MILTON AND JUNIA WED

A Brilliant Wedding at the J. B. Romans Home
Saturday Last

Married on Saturday, Jan. 2nd, 1909, at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Romans, Miss Junia Romans and Mr. Milton McAbreu. The ceremony, the impressive ring service being used, was performed by Rev. Mr. Senseney. The wedding was witnessed by nearly a hundred guests. The family connection being large, the guests were mostly related or close friends of the bride and groom.

The bride wearing a beautiful white gown and carrying bride's roses, came down stairs on the arm of her uncle, Mr. R. A. Romans, who gave her in marriage. She was also attended by Miss Hazel Laub, age to take them to the train, but their friends felt that nothing was too good for them, and so dismissed the cab and engaged John Keobler's dray with honest John as driver. In order that they might have the streets of Denison well in mind to contrast them with the streets of Chicago, quite an extended drive was taken before going to the depot. At the station enough rice was thrown at the young people to plant a Texas rice plantation.

Mr. and Mrs. McAhren had never been married before, but have assisted at enough wedding sendoffs themselves to be quite aware of what might happen. They therefore sent their suit cases on a few days ahead, but Mitt seemed to be very much attached to the one he carried. When the boys captured it they found upon opening it to be filled with rice, bricks, lemons and the word "stung" and it was even so.

THE STATE UNIVERSITY, IOWA

THE ALUMNI AND PRESENT STUDENTS BANQUET JANUARY 1.

FINE MUSIC, BRIGHT SPEECHES

The State University Students Give the Institution Much Praise and Applaud for Patronage.

Friday evening last, was a notable one for past and present students of the state university living in the county. For the purpose of keeping up the "University spirit" and inducing boys and girls looking for a higher education to choose the Iowa City institution the Alumni of Crawford county have perfected an organization and holds an annual banquet. The event has with each year become more important, and looked forward to by past and present students of Iowa City. In addition to those just enumerated the senior class of the high schools of the county are invited. This year the members of the junior class of the Denison school were asked to act as waiters for the modest banquet served.

For this occasion the club room of the Carnegie library building was tastefully decorated, the old gold of the state University having a prominent place. The pennants of some of the great colleges and universities were displayed and the entire effect was most pleasing. A double row of chairs was set in a horse shoe form, the open end toward the platform. The banquet was served very pleasingly, the menu being escalloped oysters, potato chips, fruit salad, rolls, coffee and ice cream.

Mr. P. J. Klinker acted as toastmaster for the occasion, and did well. He first called on the talented pianist, Miss Lillie Raine, for a solo, and then Mr. Forest Theobald of Manilla, who is now a student in the College of Liberal Arts spoke on behalf of that department. He seemed fully at home on his feet, and gave a number of amusing stories. He called attention to the benefit of attending a college where one could gain an extensive acquaintance in the state. At present there are ninety-five instructors in the College of Liberal Arts and the best of instruction given. The College of Medicine called R. R. Randall to his feet who said he would follow the motto of his department "Be definite and brief." He told of the limited quarters given this department in the beginning of things, and how it was well housed and excellently equipped at the present time. From now on, students entering the medical department must have studied in the college of Liberal Arts or one ranking with it one year, so they would be nice refined fellows like his predecessor on his feet, Saunders. He made a plea for Iowa City as a simple old town with few vices and the moral influences good. That the university now has 2400 students was sufficient answers to claims that people were not sending their boys and girls there.

Dr. McConaughy responded to the toast, "A Pull at the University." He said he presumed the toast had something about a "Pull" in it because he pulled teeth. He came loaded with some good stories, one of which was as to his experience in accepting an invitation to an oyster supper, and being sent up a dark alley to get the oysters, which having been stolen caused his arrest, and he and the other boy had to pay a fine. This was made up to them by the other boys afterward. He had arranged with his wife to "pull" his coat when he had said enough, and getting the signal sat down, receiving much applause. Mr. Barborka next entertained and pleased with a harp solo.

Mrs. Harry Carpenter spoke on the literary societies and the university spirit. She related how a freshman boy made a perilous ascent to take down a doll put high in air by the sophomores in derision of the freshmen, and of another ready to risk his life to play foot ball, when against the doctor's orders, so his mates would not be disappointed. These were instances of class loyalty and typified the spirit of the State University. Miss Hilda Brodersen devoted her response to the need of a Woman's Building at the university. She explained that there were now fully 800 young women enrolled, and that they had no proper accommodations for lodging and meals. She very forcefully pictured conditions, and urged the construction of an ideal building which she outlined. Miss Brodersen acquitted herself well.

