His Knitting Work. Aunt Alvira Eifer was what her neighbors called a "regular driver." Possessed of untiring energy and unflinching strength herself, she made little allowance for idleness on the part of any one, and she declared that she could "put up with a mean man easier than with a lazy one." Aunt Alvira's husband, Uncle Ethan, was a small, wizened, weak looking man, whom Aunt Alvira declared to be "mighty wiry, if he did look so spindlin'." One day a summer boarder who chanced to be staying at a farmhouse near the Eifer homestead wandered over to the little brown farmhouse and sat down for a chat with Aunt Alvira. The visitor took note of the enormous quantity of stove wood piled up in the back yard and overflowing from the great woodshed. The whole yard was strewn with it. The caller estimated that there were not less than twenty-five cords. "What an enormous quantity of wood you have!" he said to Aunt Eifer. "Yes, there is considerable," she replied. "I call 'em sellin' most o' it in the fall." "Who cut it?" "Oh, Ethan did it as sort o' knittin' work. I think it's a good thing for a man to have some kind o' knittin' work to do when he's restin', and that wood pile has been Ethan's knittin' work."—Youth's Companion.

George I. and the Stage. George I. was a lover of the stage and, as his predecessors had done, caused his "servants" to play before him at court. In 1718 his majesty ordered the great hall of Hampton Court to be converted for the time into a theater. There, under the direction of Steele, "whose political services had been poorly recompensed by granting him some theatrical privileges," seven performances were given. Among the plays were "Hamlet," "Sir Courtly Nice," "The Constant Couple," "Love For Money," "Volpone" and "Rule a Wife and Have a Wife." Among the players were Colley Cibber, Pinkethman, Johnson, Thurmond, Booth, Mills, Mrs. Porter and Mrs. Younger. In former times the fee paid by the sovereign to his servants for a play acted at Whitehall had been £20. For these plays at Hampton Court King George, besides paying the actors their ordinary day's wage and traveling expenses, gave £350 and added £200 for the managers. The players were required to act at any time upon receiving a day's notice.

The Modest Scot. Love of country is so fine a virtue that it seems difficult to carry it, to excess. A resident of a small village in the north of Scotland paid a business visit to London the other day. He happened to call on a merchant who unknown to him had once made a stay in his native place. In the course of conversation the visitor made use of an expression that led the other to exclaim, "Surely you come from Glen McLuskie?" The assertion, however, was denied. Presently, to the merchant's surprise, another Glen McLuskie expression was heard. "My dear Mr. MacTavish, I feel convinced that you are a Glen McLuskie man after all," insisted the merchant. "Weel," returned the other, "I'll no deny it any longer." "Then why didn't you say so at first?" demanded the Englishman. "Weel," was the calm response, "I didna like to boast o' it in London."—London Chronicle.

Her Souvenir. "Why did you hurry so?" he asked her when he had finally caught up with her at the foot of the stairs of the cafe. "Do you remember how the waiter prepared to put a clean tablecloth on our table for fresh guests," she asked, "before we got through listening to the music?" "Yes," said he. "Well, then, here," she said and showed him a large white tablecloth that had been hidden under her coat. "This is it. He laid it on the window sill. Serves him right." He gazed upon it in amazement. "Why didn't you let me know," he queried, "and I might have taken the table and walked out with that?"—New York Press.

Haleyon Days. The term "haleyon days" is derived from a pretty little fable of the Sicilians, who believed that during the seven days preceding and following the winter solstice, Dec. 21, the haleyon or kingfisher floated on the water in a nest in which her young were deposited and that during this time of her brooding the seas were calm. Our Indian summer corresponds to the haleyon of the Sicilians.—New York Telegram.

GOT TOO MUCH CHLOROFORM

Mrs. W. D. Jones Tries Head-ache Cure and Nearly Succumbs to Deadly Fumes. On Thursday evening Mrs. W. D. Jones having a sick headache tried to cure it by inhaling chloroform. She poured two ounces of the deadly fluid on to a cloth and covered her face with it. When found she was unconscious and her heart had almost ceased to beat before quickening agents could be used. It was a very narrow escape and we would warn our readers that while chloroform will undoubtedly cure headache it is apt to be too wholesale in its effects and put an end to all ones ills. Mrs. Jones is a daughter of Mrs. Jos. Duncan. The family has lived here but a short time coming here from Charter Oak. Mr. Jones is employed at the brick yards. 1600 acres best pea and wheat land in the valley, level as a floor, no sage brush to clean off, most all fenced, good water rights to cover all of it, close into Antonio, Col.
