OVERLOADING WITH BIAS.

At the editorial convention Harvey Ingham gave it as his best advice to his humble brothers that they should overload themselves with bias for right. The doctrine is a sound one, and would work splendidly in practice if one could only be dead sure as to what was right and overload with bias accordingly.

The truth is that all of us are "overloaded with bias" and a majority of us are overloaded with bias which we think right, but which a majority of our fellows think wrong. Our judgment is so fallible that the doctrine of bias as proposed by Mr. Ingham is a dangerous one. In fact, we have often felt that if the Register and Leader should unload a little of its bias and let loose some of that cork-sure self righteousness which has been its distinguishing feature since the days of Father Clarkson, it would be a much more readable and much more representative paper.

At present the Register and Leader is making itself almost ridiculous with its overload of bias as to tenure of office. But a short time ago the Register and Leader had on a pretty heavy load of bias to the effect that all precedent should be destroyed and Gov. Cummins should be given a third term. Tenure of office had no terror for it then. At present the case is different. The Register and Leader is after Senator Allison's scalp, wishing to present the same to Gov. Cummins—a la Salome. In order to hypnotize his public Harvey is now doing a danse du ventre to the effect that any man who has had more than six months in office should be killed and his head brought to Gov. Cummins on a charger.

The truth of the matter lies between the Register and Leader is too overloaded with bias. The fact that a man has had one or more terms of office is no more an argument for his continuance than is the fact that some other fellow has had none, an argument for his election. Tenure of office—per se, has nothing to do with the case. The reasoning that X should have the office because he has not had it, is just as specious as the reasoning that Y should have it again because he has had it.

Whether right or wrong, just or unjust, the fact remains that in the National Congress tenure of office largely determines the influence of the members. Perhaps it is to be regretted, perhaps it is but a dastardly conspiracy of the ins against the outs. Whatever it is, it exists. It is a condition, not a theory. If a member or a senator is a good and helpful legislator the longer he stays the more influence for good he will have. If he is a weak or a wicked legislator, the longer he stays the more influence for evil he will have. Two terms is entirely too long for the weak or the wicked legislator. Twenty terms is not sufficient for the brainy man who is doing his full duty by his Nation and by the people.

STATE FAIR NOW ON.

The great Des Moines fair is now in progress. Early in the season the Review determined not to advertise it free—and it did not. It was not one of the papers quoted in the Register and Leader for the very good reason that it kept its mouth shut.

Newspaper advertising is as necessary a part of a fair's expenses as hog barns or balloon ascensions. If the management wants any of it in the Review it must be paid for. Free advertising is a favor that like kissing, is a question of taste, as the woman said when she kissed the cow. Those papers wishing to kiss the pig barn are welcome to the privilege and to choice of position.

It was the Germans' vote that made him Governor of Kansas for wherever they flocked they kinked their glasses merrily and every voice cried "Hoch."

The Bulletin's attack on Whisman was unwarranted. Whisman was disheartened and sore and pitched a poor inning, but the support he received that inning was rotten also. Whisman did some splendid work for Denison and it was not fair to dismiss him in disgrace and then fire a newspaper broadside after him. Whisman had a good stiff blowing up coming to him, but so had others on the team and "Whis"—the best all around man on the team, since Roberts was quarrelled off, was made to stand it all.

GOV. HOCH'S ADDRESS.

