Another Resident Passes Away.

A. G. Carothers died at his home in Manila Thursday, April 16 after a brief illness of typhoid-pneumonia. Everyone was shocked Thursday to hear of his death, on account of his being sick so short a time.

Andrew Garfield Carothers was born in Guernsey county, Ohio June 25, 1857. He came to Crawford county, Iowa in 1884 and four years later was married to Agnes Emily Graham. To them were born four children: Sadie, Emily, William and one little daughter who at the age of thirteen (13) months crossed over the river to await the Father's coming. The remainder of the children with the wife and two brothers and three sisters, living in Ohio, remain to weep over the missing one. Brother Carothers moved from the country near here into Manila just twelve years previous to the day of his death. He was a Christian man, openly taking his place in the church many years ago. He was trained up in the Christian faith of the old Scotch covenants. Early in life he united with the Presbyterian Manilla church in 1896 and remained true to his christian conviction till his death. Mr. Carothers died in Manila, Iowa April 16, 1908 at the age of 50 years, 9 months and 21 days. He was always cheerful, a devoted friend, church member, husband and father. Seldom ever do we find people walking more pleasantly the way of life than did Brother Carothers. By his death we are again reminded that "Friend after friend depart, Who has not lost a friend? There is no union here of hearts That has not had an end."

Dear children do not weep, Tho' chastening be His rod, The Father's but gone to sleep, To wake with heaven and God. Exchanging toil and tears For yonder beautiful shore, He soars amid the spheres—"Not lost but gone before." In heaven a song clear Pervades the sacred air, Enters thy Father dear, The pearly gates ajar; A messenger from earth, Has reached the other shore, Oh blissful, heavenly birth "Not lost but gone before."

The immediate relatives have the heartfelt sympathy of the entire community in their home of sorrow.

The pallbearers were: Ed Smith, C. S. Dempster, J. L. Breckenridge, Jim McCone, Fred Slater and Edward Theobald.

Those from a distance who attended the funeral were: Mr. A. T. The M. H. S. played the Business Men Monday evening after school. The game was an exciting one and rounded up with the score of 4 to 1 in favor of the high school.

Quite a little excitement was caused Sunday afternoon. Some strangers who had congregated at the west side of the park and "filling themselves up" with a dose in the shape of a nerve tonic becoming quite drunk and one of them jumped on the other, beating him up quite badly in the face, breaking his nose, cutting his lips and giving him a black eye. He was taken to Dr. Draper's office where medical aid was provided. While a posse of citizens marched the other fellow and two bums up to the jail where the other fellow was lodged for the night. At a hearing Monday morning the two bums were turned loose and the man who did the slugging was bound over to the grand jury. Having failed to give bonds he was taken over to the county jail on Monday afternoon.

D. P. Roberts transacted business in Denison Monday. He accompanied the prisoner over to the jail.

STEDMAN'S LOST BOOK.

How the Post-Banker Paid For an Outburst of Temper.

Edmund Clarence Stedman, the poet-banker, had a high temper and was exceedingly sensitive. One day, exasperated by the crass stupidity of a servant, he threw a book at his head. The boy ducked, and the book sailed out of the window. After it hurried the mental, but he was too late; a passerby had picked it up and walked off with it. Stedman began to wonder what book he had thrown away and to his horror discovered that it was a quaint and rare little volume for which he had paid $50. His chagrin was intense, as the work was almost unique and the prospects of replacing it were remote.

Some time afterward when browsing in a second hand bookshop our splenic poet-banker perceived to his great delight a copy of the very book he had lost. He asked the price. "It's very rare," replied the dealer, "but as you are an old customer I'll let you have it for $40. Nobody else could have it for less than $60." Stedman gladly paid the $40, got home with his treasure as soon as possible and sat down to gloat over it. A card dropped out of the leaves. It was his own. Further examination showed that he had bought back his own property. It cured him of casting books at servants' heads.—New York Press.

THREE DEADLY AGENTS.

Peculiar Properties of a Spider, a Grain and a Vine.

What is the most terrible form in which death comes? Here are three, but which one of them is the worst it is hard to say:

In Peru and parts of South Australia there is found a small spider about half as big as a pea. When this insect digs its fangs into its victim it inserts a poison which begins at once to act. It scorches up the blood vessels and spreads through the tissue, causing most dreadful agony. The worst part of it is that the victim usually suffers for two days, but death in the end is inevitable.

Another fearful death results from eating "bhat," a vegetable which grows in the east, of which a few grains cause violent mania, ending in death. "Bhat" occasionally grows in among the rice crop, from which it is hard to distinguish until dry, when the poisonous grain is of a brick red color.

