SUNDAY SCHOOL COLUMN

July 7—God Feeds Israel in the Wilderness, Exod. 16, 1-15.

RULE OF THE COMMON PEOPLE

Things are doing in the old world, which show that the conflict for popular rights is on with full force. In England the House of Commons is being urged by the party in power to declare that the House of Lords must give up the right to veto great measures passed by the body elected directly by the vote of the qualified electors.

Over on the mainland the people of Portugal are said to be up-rising against their king. There is an attempt to suppress the news from that little kingdom direct, but enough reaches the world to make it sure that the Portuguese have decided if possible to establish self government.

In southern France the wine growers have decided that the government is not protecting their interests and have risen up in more than a peaceful rebellion. In some towns every officer has resigned and there is no local government, except that maintained by the soldiers sent in.

In Russia the Czar has disbanded the legislative body elected under his proclamation. The demands of the radical members were very violent, and again quite a group of the members attended a meeting in London which denounced the Czar roundly and advocated his removal from the throne.

TWO CENT FARE HERE TO STAY

It has become evident that the railroads will not fight the putting into effect of the two cent fare rate in the states which have passed such laws. Public sentiment would not stand for it, and an outraged people might come back with even more drastic legislation. Before Judge McPherson the roads could only get an order directing them to make a showing at the end of three months, as to the business done, and then he might consider the matter of stepping in. The receipts out in Nebraska where the two cent fare is in operation, bring in big returns for the Union Pacific, and it looks as if the rates had been permanently reduced.

Mrs. M. E. Jones spent the week end at the home of her brother E. S. Miles re r Dunlap.

Mrs. Chas. Christensen visited last week with her sister Mrs. Jordan of Dunlap.

Our lessons for the new quarter continue a study of the journey of the Children of Israel through the now Desert of Arabia. After crossing the Red Sea the leading was southward parallel with the coast of the sea. These people had come out of captivity and had no preparation for a long march through a desert country, so it is not strange that their provisions gave out, and that from a human point of view they began to murmur and to wonder how they were to live. They began to long for the "flesh pots of Egypt". The spectacle is here presented of a people who had been given wonderful deliverance from slavery wanting to get back to fill their stomachs. They are not the only persons however to not know when they are well off, who do not appreciate what has been done for them, and who look back longingly for the temporal comforts, when they should be rejoicing at deliverance from depths of sin and degradation.

The God who had led them out and helped them thus far was not to desert them now, and so He provided that they should have fresh meat in the form of quails each evening, and they should find in the morning a grain on the ground which they could grind and cook for food. The people called this food "Manna" which in their tongue meant "what is it". The Manna was not found cooked ready for use. God sent the grain and the people must do their part in making it ready to eat. It is a peculiar fact that in nearly every case of Divine intervention, the supernatural only does what the human cannot do, and leaves undone what people can do themselves. It comes pretty near being strictly true that "God helps those who help themselves" at any rate it is best to do your best, if you want Divine aid.

The Israelites were only to gather for the present day, and cook but sufficient for that time, on penalty of having any left over, rot. On the day before the Sabbath they could gather however a double amount and it would not spoil, for no Manna fell on the Sabbath. Some would not believe this and went out to gather it and were surprised to find that God did just what He said He would, and sent none on the Sabbath.

Jesus the Christ made use of the incident of the falling of the Manna to liken Himself to it when as recorded in John 6-51. He declares "I am the living bread which came down from heaven" and added "If any man eat of this bread, he shall live forever" Jesus told the Jews of His day that their fathers eat Manna and died, but that those who ate of Him should live forever.

A few of the points of the lesson are these: 1. God will not undertake a work for us and not provide things needful when the situation gets beyond us. 2. We should not look back to the "flesh pots" when once enlisted under God's banner. 3. If we have faith God will provide our wants, but not in such a way that we will be relieved of doing all we can to help ourselves. 4. As the Manna came from God to give life from day to day to the people of old, so Jesus comes to give life, but a greater—life eternal. 5. It is a miracle we see from day to day, in the corn, potatoes, peas, cabbage growing for our food, so we need not turn from this old bible record with an expression of unbelief that a miracle was performed for the desert wanderers, for one is before our very sight daily.
