Some complain of the abuse of Memorial Day in that the graves of others than soldiers are decorated. It will not be many years before the old soldiers and their immediate relatives have passed away, then the fact that Memorial Day has become a time for the remembrance of all the dead will be the only thing that will prevent the observance of the day from being abandoned. The old soldiers should have the right of way, but we cannot find it in our hearts to criticize the son who on that day, or any other, lays flowers upon a father's grave whether he served in the army or whether he served his country in the walks of peace.
