

THE WONDER AGE.

It is the first time that counts. We remember as a little boy that we reached Chicago one evening and that mother pointed out of the car window and showed us the first electric light we had ever seen. On Saturday the trip across the English channel was accomplished through the air for the first time. The trip was made in thirty minutes and with that trip the "tight little isle" ceased to be an island. Two other adventurous spirits were ready waiting to make the trip with different kinds of machines and these machines differed from the Wright Bros. machine and this differs from still others and all of the mono-or bi-planes differ from the Zeppelin model of dirigible airship. This means that the problem of the navigation of the air has been solved. The details are to follow. It will be "continued in our next," but universal experience shows that the one great principle having been solved the improvements come faster than the patent office can keep the record. The navigation of the air treads right on the heels of the wireless telegraph and simultaneously with the crossing of the channel comes the announcement that right here at home, just across the Missouri at Omaha, some genius has found the way to transmit electric power by wireless. It reads like a fairy tale. Within a few years we will be discussing the comparative merits of airship makes with as much acumen and vigor as our motorists use in discussing the merits of their automobiles.

The Review is installing a new motor but we cannot help thinking that in a short time it will be an obsolete, back number.

The time is coming when the sun's heat will be converted into power and will be stored and transmitted through the air to run printing presses and automobiles and airships. At the rate things are progressing there are hundreds of Review readers who will live to see that day.

AN ACCREDITED SPREE.

Last week a man was haled before Mayor Rollins on the charge of intoxication. He had been about the city soliciting funds for the American Salvation Army of Des Moines and bore credentials from the captain in charge. He had no book to record subscriptions and could thus turn in as much or as little as he pleased. There was no question about the solicitor being drunk. There are so many impostors that this case would hardly be worth recording, however, were it not for the fact that this man was not an impostor. The mayor called Capt. Hayes by long distance and he said that the credentials were valid, that the man was empowered to solicit for the organization and further that this was not the first time the man had been reported for drunkenness.

An institution that will help the victim of alcohol and do all it can to put him on his feet and watch over him in his efforts to overcome, is worthy of all support and encouragement; but the organization that sends a drunkard out to represent it and solicit funds for its support, thus placing temptation within the easy reach of the unfortunate victim, is worthy of no assistance and should be thoroughly discredited as a Christian or charitable institution.

The regular Salvation Army officers are always uniformed and keep a record of all donations. We believe all such solicitors should be obliged to register and receive a permit from the state and that they should be required by law to give receipts for all funds received by them. We do not wish to discourage giving. All of us give too little. There is no man among us who gives the scriptural tenth of his income for good works. We give so little in fact that we cannot afford to have any of it wasted on sprees. The regular Salvation Army is all right and deserves more than you will be apt to give it.

NEARING THE END.

(D. M. Harris in Mo. Valley Times.)
Mapleton Press: On Wednesday, July 21, 1909, we will have reached our 88th mile post in the journey of life. Our work, such as it has been, is fast drawing to a close. We are growing old. Just waiting for the boat to ferry us over the mystic river of life, into that far off country from which no traveler ever returns, and come when the call may, we can have but few regrets. We have already outlived the allotted life of three score years and ten for man. Our journey has brought many sorrows, yet we have been permitted to gather along the journey many happy memories of joy and pleasure, and were it not for leaving the many dear friends here, we would hear the final call without regret, and yet we have the faith of a happy meeting over yonder. You may ask us where and we answer: We do not know. We talk of heaven, but where heaven is, or how we are to reach it, we do not know. We say going to ascend or descend, but these terms do not inform us how, when or where; but that we are destined to live in the future is certain. Jesus said to His Apostles: "I go to prepare a place for you, that where I am there shall you be also." If we are permitted to go to the same place the Savior goes, we will be happy in the world to come. In the vast universe of God there will be found room for all true believers in His Son, yet where, when and how we do not know. We have lived a long time, and to give an idea on time, we may say we have lived under the administration of every President of the United States except the first five. That fact makes our government look young or old, or perhaps both. We have seen this government grow from a weak nation to one of great power and wealth, honored and respected by all the nations of the world; have seen it emerge from the old lumber wagon to the magnificent steam car, the old sail ship give way to the steamship, the stage coach to the automobile, and if permitted to remain a few years longer, will see travel by the airship; we have seen the farmer advance from the hoe and the shovel plow, the scythe and the cradle, to the cultivator, the mower and the reaper. Farming is now mechanical, mostly done by machinery, we write by machinery, talk by lightning and sing by phonograph, and we have seen the old Washington hand press change to the steam press: in fact this is a new world, and men born 80 years ago have outlived their surroundings. What the next 80 years may have in store for the people none are so wise as to be able to tell.

There will be other mighty changes made in all the departments of science and industry as the world is just beginning to awake in discoveries, but we will have been gathered to our fathers and our name be forgotten, or if remembered, will be as a dream, our old tired body will have moldered away and will have joined its kindred dust, and the people, when in our beautiful cemetery, on reading the inscription on the tombs, and on reading ours on the marble slab will say, "Who was D. M. Harris?"

Yes we are all passing away. The young may die, but the old must pass away, so we will just wait for a few years more, but when the call comes, be it soon or late we hope to be ready to go to meet our loved ones who have gone on before, to be over there where it is everlasting day. Until then, let us wait.

The funeral of Mr. M. D. Wright occurred at the Presbyterian church on Friday morning. Rev. J. Jas. De-Pree officiated preaching a sermon filled with sympathetic appreciation of the life just closed. The members of the Grand Army, the Relief Corps and the Sons of Veterans attended as organizations and every one connected with the city government was present. The flag at the city hall was unfurled at half-mast in honor of the departed alderman. At the cemetery the beautiful and impressive ritual prescribed by the Sons of Veterans ritual was followed and the sons fired a parting salute over the grave of the brave old soldier. The attendance was large and the floral tributes many, testifying to esteem in which Mr. Wright was held by the people of Denison.

Mr. William Servoss has returned from Iowa City, where he has been working as a mason for many years, and will assist his father on a number of brick laying jobs he has to do. Will is a fine young man and his friends are glad that he will again reside in Denison.

Mr. John Way, who has been confined to the house is able to be down town again this week. A young horse tried to run away with Mr. Way in the carriage down Main street Tuesday afternoon, but he is no green hand at handling a horse and the run did not amount to much, although the bystanders became much excited.

In another column we publish the notice of incorporation of the East Boyer Telephone Co. The Review feels quite pleased that the incorporators selected the Review as the paper of their choice for the publication. Opinions vary as to the future of the new company. The old-timers predict failure but the old time ways the best judges in such matters.
