How's this for enterprise? A Chicago News Bureau writes us that for twenty-five cents they will tell us about a Denison man who just got married in Michigan. The Denison Electric Light and Power Plant authorizes us to state that day power will be installed in Denison just as soon as sufficient patronage can be secured to guarantee the additional running expense. The stockholders feel the importance of this to Denison and are anxious to install this service, but they do not feel that they should be asked to lose money on the venture. The additional expense which they wish to feel will be met, is the running expense for coal and wages, not interest or profit or expense of management. It would seem that Denison would need enough day power to make this profitable. The management would urge that all who contemplate using day power advise them at once as the power will be turned on just as quick as the patronage is assured.
