DENISON'S GREAT LOSS.

The probable defeat of Hon. J. P. Conner at the primary is a greater loss for Denison than it is for any other community or for any individual.

Denison has given two men to public life, both of whom made honorable records. Both are now retired to private life and Denison necessarily retires with them from the public view and becomes once more a common-place Iowa town.

Materially Denison loses a great deal in the retirement of Judge Conner. Already the postmaster has inquired from the Supervising Architect for information needed in making preparation for the purpose of the postoffice site authorized by Congress.

Mr. Woods it can be well imagined, will have but small zeal in securing an appropriation for Denison, and even were his zeal the greatest he will not be in Congress long enough to attain the influence Judge Conner possesses in that body.

Judge Conner is a man schooled both to victories and to defeats. He is too big a man to be soured by adversity or to be embittered either towards the party that has honored him in the past or towards the community the vast majority of which stood by him loyally.

In fact it will be much easier for Judge Conner to forgive and forget, then it will be for the loyal citizens of Denison, and men who believe in the Denison way and who have always been ready to help in all that makes for the city's well being. It will be hard for such citizens to rally to the support of traitors should they ask such favor.

Judge Conner has had a splendid career as a man and a statesman. As district attorney, as Judge, as Congressman, as leader of the bar of the county, as a high-minded, straightforward gentleman, he deserves and receives to-day the entire respect of all the right-minded men who know him.

His defeat at the primaries was the direct result of the factionalism of Iowa politics. Judge Conner was too big a man, too broad a man, for blind and narrow factionalism. He would not say that if re-elected he would be a "Progressive" Congressman. He said he would be a Republican Congressman. He declared that his personal preference would be for Mr. Cummins, but he steadfastly refused to commit himself to any policy that would read the Allison republican out of the party. This attitude failed to please the radical "Progressives" who demanded that the congressman should, like Mr. Hubbard, belong, not to the Republican party, but to the Cummins party. On the other hand the radical standpaters could not concede to their congressman the right to differ with them even though his record was proof that he would be fair with all the republicans of the district.

Judge Conner was too much of a republican and not enough of a factionalist. He was too big a man to fit into the scheme of present day politics in Iowa.

The new primary law, which permitted hundreds of democrats to vote against him, the bunglesome ballot of this farcical law, the flagrant and unpunishable violations as to expenditures which place the honest candidate entirely at the mercy of the unscrupulous, the long continued session of Congress which kept Judge Conner in Washington while his opponent had a clear field, all these things operated against the Denison man. The post-offices which were supposed to operate so largely in the Judge's favor were a net loss for while each town boasts but one postmaster, it is well-stocked both with disappointed candidates and with prospective candidates.

BRYAN IS IN COMMAND.

St. Louis Globe-Democrat: Mr. Bryan's easy ascendancy in the democratic party is receiving some striking illustrations. Nor is his way confined altogether to his own side. It touches the republican party to a greater extent than is commonly realized. Yesterday he suggested to Secretary Taft—the suggestion in this case being equivalent to a command that they should join in asking congress to pass a campaign contribution publicity bill before the recent session ended. The secretary responded by saying that he had already made a move in that direction by sending a note to Senator Burrows a few weeks ago. Mr. Burrows being the head of the committee on privilege and elections in his chamber, to use his influence in putting publicity measure through the senate. Therefore the secretary falls in line with Mr. Bryan, and the latter will get all the credit which attaches to this outside movement to induce congress to act—a movement, however, which has very little chance to succeed. In the campaign Bryan will be able to say that he took the lead in urging publicity, and if anybody doubts his word, yesterday's telegram to Mr. Taft will be decisive on that point. Moreover, he sent word immediately to the democratic leaders in the house and senate to use their best efforts to push a publicity bill through before adjournment.

Mr. Bryan is not waiting for Denver to give him his commission to boss his party. He is bossing it now, and is doing some bossing in the republican party. Denver is six weeks away, but Bryan is anticipating and discounting it. He is entirely safe in doing this, although some of his democratic rivals and enemies pretend that the nomination has not been made. Gov. Johnson, of Minnesota, is making speeches to democratic gathering about 2,000 miles away from his state, and some of his deluded auditors are hailing him as the "next president of the United States," but these aberrations are not causing any disturbance out in the longitude of Lincoln. At no time in Mr. Cleveland's service in the White House did he exert such autocratic sway over his party as Bryan is doing now, and as he has been doing for many months. A few western states are choosing uninstructed delegates to the national convention, but Bryan is saying nothing, because he knows he will capture all of them at Denver. He is laughing at the New York democratic papers which imagine they are molding a public sentiment against him. When the New York delegates see the opposition to Bryan collapse they will swing into line for him and make his nomination unanimous. Denver will have no walkouts, like 1896 saw in both the republican and the democratic conventions. July 7 will find Denver as docile as Kansas City was eight years ago. When Jefferson forced his party to sanction the embargo, his Federalist enemies said he was hitting the constitution a harder blow than ever John Adams hit it, even if all the democratic charges against Adams were true. Jackson's withdrawal of the funds from the United States bank and his removal of the secretaries of the treasury who refused to order the withdrawal aroused an opposition which sent all his enemies into the coalition which became the whig party. But each of these democratic presidents did these things when in their second terms, while Bryan, after his second defeat, has established a far more rigid dictatorship over his party than they ever attempted.

CHAPMAN CASE DECISION.

Logan Observer—Judge Green has handed down his decision in the Chapman case in which he refuses the appellants, Pfarr, Gebert & Hunt a new trial if Chapman will consent to the reduction of his damage $725.00 which will leave him $1380. We understand that Chapman has agreed to accept this amount in settlement of the case, and we also understand that the defendants in the case will appeal to the supreme court. It does seem to us that in such case some one should be responsible, either the oil inspector for not doing his duty or the persons selling the oil which causes such a tragedy. As to the merits of this particular case we do not express an opinion, because we are not sufficiently informed in the premises as to feel justified in doing so.