Mr. Barborka being an old resident of Iowa City, told of the university in 1875 and today. The gain in buildings, equipment, number of instructors and pupils had been wonderful. He said Iowa City was one of the cleanest towns in the United States, and that he planned to send his boy there. A charmingly given soprano solo by Mrs. McConaughy very much pleased the assembly, and then came another of the bright talks of the evening. Roland Philbrook being called to speak of the graduating class of the High School this year, handed the members out some handsome bouquets which made them blush. He is a very versatile boy, and his friends expect for him a most creditable future. He was followed by Frank Menagh of the High School class of 1909. He said the average high school boy or girl had a wide range of ideals and ambitions. Many were expected to decide on weighty matter for their future before they were prepared by experience to do so. He thanks the Alumni association for arranging the present affair, so to present what the State University offered.

Prof. Van Ness of the Denison college responded to the call of the toastmaster with advice to the High School pupils. He said they could not get too much higher education, that they should not be afraid to learn things which could not be coined instantly into dollars. On going away to college he advised "Keep your eyes open and your mouth shut."

The closing talk of the evening was given by Mr. C. F. Kuehne, a most enthusiastic University man. He was versed in the history of the institution and gave the figures as to the increase in students and progress in buildings and equipment. But a few years ago the high water mark of enrollment was a little over five hundred and the increase had been phenomenal being up to nearly twenty-five hundred. He made proud boast that no university or college west of the Ohio river could compare with that of Iowa for the number of great men it had educated. The names of many were given and the claim made that an institution showing such results was worthy of support and patronage. It was nearly midnight when the assembly adjourned. It had been a great night of the friends of the State University of Iowa.

The following officers were elected for the coming year:

President, J. W. Miller, Jr.
Vice-President, Miss Hilda Brodersen,
Secretary and treasurer, Miss Fannie Hayes.

A BUSY MONTH AHEAD

Denison Merchants Planning to Make January One of The Big Trade Months of The Year.

It used to be the custom for merchants to sit back and get their breath for about six weeks or two months after the holiday trade. In this way the store ate up the profits of the Christmas season so that the merchant had to get up and scratch gravel by spring. Now-a-days the merchants get over the rush, with a rush and the first of the year finds them up and doing with fresh bargains and fresh goods to attract new customers and hold old ones. In fact January, from being a dull month has come to be considered one of the best retail months of the year. It is certainly a good month for buyers as merchants are invoicing, searching out all the odds and ends and broken lines and sacrificing rather than to carry them into the new year. Mid-winter and mid-summer are the best times for bargains and the careful housewives have learned it by experience. Especially is this the case when the weather has been particularly unseasonable. A cold wet summer leaves the majority of the light summer goods unsold when summer comes. The merchant knows the styles will change another year and he is anxious to sell. Mild winter weather has the same effect on heavy goods and profits are cut to the bone in order to get the cash to meet the sixty and ninety day bills at which the majority of merchandise is bought. Even the big cash buyer, discount their bills, stores find it advisable to clean up their stocks and have cash for the spring buying so that January is the month of bargains. The Review reflects the merchant activity in its columns and contains announcement of many bargains which it would be well to read. In fact the careful student of Review advertisements can save many times the subscription price of the paper in the course of a year and in no month can this be better done than in January.

Mr. and Mrs. Huckstep were recipients of many handsome and costly gifts. The bride is a young lady of pleasing personality and endearing charms. Her friends are numbered by her acquaintances whose good wishes were showered upon her. The groom is the youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Huckstep, of Milford. He is a man of sterling qualities and is well worth the young lady he has chosen for his companion through life. They left on the afternoon train for Sioux City, where they will spend their honeymoon visiting relatives and friends. After Jan. 10, they will be at home to their many friends, on the groom's father's farm of which he will have charge for the coming year.

who wore white and carried pink roses. Mr. Robert Romans acted as best man.

Under a graceful canopy of green and with white bells the party made a very attractive picture. Mr. Barborka played the wedding march and also played during the reception and supper that followed. The wedding supper was a very nice one and was well served by the members of the O. C. club.

Inspection of the wedding presents in the dining room showed the loving thought and generosity of many friends, silver, china, linen, cut glass, all kinds of beautiful things were on display. Mr. and Mrs. McAhren went to Chicago on their wedding trip. They had engaged a carri-
