The opening of the park at Vail came off June 18, as advertised. The park was used part of the afternoon but on account of the the wet weather an adjournment to the McAndrews building was in order, where about two hundred persons had refreshments. About 7.30 p.m. the crowd assembled at the Woodman hall where the program for the evening was fully carried out. The M. W. A. band discoursed excellent music. The Glee club did themselves proud. M. O'Connor delivered an oration that was well received by the large audience. Miss Grace Dieters' recitation was well received and greeted with rounds of applause. The most excitement was in regard to the naming of the park. It was understood that the individual donating the largest amount of cash would have the honor of naming the park. Mr. C. Paine proved to be the man that gave the most cash and named the park, "Paine Park." Mr. Paine was called on for a short speech and did remarkably well. The affair ended with a dance in the hall. There was cleared on the park opening about two hundred dollars.

OUR FLAG.

On history's crimson pages, high up on the roll of fame, The story of Old Glory burns, in countless words of flame.

It is the old red, white and blue, proud emblem of the free, It is the flag that floats above our land of liberty.—Benjamin-Sutton.

The "Star-Spangled Banner" is generally taken for granted. One seldom hears its why and wherefore called in question. With its every display in city and hamlet, on turret and hall, comes a little discussion as to its history and development.

It transpires that the American flag is, like the human species, a thing of evolution. This is so, indeed, with the insignia of most countries, notably of England, whose flag began with old King Egbert's dragon upon which was incorporated the three Norman lions of William the Conqueror. When Edward III. aspired to the crown of France he added the fleur-de-lis. James I. dispensed with both and adopted St. George's cross and finally in 1801 the "Lion and the Unicorn" began their long fight for the crown, which has since continued on canvas, in every latitude of the world.

The colonies, of course, lived under the British flag. In 1680 the flag of New England was white, charged with St. George's cross in red surmounted with the crown. In the center was inscribed Jacobus Rex. While Manhattan was in possession of the Dutch the ships waved a flag on which was a beaver, the then insignia of the New Netherlands. 1707 the colonies adopted the Union Jack of Great Britain. This was formed by a combination of St. Andrew's and St. George's crosses, and of course was typical of the fact that the two countries had become one when Queen Elizabeth died and the Scottish king succeeded to the English throne.

At the time of our revolt from British authority the Union Jack was in general use, usually bearing some patriotic motto of which "Liberty and Union" was the favorite. Directly after the battle of Lexington a new flag was improvised with the motto of the state of Connecticut, viz., "Qui transibit sustinet." This soon gave way to regimental colors, each being distinctive in shade. At Bunker Hill a blue flag was chosen to designate New England troops—the first sign we see of union in the colonial army. This flag had St. George's cross in one corner. It was growing beautifully less within our limits and soon afterwards disappeared when Gen. Putnam displayed a red banner on Prospect hill with the motto "An Appeal to Heaven." The colony of Massachusetts sent out cruisers in the spring, supplying each with a white flag on which was painted a green pine tree. When armed vessels were commissioned in Washington they were furnished with flags of similar kind.

To Col. William Moultrie of South Carolina is due the honor of raising the first republican flag. It had a white crescent on a blue ground. This was unfurled on the east bastion of the fortress in Charleston harbor, June 28, 1776, while on the opposite side waved the flag called the "Great Union," which had first been raised by Washington at Cambridge.

June 14, 1777, the Continental congress, realizing the inappropriateness of longer using British colors, resolved "that the flag of the 13 United States be 13 stripes, alternate red and white; that the union be 13 stars, white in a blue field, representing a new constellation."

The first national flag after this pattern was made by a Mrs. Ross, a lady of Philadelphia. She had some distinguished men to assist her, among whom were Benjamin Franklin and Gen. Joseph Reed. We are not informed whether these men, appointed by congress for the purpose, used the thimble, needle and thread that the lady herself employed. From her general character it is probable that Mrs. Ross declined to let them "boss the job," and proceeded in her own way.

The 13 stars of the flag of 1777 were arranged in a circle, although there was no officially prescribed form. In 1794, after the admission of Vermont and Kentucky into the union, it was resolved by congress that from and after May 1, 1795, "the flag of the United States be 15 stripes alternate red and white, that the union be 15 stars, white, in a blue field."

No provision was made by this act for future alterations, nor were any changes made till 1818, although a number of new states were admitted meanwhile into the union. On April 4 of that year a bill embodying the suggestions of Eapt. Samuel G. Reid, who recommended the reduction of the stripes to the original 13 and the adoption of stars equal to the number of the states, formed into one large star, and a new star to be added on the Fourth of July next succeeding the admission of each new state, was approved by President Monroe, and the flag thus established was afterward hoisted on the hall of representatives.

RHEUMATISM

is quickly relieved and promptly cured by Dr. Drummond's Rheumatic Remedies. The internal remedy is pleasant to take, acts immediately, does not disturb digestion and is for rheumatism only in its all torturing forms. The external preparation restores stiff joints, drawn cords and hardened muscles. If your druggist is not in stock with them, don't accept something else and be cheated out of a cure. Write to the Drummond Medicine Co., New York, for their direct mail prospectus. Don't delay and suffer. You are entitled to health.

Buy Clothes With Your Eyes Open

Have you been buying clothes where the salesman or the dealer puts the coat on your back, gives it a hitch here and a pull there, passes his hand over your back and shoulders and says 'what a beautiful fit?' Well, that's one way of selling clothes and one way of buying them; but a far better way, according to our method of thinking is choosing a size suited to the customer and giving him a coat to slip on himself—a coat that sets perfectly the moment he puts it on—whose collar sets close to the shoulders, and that seems molded to the form, a garment that drapes and fits as only perfectly made clothes can fit.

What's more, you will find that a Hart Schaffner & Marx coat will hold its shape; it will seem remarkable to you if you have been wearing coats that have been pulled into shape by the flat-iron; that lose their good points after you have worn them for a brief time.

Profit by experience and let value enter into your calculations.

We are all ready for the 4th of July with everything you need to dress up and make the eagle scream.