There is a South American vine called the "knotter," which grips any living thing coming in contact with it. Its tentacles twine round the object seized, searing and burning the flesh like red-hot wires. Then the prey is drawn into the heart of the foliage and there crushed to death. The method is too horrible to describe in detail.—Pearson's Weekly.

A Sporting Judge.

After Baron Martin, who possessed a great horror of sporting "prophecs," had become partially deaf he was on one occasion trying a racing case, an exercise of his functions he revealed in. One of the counsel engaged in it was named Stammers, a solemn, formal, sententious personage, who seldom made a speech without quoting passages from Scripture. In addressing the jury he was about to pursue his old habit and got as far as "as the prophet says" when the judge interposed:

"Don't trouble the jury, Mr. Stammers, about the prophecs. There is not one of them who would not sell his father sixpenny worth of halfpence."

"But, my lord," said Stammers in a subdued tone, "I was about to quote from the Prophet Jeremiah."

"Don't tell me," replied the baron. "I have no doubt your friend Mr. Myer is just as bad as the rest of them."—London Graphic.

Presence of Mind.

A clergyman was talking on the prevalence of selfishness. "We incline," he said, "to put ourselves too far ahead of other people. We could all make no better resolution than to be less selfish. As it is we are too much like the art student. There was, you know, a poor Vermont art student who shared a studio bedroom with a journalist from Wisconsin. The Vermontor went out one morning to do the marketing and brought home two chops. He laid them on the table, and the cat leaped up and devoured one.

"Hang it," he said to his Wisconsin friend, 'the cat has eaten your chop.'—Washington Star.

A Puzzler.

Solomon was fain to admit that there were three things too wonderful for him, yea, four which he knew not. "The way of an eagle in the air, the way of a serpent upon a rock, the way of a stipe in the midst of the sea and the way of a man with a maid." Had Solomon lived till this day and generation, says the Philadelphia Ledger, he would have added a fifth puzzler—to wit, the way of an express company with a prepaid package.

A Word of Approval.

"So you approve of your European son-in-law?" "To some extent," answered Mr. Cumrox. "It's a certain relief to have some of our family quarrels conducted in a language that I don't understand."—Washington Star.

Changed Conditions.

Mamma—My dear, the good book tells us to love our neighbors as ourselves. Little Ethel—Yes, mamma, but people didn't live in flats then.—Kansas City Independent.

It has been observed that they who most loudly clamor for liberty do not most liberally grant it.—Sam Johnson

Humor and Philosophy

By DUNCAN M. SMITH

A LIVE DEAD ONE.

The moon may be old
And make of itself such a show,
Its vales without river or sea,
Its night like its noon,
But still this same moon
Don't look like a dead one to me.

Could ball large as that
Go out on a bat
And make of itself such a show,
Get full of good cheer
Twelve times in the year
And still be a dead one? Oh, no!

If made of green cheese,
No stories like these
Of deadness could credence secure.
The man with a nose
At once will suppose
Green cheese is a live one for sure.

Pray, how could the man
Whose features we scan
Live if it were dead, as they say?
He couldn't get hash
For marbles or cash
His terrible hunger to stay.

Astronomers may
Be frisky and gay,
But that doesn't prove they are right.
But, say that they are,
I'd give a cigar
If I could but shine half as bright.

Industrious.

"Yes, he is quite a tank."
"I didn't suspect it of him."
"Listen to this. He was drinking at the bar when I stepped up, and he asked me what I would have. I told the bartender to give me some of the same. The bartender looked mighty worried. 'Sorry, boss,' he said, 'but we are all out of it. Your friend has been drinking here for ten minutes. Looked like a well stocked saloon too.'"

Hesitating.

"Why doesn't Ethel get married? She has been out three seasons now."
"She can't decide between the duke and the count."
"That is annoying, isn't it? Which is the more expensive?"

Looking For a Catch.
"You have heard of the immortal Ben Jonson."
"I can't say that I have. Isn't he ever going to die?"
"He has been dead for years."
"I thought you said he was immortal."

Through his poems, man."
"Oh, I thought it was some patent medicine advertisement!"

Hard on the Subject.
"What is his idea in shaving himself—trying to beat the barber?"
"Trying to get even with himself for something, I should judge from the looks of his face."

True to Its Kind.
"What do you think of that effusive testimony in regard to this new brand of hair restorer?"
"It is a bald lie."

Draw the Line.
"He is a contemptible sneak thief."
"Will take anything in sight, I hear."
"Anything but a bath."
