Thursday was an ideal day. Thanksgiving is usually a day that reminds us of the approach of winter, but during the entire day it was warm and the bright sunshine made many to think that there was much to be thankful for. During the past year Arion has escaped many calamities that have befallen other places. The people have most of them enjoyed good health, our merchants have been successful in business and our bank has stood the test well during the financial flurry. The farmers in this locality have been prosperous and do not feel the hard times that are being talked about, and if we all consider well what has been our lot for the past year we have many things to be thankful for.