Gov. Hoch of Kansas made a splendid impression with the people at his appearance on the Chautauqua program last week. One felt that the man was earnest and intrepid and one did not wonder that the people of his state had chosen him as their executive. His address was a pleasing one, filled with high thought, entertaining illustrations and permeated with a vein of optimism which was cheering. His "Message from Kansas" was brief, as he dwelt for but a short time on the great and successful struggle which that state has made to solve some of the great problems of to-day. We had hoped for more particulars, we wanted to know, not only what Kansas had done, but how. We enjoyed Gov. Hoch's address greatly, especially those portions which dealt with respect for law and with the necessity for Faith. We could not but think, however, that he had it in him to do much better. If he had gotten away from the idea that his was a "Chautauqua" address and that he must make it "popular" at all and any cost, if he had given his "Message from Kansas," without frills of furbelows or long winded introduction, if he had treated us as a well informed people who were gathered, not to be amused by stories or entertained with platitudes, but as wide-awake, up-to-the-times Americans who were abreast with the events of the day, and who wanted a live talk on live subjects, he would have been much more helpful. Gov. Hoch made a fine speech, but he could have made a much better one. His fault was that he talked "down" to his audience, whereas his audience could have met him on more even terms and would have appreciated a discussion which would have gone to the bottom of things. Gov. Hoch may have had a message to deliver from Kansas, if so, he forgot it and substituted therefore some beautiful and inspiring talks on well known copy-book mottoes.

It is our opinion that the country is rushing, hell-bent, toward another panic. There is no reason for it under God's blazing sun. There is a demand for all that America can produce, and at good prices. The law of supply and demand is in good working order. But—we are going to have a head-end collision with hard times before long. We can't be kept away from it anymore that the greenhorn can be kept from being buncoed, or the young buck prevented from chasing around the red-lights, or the stage struck girl be kept from making a fool of herself.

We are looking for trouble. From Ada Tarbucket down to the common run of gutter snipes, we are united in an attempt to paint the nation red. The corporations are mad because people want them to be honest, and they are going to "show us a few." The people are mad because the corporations are mad because the people want them to be honest. So the people don't give a blankety-biff what becomes of the dad-burned corporations.

Roosevelt is busy initiating members in the Ananias club. Taft is filling space, Bryan is chasing about like a Glenwood inmate sticking pins into the prosperity balloon. The average voter is getting mad and sulky. He is doing well enough himself but—Rockerfeller. The average voter wants a change and he will get it. It can't be for the better. That is why, we repeat, that the country is headed panic ward as fast as its crazy legs can take it. Perhaps we need a good licking to keep us good and sane for another spell.

The predicament of the American people would be side-splitting if it was not so confounded realistic and fraught with danger.

Here we are, stroking our double chins, girding up our fat paunches, lolling in our easy chairs, and putting up a tremendous cry about—the gout.

That is what ails us, too much prosperity, too much good times. Blood is out of order. Big toe aches like the Dickens. A little 1893 diet will fetch us out all right. A few Turkish baths by Dr. Bryan will take the fat off. A few kicks from the democratic mule will flatten the national abdomen all right, all right. That is what we think we need, that is what we are looking for and Ex-Secretary Shaw says we generally get what we expect. The worst of it is that the millionaire whose hide we are after can stand the hard times ever so much better than we can.

We know men who could lose 100 pounds to their own great benefit, but if the editor of the Review lost 100 pounds there would be nothing left but toe-nails and appetite.

We have often wondered if some way could not be devised for reducing the millionaire to reasonable proportions without reducing the rest of us to pulp. The science of statecraft has not progressed that far as yet and we see nothing for it but to sweat it out and starve it out together.

Perhaps some other way will be found and then we may wiggle through, but in the meantime demagogues will howl, and honest men will mourn and the "dear people" will come through it all, chastened in spirit, flattened in purse and willing to make the best of things until they get too fat again.

We are more and more convinced that Klinker was the best man on the Denison nine this year.

If the base ball management was only as good as the team we would have some show to win.

The court house flag was hung at three-quarters mast on Friday in honor of Gov. Hoch of Kansas. They must have thought the Governor had one foot in the grave.

AND THE EDITORS LAUGHED.

Cincinnati Commercial-Tribune: The Iowa editors have been in session and enjoyed deserved vacations from the toilsome task of molding public opinion, at Estherville, with intermissions for dinner and oratory. Of the two orators arousing the greatest interest one was George E. Robertson editor of the Ft. Dodge Messenger and later in the treasury at Washington as Director of the Mint and the other was Prof. James F. Orr of the University of Glasgow.

