SQUARE DEAL FOR BOYS

Plan to Establish "Boy States" as a Means of Reform.

ALL TO HAVE FAIR CHANCE.

Philanthropists Interested in Georgia Man's Wide Scheme to Train Lads in Good Citizenship—Farming to Be the Chief Industry.

That every boy, no matter what his condition in life, may have a chance for success Crawford Jackson of Atlanta, Ga., is laying plans to inaugurate what he calls a "boy state" in every state in the United States, says the St. Louis Republic. Mr. Jackson, who has been interested in the work of uplifting boys for several years, went to St. Louis a few days ago to interest philanthropists in the movement. A number of those prominent in humane work, it is said, have promised to help him. He contends that crime is more expensive than education and that the boy state will lessen the cost.

Georgia will be the first state to have this special juvenile government, and it is possible that Pennsylvania will be among the first to follow in its footsteps. L. G. Hartman of Commerce, a small town in Georgia, has given 430 acres of land for the project.

Mr. Jackson's plan is to have a boy governor, with juvenile assistants; a boy treasurer, a juvenile legislature, and, in fact, to make the colony an exact counterpart of the state. Of course there will be no salaries attached to the offices. Each youngster will have to work for his pay and attend to governmental duties incidentally, and, above all, there will be no chance for graft. In the happy little state the boys will be removed from criminal association, the essentials of good citizenship will be impressed upon their minds, and there will be a farm and school and shops to give opportunity for the little citizens' industrial development. The entire plan is, in a nutshell, a square deal for the boy. In the little state there will also be a school, where the youngsters will be carefully graded. There will be no conditions to make it difficult for youngsters to gain admittance.

"We want the worst boys as well as others," said Mr. Jackson in explaining his plan recently. "We will be delighted to take the youngsters with the very poorest chances. I think it a most worthy cause to help the boy who is practically down and out. Take a rude, rough and depraved boy and by frequent little touches of love and wisdom, by oft repeated acts of study and patience, and make him a shining and useful member of society. This is the aim of all arts and the more transcendent because the more divine."

"I'll tell you my plan in detail, and I think you'll agree that it will be what we call a good thing for the boys. It was while I was interested in the work of establishing juvenile courts through the south that I met the worst boy in Atlanta. I was determined to become friendly with him, and after much perseverance and many disappointments I succeeded. Now that boy has improved 75 per cent. It was contact with him that impressed upon me the fact that every boy, no matter what his condition morally, will improve if given the chance. So I determined to try to give boys that chance. They can get it through the juvenile state."

"We have the lands for it and the plans mapped out, but to put it in complete working order about $50,000 will be required. A board of trustees has been appointed and a charter drawn up. We would like to take charge of the boys before they have fallen into evil habits if possible, as well as those who have become delinquents, and by placing them in the state as active members of life develop correct ideas of citizenship. The officers of the state will be appointed from among the boys. There will be a governor, a secretary of state, a state treasurer, a lower house and a senate. The governor will appoint the judges, and the citizens will elect their own juries, pass their own laws and establish penalties, the trustees only acting as advisers. If a bad law is made, the trustees will have the power to veto it.

"To start it at least $50,000 will be needed. Among other things it is planned to erect an administration building which will cost approximately $25,000. The institution will provide a place for girls as well as for boys, with a matron and efficient woman teachers. Although girls will be allowed to vote, a boy will be selected for governor. While the charter provides for the admission of both races, the state will be started first for white children alone."

"The citizens of the state will not necessarily be offenders, as it is preferred to get them earlier from parents, who will enter them voluntarily, receiving parental rights of withdrawal when desired. Other citizens will be obtained from the municipal and state courts and at times from the federal court. The chief industry will be farming, and the boys will work under the direction of an expert farmer. There will also be trade schools with capable instructors. The institution will be managed on the cottage plan, the older children being separated from the younger, the wayward from the less wayward. The citizens of both sexes will be paid for their work in the coin of the juvenile state, with which they will pay for everything they purchase, thus developing habits of business and economy. If people of means wish to place their boys in the state, they will be permitted to pay for the privilege of doing so. But the state would prefer to receive the boys who are penniless and without a chance."

This included a tour through Virginia and visiting the Jamestown fair, Washington City, Philadelphia and New York, a ride up the famous Hudson to Albany, viewing Niagara Falls, and then home. At Washington he saw the beautiful Congressional library building, was in the nation's Capitol, and there inspected the historical paintings in the rotunda and in the House and Senate wings. He was also in the Supreme Court chamber. He went to the top of the Washington monument 555 feet high and there looked on the city and the country about for miles, and the Potomac river to the south and northwest. At New York he went up in the head of the statue of liberty which stands on a small island in the harbor. It is to be hoped he will not fail to tell the children of the schools about what he saw.

W. E. Fishel and wife came on Monday from their trip of three weeks in the east. At Washington they saw all the sights spoken of in the item relating to Prof. Kies. Mr. Fishel is telling his friends especially about his visit to the navy yard at Norfolk and how he and his wife were given a "salute of seven guns" when about to make a landing. The noise was deafening, and the ladies put their fingers in their ears. It seems however that the salute was not for our banker but an officer whose launch came to a landing about the same time as the boat with the excursionists. Mr. Fishel saw part of the Maine, and also relics of Naval warfare since the Revolutionary times. He calls the Jamestown exposition the "Imposition" as he was much
