

THE CENSUS MAN WILL GET YOU

UNCLE SAM WANTS TO KNOW JUST HOW BIG HE IS

WILL ASK MANY QUESTIONS

The Value of Farms, Farm Equipment and of Live Stock, will be Subjects of Inquiry.

Some people have a slightly erroneous impression as to the main purpose of the decennial Governmental census. They appear to think the main feature is discovering how many people there are in the country. Of course, this is an important phase of the enumeration, but it is less important by far, than the statistics obtained at the same time by the enumerators.

Uncle Sam wants to know what the farmers have accomplished during the preceding decade; what the manufacturers and other industries have accomplished. These facts are of great value in many ways, and justify the large expenditure of money to obtain them.

This county is devoted almost wholly to agriculture and stockraising. There is little, if any manufacturing of consequence within our borders, consequently the farmer is the man Uncle Sam is chiefly interested in, in this county.

In order that our farmers may have an idea what questions will be asked them next April, and thus be prepared to answer them, we publish herewith some of the facts the enumerators will seek to gather. It might be a good idea to save the list for future reference:

1. Total value of farm, with all buildings and improvements.
2. Value of buildings.
3. Value of all improvements and machinery, including tools, wagons, carriages, harness etc., and all appliances and apparatus used in farming operations.

Number and value of domestic animals, classified as follows:

Cattle.

A. Born before January 1, 1909. Cows and heifers kept for milk. Cows and heifers not kept for milk. Steers and bulls kept for work. Steers and bulls not kept for work.

B. Born in 1909; Heifers, steers and bulls.

C. Calves born in 1910.

Horses.

All horses born before January 1, 1909. Colts born before January 1, 1909. Colts born after January 1, 1910.

Mules.

All mules born before January 1, 1909. Mule colts born after January 1, 1909. Mule colts born after January 1, 1910. Asses and burros (all ages.)

Swine.

Hogs born before January 1, 1910. Pigs born after January 1, 1910.

Sheep.

Ewes born before January 1, 1910. Rams and wethers born before January 1, 1910. Lambs born after January 1, 1910. Goats and kids (all ages).

5. Number and value of poultry over 3 months old: Chickens, ducks, geese, turkeys, guinea fowls, pigeons.

6. Number and value of swarms of bees.

The census will not ask the value of household goods, nor that of hay, grain or other farm crops on hand on April 15. These items should be included, however, by all desiring a complete inventory of their farm property.

The value given to the farm should be, as nearly as can be judged, the amount that could be obtained for it if offered for sale under normal conditions. Current market prices should be carefully considered in estimating the value live stock.

The advantages of always having on hand for ready reference a detailed written statement of one's farm property are readily understood by everyone and will be most keenly appreciated when the census enumerator calls with his list of questions next April. The value of the census figures of farm wealth depends upon their accuracy, and accuracy can only be secured through the co-operation of the farmers themselves. In no way can the farmer extend more practical assistance to the census bureau, and in no way can he render himself a greater service than by getting out pencil and note book on the evening of April 14, next, and making up a statement of his farm property."

Dec. 19. Review of Lessons of Last Quarter.

The lessons of the past quarter have been of intense interest. There was a story of adventure about the Apostle Paul which was easy to tell about, and held the attention of the children. As the lessons gave an account of the later life of Paul, they were of much importance. When called to mind, all will remember of the exciting scenes in Jerusalem when Paul was in the temple worshipping God, and certain Jews raised the cry that he was profaning the sacred place by bringing in those not of the Jewish faith. There was a great uproar and Paul might have been killed then and there if the Roman officer had not come to the rescue. It will be remembered how Paul turned on the mob following him and in the Hebrew language made a defense, standing near the door of the fortress. Soon he was given a hearing before the Sanhedrin or high Jewish council and this broke up in a quarrel between his judges. He was saved from a plot to kill him made by certain Jews by the prompt action of a boy, his nephew. To save him, the Roman officer sent Paul to Caesarea by night.

It was at Caesarea that Paul had his first trial before the Roman governor, Felix. When asked to speak for himself he proved more than a match for the lawyer employed to prosecute him. It was when before Felix that Paul said that he so regulated his life as to always have a conscience void of offense toward God and man. When considering the lesson attention was called to the fact that everyone ought to live in that way and that if this was done, happiness on earth and in heaven was assured. Paul had a further trial, and this time before another Roman governor named Festus and a Jewish king named Agrippa. It was then he gave the great address which made the judges tremble. The golden text for that lesson was taken from 2 Tim. where Paul said he knew whom he had believed, and felt that God would keep him until the end.

Paul appealed to the courts at Rome and so was taken there a prisoner. On the way he encountered the shipwreck which is so graphically told of in the bible. Paul, although a prisoner in chains became the chief man on the ship during a fearful storm and showed the heathens in the ship that he was a follower of the true God who would protect those who put their trust in Him. The inability of a venomous snake to harm Paul will be remembered, also his triumph in winning the people on the island to him. Then followed his continued imprisonment at Rome and his death as a Christian martyr.

No one could read these lessons without being impressed with the greatness of Paul. His advice to abstain from doing anything which will make one's brother fall in bad ways was seen to be the strongest possible reason why a Christian should be a total abstainer from intoxicating liquors. His talk as to giving to the church were well worth heeding. His words of triumph and confidence of having a crown of reward were considered last week. Paul was one of the greatest men of history. Every christian is proud of him. His epistles contain the meat of the gospel of Jesus, and will live forever. Next year we will consider the life of Jesus as recorded in Matthew, but let none forget or fail to often read the great writings of St. Paul.

Editor Review:

Enclosed you will find money order for three dollars to apply on our subscription to the Review, the one paper which we find it almost impossible to get along without. We expect our Review every Saturday as regular as we expect the day and are very much disappointed, if occasionally it fails to reach us on that day, as we hardly think we could get along without it in our North Dakota home. Wishing it the best of success, I am,

Yours Sincerely,
C. W. Riggelman.