Addressing the assembled multitude of wielders of the pen and the type-writer, Mr. Roberts gravely declared that "the principal of universal evolution, as Darwin proclaimed it, is accepted by every university in the world," and the association left the auditorium deeply impressed with the profound truths just heard, and ate dinner in peace and with the usual Iowa appetite. Returning to the auditorium for greetings to Professor Orr, the editorial association was profoundly surprised to learn from the distinguished member of the faculty of Glasgow that "the theories of Darwin, notably his theory of universal evolution, have been discredited and discarded by the foremost scientists and the leading universities of Europe." Now, under all circumstances what is a poor Iowa editor to do when professors differ so radically? It is not meant to insinuate that the Iowa association is made up of poor editors. By no means! Undoubtedly the association is made up of men of large means and ability of high order. The term "poor" is applied to them solely and only as being helplessly between the fire of the affirmation of Mr. Roberts and the negation of Professor Orr.

The above comes under the head of "important if true." Unfortunately so far as Prof. Orr and his dictum is concerned there was "nothing doing." The Cincinnati paper must have had Hisey in mind.

NEW YORK FASHIONS

Pattern For Dressing Sack Designed by May Manton—No. 5720.

The dressing sack that serves its first purpose while yet it is becoming and attractive to be worn to the family breakfast is doubly useful and makes a valuable addition to the wardrobe. This one fulfills the requirements and is made with a cape collar, but it is not obligatory, as the neck can be finished with a simple straight standing collar, and there is a choice of long or elbow sleeves. Here ring dotted batiste is trimmed with embroidered banding, but all the pretty cambrics, dimities, lightweight flannel, cashmere and linette would be equally appropriate.

The dressing sack is made with the fronts and back. The back is plain, but the fronts are tucked at the shoulders and are finished with hems. The cape collar is arranged over the sack and can be finished as illustrated or with the standing collar; also, if better liked, the standing collar can be used alone. The sleeves are the simple ones gathered at the upper and lower edges and finished with hand cuffs. A belt or ribbon confines the fullness at the waist line.

The quantity of material required for the medium size is 4 1/2 yards 27, 3 1/2 yards 32 or 2 1/2 yards 41 inches wide.

Sizes for a 34, 36, 38, 40, 42 and 44 inch bust.

Garst the Man
 (Scranton Journal)
 Governor Garst and Senator Smith would make a ticket that all republicans who favored a wise and judicious administration could rally to with a clear conscience. They would give the state a business administration second to none. The Journal loves Senator A. B. Funk and knows of his qualification and worth, yet under the circumstances it believes that the wise and just thing to do is to give Garst the nomination.

MADE A BIG DEAL.
 (Schleswig Leader.)
 We hear of a large land deal which was made a week or so ago in Ida county. About three years ago T. P. Hoilander purchased 800 acres of land four miles south of Ida Grove, paying at the time $40,000.00 for the tract. He has recently sold 400 acres of it for the snug sum of $38,400.00. It will be seen that the land has very nearly doubled in value within three years. No telling where the price of land will stop at around here at this rate.

Ex-Secretary Shaw says people get just what they expect, but how about the Marshall county man who had triplets?
 Whisman may have earned his release in the ball game last week, but there were several others who earned theirs in the same game, and the management (?) earned theirs the week before.
 Our Vail correspondent wants to know why it is that not all the Denison ball players were able to give the name of our august Mayor. All of which goes to show that our players are gentlemen and keep out of the police courts.

Uncle Gaylord promised little Buelah a nickle every week she was good. She was to report on her own conduct. Last week there were numerous little lapses, but the case was desperate so Buelah wrote—"Dear Uncle—I cannot remember just how good I was this week, but next week is Chautauqua, and I need the money."

Charter Oak Times—Miss Vena Jacobson while in Denison the other day met her former teacher, Prof. Garrett, who was there teaching in the institute. He has charge of the hiring of the teachers in the Sac City schools and engaged Miss Vena to begin there in a year from now to teach penmanship and German. She expects to go back to Cedar Falls this fall year to specialize in German and prepare herself more fully for the place.
