way," and we can prove it. We are confident that when this way is scientifically understood and becomes scientifically operative, it will manifest its saving efficacy by transforming the race.

We believe that Christ Jesus was the representative of God to humanity; that He was the voice of wisdom and intelligence, and that He knew more about God, man, and the universe than all the other people combined. We believe He came to do the will of God and to fulfill law. What God, and what law? The God that is good and whose law is the law of life, health, harmony and holiness. We believe He came "to seek and to save that which was lost," and that He found the sinner and the sick man. We believe that He came to "destroy the works of the devil," and that He was "about His Father's business" while He was doing it.

Christ as a Healer.

Unless he was destroying the work of the devil when He healed the sick, there must have been a time when He was not in the fulfillment of His mission, for He gave much attention to the cure of disease and Himself declared that such healing was a part of His "works." We believe this healing was natural and lawful that all His works were done in exquisite accord with the eternal law of a changeless God. We believe that the teaching of Christian Science through Mrs. Eddy removes the ministry of Jesus from the realm of mystery and brings it within the range of law, order and a scientific modus operandi. We believe that God and His Christ are too wise to be unlawful or to procure or induce or make use of that which is in contravention of law. We believe that the Christ ministry is an object lesson in demonstration of the imminent ever available power of Spirit, God, to destroy evil. We believe that Jesus manifested the supremacy of spiritual law which is the law of life, and its power over the fictitious law of sin and death.

IOWA REPUBLICAN, BY 20,000

Complete Victory on State Ticket. Democrats Get Only One Congressman.

Des Moines, Nov. 13—Special: The Republican victory in Iowa is complete as to the state ticket, the plurality being over 20,000 and all candidates successful. Ten Republicans were elected to congress, the Sixth district alone going wrong; and the republican majority will be about 98 on joint ballot in the legislature.

The Republican State Central committee closed headquarters this week. Before returning to his home Chairman Frank P. Woods said:

"On my own behalf and for the Republican State Central committee I desire to express my sincere thanks to those loyal and true voters of Iowa who have sustained the Republican party with their ballots, and by their earnest endeavors have achieved this significant victory for the people. They are entitled to congratulations. Our splendid state and the great and expanding Nation are better because of their steadfastness of purpose in party service and their devotion to right principles.

"The committee entered upon its work fully aware of the great hopes and greater resources of the opposition. The national congressional committee had warned Republicans of the danger in the traditional year of reaction from abnormal Republican majorities. The enemy was encouraged here as elsewhere to redoubled efforts to the end that advantage might be had in the preliminaries for the next national campaign; and their managers had hope, not without some reason, that a sufficient number of Republicans would refuse to abide by their convention to give the democrats a victory. Therefore the committee had not only to engage an avowed enemy but to treat with treachery more or less concealed.

"The usual lines of activity were followed—organization, the speaking campaign, literature, personal work. The committee relied on the good sense and the patriotism of the Iowa voters, and sought in every legitimate way to give them the simple truth as to the issues raised and information on which they could rely as to the character of the campaign.

In this all the members of the committee co-operated heartily and everyone did his full share toward that success which was desired by every loyal Republican.

"An excellent organization was effected, with committeemen in every precinct, and these with the chairmen of the Republican county committees, with few exceptions, joined earnestly in the necessary work of the campaign in support of our ticket. The committee had the assistance and co-operation of the great body of the newspapers of the state, and during the campaign letters of information were sent to about 35 daily and 500 weekly newspapers supporting the Republican candidates. These newspapers also gave circulation to more than 800,000 copies of supplements filled with good Republican doctrine. The committee feels under special obligation to the editors who thus gave their support to the Republican cause fully and fairly. The Republicans of Iowa owe to them much more than they can ever repay, and I hope their services will never be forgotten.

"In this connection I feel that it is but just to say a word personal in regard to some who have been intimately associated with me in the work of the committee. Mr. W. L. Converse, the Fourth district member, was secured to take charge of the speaker's bureau, a position of great responsibility and calling for much sacrifice and hard work. Mr. Converse has devoted himself to the cause and has handled the speaking campaign with such signal ability that, as I have reason to believe, the largest number of voters were reached by the arguments needed in the campaign. The literary bureau was placed in charge of Mr. Geo. E. Bowers, of Orange City, who greatly assisted in outlining the work to be done, but for business reasons he found it impossible to give the work his entire personal attention. The committee was fortunate in securing as his assistant Mr. Ora Williams, a newspaper man of experience, who in the preparation of the literature of the campaign, by his ability has rendered the committee and the party an invaluable service. His familiarity with Iowa political history made his advice a source of great strength to me.

"It was the aim and purpose of the committee from the outset to be absolutely fair and to conduct a campaign for the whole Republican ticket in such a manner as to leave the party stronger for the future. It was insisted that every candidate give to the ticket an undivided allegiance, and everyone was urged to stand firm for a complete victory. The trend of the campaign was necessarily fixed, to some extent, by the character of the assault made on the party. The democrats and their allies deliberately chose to make their fight principally against the governor of the state as a Republican candidate for reelection, and in this they attacked Republican policies and the whole record of the party in management of our state affairs. Theirs was a campaign of denunciation and defamation, with a personal direction, rather than urging that democratic policies and principles be accepted. We accepted the challenge of the allies and met them fairly. The campaign centered around the head of the ticket, Governor Cummins, and the victory for the Republican party was won on the issues as made by his enemies. It is but fair to state that had the fight been made on any other candidate of our party, the defense would have been equally vigorous, and in the same way the campaign would have been prosecuted to a successful termination. The issue as raised by our opponents and accepted by us was accentuated by the alliance of the political corporations with the democratic party, and the voters have, by their ballots, served fair warning upon the corporations that, as such, they must remain out of Iowa politics. "We are firmly convinced that the judgment of all fair minded men will be that in the victory of 1906 the Republican party of Iowa escaped the greatest danger it has ever faced. Our enemies were looking to a national campaign and they hoped to so entrench themselves here that they would be invincible in that struggle. They planned to so disrupt and disorganize the Republican party that they would make it impossible for the Republicans to rally for effective support of Republican policies in the Nation two years hence. Fortunately a majority of the voters of the state, having faith in the republican party and confidence in Republican leadership, gave us a victory which insures more than anything else could the future unity of the Republican party in Iowa."

The designers of the "Improved Viking" are students of child life, understanding the methods of rough play indulged in by boys. They realized the necessity of strengthening the ordinarily vulnerable points and re-enforcing them against the severe strains. Seats, knees and arm-pits are points necessitating particular attention. You cannot pick any flava in a "VIKING" suit. It is made of only reliable materials, perfectly put together and in style, right up to the minute. It is protected by a patent, therefore will be the only one of its kind. The label tells—sewed in every coat. It is plainly the duty of every mother before buying to carefully analyze the above. Come in and convince yourselves of their genuineness.
